Nothing So Sure to "Set up" a Man Make Him Feel Brisk and Vigorous, as Dr. Hamilton's Pills

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens in Woodstock.

In his convincing letter Mr. Stephens says:

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches, dizziness, that I despaired of ever getting well.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dullness, languor and feeling of depression passed away, and I just regained my old time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

For health, strength, comfort and good spirits, there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Toronto Architect Here

The architect in charge of the National Hotel improvements, Mr. Geo. M. Miller of Toronto spent yesterday morning with Mr. Harry Winch, who acts for the Chamberlain estate, in looking over the premises.

Murray Street Church.

The annual business meeting of Murray street Baptist church was held last night. A very satisfactory business statement was presented, showing that this beautiful and popular church is steadily increasing, and the present pastor is well established in public opinion.

A Local "At-Home."

The Misses Hill of 607 Bethune street, held a largely attended at-home yesterday afternoon in honor of their guest, Miss Irene Drummond, of Montreal. Those assisting were the Misses Ruth Robertson, Phillipa Dale, Fanny and Dorothy Hill.

Attended the Funeral

Among those who attended the funeral of the late Senator Cox in Toronto Monday, were His Worship Mayor Buller, Alderman Duncan, Dalton, Johnston, Rev. Mr. Mansell, Mr. D. W. Dumble, Dr. Morrison, Mr. R. J. Sodon and Mr. Morphet.

A Good Street Car Service

Notwithstanding the unusually heavy snowfall and drifting of Tuesday night there was no delay yesterday in connection with the local street car service. The snow sweeper was kept going all night until six o'clock yesterday morning. This shows great efficiency on the part of the management.

Former Local Man Home

Mr. Dan McCabe, the one armed twirler who was formerly with the Peterborough baseball club, has returned from Edmonton where, for some months he operated the Rose poolroom. Dan will remain in Peterborough. He told The Times yesterday that things are almost dead at Edmonton.

Annual S. A. Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Temple Band with the banquet for the bandsmen and their wives, was held in the Temple Hall on Tuesday evening. A most enjoyable repast was provided by the ladies, after which speeches were made by Adjutant McElhoney, Bandmaster Purser, Band Sergeant Brown and Band Secretary Hensley, Bandmaster Richardson and others.

A Fine New Restaurant.

A new departure in catering to the public of Peterborough is to be inaugurated by the "Canada Hot Fish Restaurant," at 305 George street. In this big new restaurant quick and efficient service will be the motto. The new restaurant will make a feature of delivering cooked goods to all parts of the city. Everyone will wish this enterprising restaurant a speedy and lasting success.

National Hotel Tenders Let.

Yesterday afternoon, with Mr. Geo. Miller, the Toronto architect, and Mr. H. Winch, representing the Chamberlain Estate present, part of the tenders for the National Hotel improvements were let. Messrs. Ephgrave & Barrett get the masonry and carpenter work. Mr. Saxby gets the plastering and Ald. Duncan the painting. Possibly the biggest tender of all is the plumbing which has not yet been let.

A Chamberlain Street Kick.

Residents living on the north side of Chamberlain street yesterday complained to The Times that the snow ploughs did not pass on their side of that thoroughfare until 9 o'clock in the morning. These residents realizing that many of the George street properties are very much under-assessed naturally complain, as taxpayers, of the neglect referred to. They ask us why was the south side of that street cleared off and the north side neglected?

He Desisted.

Yesterday a prominent Toronto manufacturer was in the city and stopped at a local hotel. This manufacturer evidently did not realize the potency of Peterborough whisky. He got noisy and abusive. The clerk who is nothing if not precise in his language did not say "If you don't keep quiet, I'll give you a boot on the jaw." No. He simply remarked: "Mr. ——, if you do not desist I shall be impelled to do you an injury." The Toronto man desisted.

Is Davey Brown Turned Down?

Hamilton Herald: Davey Brown, manager of last year's Peterborough Club, is out of a job. He was at yesterday's meeting, but was not approached by either Delegates Dunlop or Carr, the Peterborough representatives. Davey would like to come to Hamilton. The reason attributed for the Peterborough Club not seeking him again is that they believed him to be sick just now, but he has come round again and would be a handy man to have around.

John McClay Up on Saturday.

The case of John McClay charged with administering drugs to Margaret Kinsdale for the purpose of abortion, was given a short hearing yesterday afternoon by Judge Huycke. Mr. Jos. Wearing, B.A., conducted the prosecution, while V. J. McElderry defended the prisoner, who was committed for trial last Tuesday by Magistrate Dumble. A writ for $1,500 is also issued against the prisoner for alleged seduction and debauchery. The case was enlarged until Saturday afternoon.

Pair Committed for Trial.

Todor Minkoff and Petar Minkoff, two Bulgarians, were committed for trial by County Magistrate Edmison yesterday afternoon on the charge of theft of a quantity of C.P.R. tools and blankets, at Havelock. Mr. Jos. Wearing represented the Crown, while Detective [illegible] of Toronto, gave evidence of the theft. The detective said he found a blanket belonging to the C.P.R. and an emergency kit of tools taken from a locked C.P.R. car on the prisoners' beds. The two were committed for trial.

Good Deputation Satisfied.

Mayor Buller on his return from Ottawa, where he went with a deputation to advance the claims of Mr. Kendry for a vacant Senatorship, yesterday said that Mr. Borden received them very cordially and promised to give the matters careful consideration. The deputation were satisfied that the claims of the city would be considered to, and that Mr. Kendry would be favorably considered for the Senatorship. The deputation also visited the Government Agricultural Department, with the view of proposing the establishment of a Government Agricultural farm near Peterborough for educational purposes.

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and cemetery.

IF CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little ones becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; the children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

BURLEIGH AND ANSTRUTHER COUNCIL

Minutes of the first meeting of the Municipal Council of the united townships of Burleigh and Anstruther, held in the town hall, Apsley, Monday, January 12th, 1914.

The clerk reported that Norman Lean had been elected reeve, and Geo. Mathews, W. C. Stone, B. F. Coones and Almond Harris, councillors; all of whom, except Mr. Harris, took the required declaration of qualifications and office.

Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

Communications from Dr. L. E. Shephard, of Wilberforce, requesting information regarding Apsley as a likely place for a doctor; from Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, soliciting a grant towards that institution.

Application from several ratepayers in the Northern section of Anstruther for a new school section in that locality.

By-law No. 161 appointing auditors for the year 1914, received its several readings was passed, sealed and signed by the reeve and clerk.

By-law No. 162 to appoint an assessor for the year 1914, received its first and second reading when it was moved by Cos. Stone and Coones—that Isaac Lean be reappointed assessor, and the By-law was read a third time and passed, sealed and signed by the reeve and clerk.

A by-law, No. 163, appointing Mr. Z. Tucker, a member of the B.O.H. for the ensuing three years, received its several readings, was passed, sealed and signed by the reeve and clerk.

Moved by Cos. Coones and Mathews—that Jas. McIlvena and D. Brown by auditors for the year 1914. Mr. Brown declined to act, and Mrs. J. C. Stone was appointed and motion carried.

Moved by Cos. Coones and Stone—that application for a new school section be laid over for investigation.—Carried.

Moved by Cos. Mathews and Coones—that the sum of $5 be granted to the hospital for sick children.—Carried.

Moved Cos. Mathews, seconded by Co. Coones—that the government officials be notified that this municipality will accept the sum offered by the government of $50, to build a bridge over Sucker Creek on the Jack's Lake road, providing the government guarantee that the dam on Jack's Lake will not be raised any higher than it is at the present time, but if it should be raised any, up to 15 inches, then the government will be required to pay one hundred dollars for the building of said bridge.—Carried.

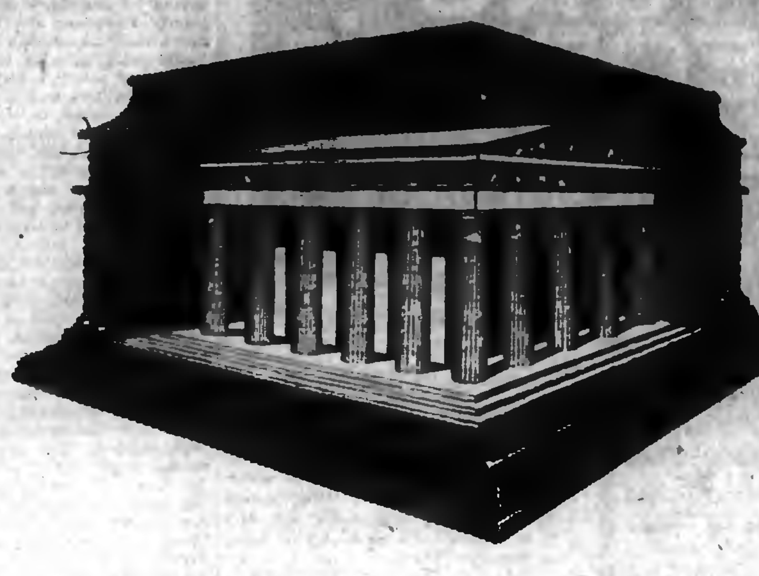
Moved by Cos. Stone and Coones—that the minutes of Council meetings be printed in the Peterborough Times.—Carried.

Moved by Cos. Mathews and Coones—that the time for returning the collector's roll be extended until the next meeting of the Council.—Carried.

Moved by Cos. Coones and Mathews—that Wm. Gallen be re-appointed clerk for the year 1914.—Carried.

Moved by Cos. Coones and Stone—that the contract for the municipal printing be given to the Peterborough Times on the same terms as before.

Moved by Cos. Mathews and Stone—that following accounts be paid: J. C. Stone, D.R.O., $6.50; C. R. D. Booth, D.R.O., $6; A. McCall, D.R.O., $6; C. R. D. Booth, attending two sittings of Division Court, $4; Wm. McCauley, rent of room, Jan. 5th, $2; Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, $5; D. Brown, telephone, 80c.; Norman Wilson, statute labor, $12.—Carried.



Your Temple of Music

The unmatched beauty of the Greeks' early temples has been the inspiration of architects for 2000 years. But their music is gone—forgotten. No genius can "restore" it as we do the crumbling columns of her Acropolis.

We have caught the spirit of their art, however, in the design of the modern temple of music—the Grafonola.

The Favorite, for instance, embodies the same principles of proportion and contour, and as an example of cabinet-making pays the same tribute to modern music as the architecture of the Greek temples did to ancient music. Grafonola music is worthy of this tribute.

You can put this modern Temple of Music with its inexhaustible repertoire in your own home for as little as $20.00.

You pay for it in convenient monthly amounts, whether you purchase the Grand at $650 or a lower priced instrument.

FINANCE MINISTER IN MASTERLY ADDRESS SHOWS CANADA TO HAVE PASSED WORST STAGE

"The Morning Light is Breaking," Says Hon. W. T. White Before Commons—Sir Wilfrid Told He Made Mistakes

Conditions Now Not Less Hopeful Than at Any Time Facing Canada

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Hon. W. T. White was still being congratulated to-day on his speech of Tuesday. Now that it has appeared in Hansard and the members have had an opportunity to read and re-read it, and digest it, they are realising that it is an exceedingly exhaustive presentation of the economic argument against "free food," and that it is an able review of the financial and business situation and outlook. Some Liberal delusions and mis-statements of facts which had been so often repeated they had become almost believed by the adherents were thoroughly shattered, as, for instance, the frequently told story that the debt was rapidly increasing, while it decreased under the Liberal regime. He showed that during the last four years of Laurier rule the debt actually increased $76,000,000, while since the Borden Government came into power the net debt has actually decreased $12,000,000.

Mr. White met the "free food" policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, over which by the way, the Opposition leader skated lightly on Monday, fairly and squarely. He exposed in a well reasoned out argument the real nature of the proposals which the Liberal leader advanced at Hamilton and Montreal.

A Reversal of Policy.

"My own view is that free food leads free trade," said the Finance Minister. "I believe that it involves a reversal of the policy [illegible] by the late Administration and by the Administration which preceded it. This Government believes in a reasonable protection where needed in order that industries may be built up. This should include not only manufacturing industries but also the farming industry. From time to time there will be changing conditions to meet, but to consider downward revision in a year of slack trade would only dislocate the industry of the country, and, so far as I know, there is no public opinion in favor of general revision at this time."

A World-Wide Condition.

Mr. White dealt at length with the cost of living, showing that it was a world-wide condition, not confined to Canada, the solution of which in this country was to be found principally, was but a reincarnation of reciprocity in increased production. Free food which the people of Canada had decisively pronounced against in 1911.

Mr. White showed by quoting statistics of Australia, New Zealand and [illegible] that there was an under-production [illegible] stock. In Canada the number of cattle per head was a fraction of the population. In Australia and New Zealand this number of cattle was two per head and of sheep twenty.

Hoist by Own Petard.

The Finance Minister effectively replied to the statement of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that "during the fifteen years of our Administration you never heard a word against the cost of living."

A New Combination

It is said that a movement is on foot to incorporate Y.M.C.A. throughout the continent as the sporting branch of The Christian Church Amalgamated Union. The system of contribution and charity upon which they have subsisted in the past prevented Y.M.C.A. athletes taking that foremost place which would reflect credit on their Christian training. A young man can put up, it is urged, just as good a prayer on organized lines as on unorganized. This fact is now being recognized.

COMPENSATION FOR RAILWAY EMPLOYES

This Will Be Independent of the Provincial Compensation Measures.

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 22.—Representatives of organized labor throughout the Dominion will press the Government this session for a number of amendments to the Railway Act and the Industrial Disputes Act.

It is learned, however, that one of the most important amendments to the Railway Act to be sought will be the insertion of a clause dealing with the matter of compensation. The idea is to provide some system of automatic compensation for all employes of railways injured during the performance of their duties as well as a fixed compensation for the widows and families of the men killed.

It is not within the power of the Federal Government to pass a Workmen's Compensation Act, that being a matter which comes within the jurisdiction of the Provinces. The representatives of the railway employes are of the opinion, however, that compulsory compensation can be provided by an amendment to the Railway Act.

A new Conservative daily newspaper may be established at St. Catharines.

WHO SUCCEEDS STRATHCONA IS NOW GREAT QUESTION

Personalities and Wealth are the Prime Requisites For the London Post

Toronto, Jan. 22.—Possible successors to Lord Strathcona as Canadian High Commissioner:

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden.
Hon. G. H. Perley.
Hon. Robert Rogers.
Hon. J. D. Hazen.
Hon. Adam Beck.
Sir Hugh Graham.
Sir Edmund Osler.
Sir Edmund Walker.
Hon. Clifford Sifton.
Sir Richard McBride

Who is to succeed Lord Strathcona? This question flutters the hearts of hundreds of Canadian women whose husbands are in public life. The social world at Ottawa and the political world in London are both interested, the latter because the question of Imperial relations with Canada may be affected by the appointment. At such a time any one may be named, but a list of the most prominent possible, together with brief particulars of their respective qualifications, is [illegible].

Personality and Wealth.

The first two requirements are personality and wealth. Personality includes a great deal, birth, education, experience, appearance, discretion, tact. After that the legislation of 1880 defines the commissioners' duties in a few vague sentences. Under the Act, the office-holder is required: To "act as representative agent of Canada in the United Kingdom, and in that capacity execute such powers and perform such duties as are, from time to time, conferred upon and assigned to him by the Governor-in-Council."

To "take charge, supervision, and control of the immigration offices and agencies in the United Kingdom under the Minister of Agriculture."

Judge to Hear Argument on Reid-Aull Action in Private.

Toronto, Jan. 22.—When Mr. Justice Latchford returns from the south he will hear arguments on the motion to try in camera (behind closed doors) the action annulling the marriage of Dosia Reid of Toronto and Robert Aull, Jr., of St. Louis, at Cobourg.

When the application came before his Lordship originally, Aull's counsel said he had not been instructed by his client and the hearing was adjourned.

The applicant in the present instance is the plaintiff.

J. A. Turnbull has been succeeded by J. B. Bell as general manager of the Bank of Hamilton.

CAN WAR BE ENDED? IS SUBJECT TO-NIGHT

A most interesting and instructive lecture is to be given this evening in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, under the auspices of the Womens' Teachers' Guild.

The speaker of the evening will be Professor Oscar Skelton, who is a Master of Arts of Queen's University, Kingston, and a Doctor of Philosophy, Chicago. This talented speaker will take as his subject this evening, "Can War be Ended?" In view of the recent Balkan War, this lecture will not only be apropos but intensely interesting.

Prof. Skelton has earned laurels in the Universities of three countries and is a most pleasing speaker.

CHARMING MUSICALE WAS HELD YESTERDAY

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Morning Musicale was held at the home of Miss Robertson, Water street yesterday morning, when the following programme was presented:

Paper—Tchaikovsky, Mrs. Frederick.
Piano Solo—Polish Dance, Miss F. Gladman.
Solo—Mrs. Allan.
Piano Solo—Mrs. Gilman.
Piano Solo—Mrs. Porter.
Violin Solo—Mrs. Tomlinson; Mrs. Gilman, accompanist.
Piano Solo—Miss Jean Hill.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday, Feb. 5th, at the residence of Miss Morrow, Weller street, when Wagner will be the composer studied.

BRITAIN MAY HIDE STORY OF SUBMARINE DISASTER

Admiralty Has Ordered That When Sunken Boat is Raised It is to Be Opened in Private

Plymouth, Jan. 22.—While not even their most sanguine relatives have the slightest hope that any of the eleven men buried at sea in the submarine A7 may be alive, their fate will not be officially known until the recovered vessel is placed in drydock.

The Admiralty to-day gave orders, when the work of raising the submarine was undertaken, that no attempt to open her should be made until she is safe in naval drydock, away from the public gaze.

Thus the details of the thrilling, hopeless, twelve-hour fight for life beneath the immeasurable tons of water will not be known for some time yet, perhaps never, if the British Admiralty discovers a state of affairs it thinks best to be kept from the public.

The work was watched by a large crowd on shore, but none was allowed to come near the scene. All night two destroyers guarded the spot above the sunken submarine, warning off boats.

The destroyer Earnest discovered the A7 through a patch of oil on the surface.

POLICE AND GUNMEN WAGE BLOODY WAR

Six Desperadoes Beat-Up Saloon-Keeper, Robbed Cash Register—Fled.

New York, Jan. 22.—While police and detectives scoured all the dens of the East Side for "Gyp the Blood," sought for the murder of Thomas Murphy, and alleged "squealer" in the Tub of Blood saloon, six other gunmen early to-day fought another skirmish in the war of extermination on here between the police and the gangsters of whom "Dopey Benny" Fein is a chief.

Shifting their operations from the lower East Side, six gunmen attacked the Brooklyn saloon of Felix Scheroff [illegible] him into unconsciousness before the eyes of his little daughter, robbed his cash register of $60 and fled. They ran a block to the saloon of Edward McDonald, knocked down and beat him when refused admittance, and were breaking in the door of the place when shrilling police whistles and the sound of running feet warned them of the police approach.

Gang Rounded Up.

In a Tallman street tenement house the band was rounded up, run to earth, a cordon of police with drawn pistols was thrown about the building and four of the gunmen were captured after several shots had been fired. The other two gunmen fled over the roofs and escaped.

Determined to aid the police as far as may be in the gangster's war, Judge Crain, in General Sessions Court, sentenced "[illegible]" Roth, a [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] years [illegible] months to [illegible] years and [illegible] months in Sing Sing.

WILSON'S SCHEME PRAISED IN DONDON

All Papers are Not Agreed in This View Re-Anti-Trust Legislation

London, Jan. 22.—The British press to-day was somewhat divided in its comments on President Wilson's message regarding anti-trust legislation. Some editorial extracts follow:

Evening Standard: President Wilson is justified in anticipating the success of the schemes.

Pall Mall Gazette: President Wilson is deeply mistaken. No power can make men fight each other who have resolved not to fight.

Times: Perhaps the most significant feature of President Wilson's message is its undertone of friendliness and sympathy with the big business interests.

Morning Post: The university professor is proving himself a practical politician of the highest calibre.

Cover The Whole Field

An advertisement in The Times is guaranteed to reach regularly 98 per cent. of the houses of Peterborough. Sworn statement furnished of proof of this if required.

Business men are also reminded that The Times is the only paper that reaches those served by the Rural Mail Routes on the day of issue. As a result it gets the call.

The advertisers will therefore know that by using The Times for their business announcements, they not only reach the WHOLE population of this city of 21,000 people, but a large proportion of those residing within a twenty-mile radius of the city. These are the people who have the money to pay for what they want.

ONLY ONE APPLICATION AND THE HAIRS ARE GONE

(Aids to Beauty)

Here a simple, yet very effective, treatment for superfluous hairs: With water, mix into a stiff paste enough powdered delatone to cover the objectionable hairs. Apply and let remain 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off and with it comes every bit of hair. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and even a stubborn growth yield to the first application. The success of this treatment, of course, depends upon getting real delatone.

NEW YORKER SAYS HE KILLED MARTIN, TORONTO MILLINER

Harry Schaefer Walked Into New York Police Station and Surrendered

New York, Jan. 22.—Henry Schaefer, aged 20, of Long Island City, a waiter and ironworker, has confessed to playing a part in the murder of Wm. G. Martin, the Toronto milliner who was done to death in his lodgings on the evening of Aug. 13 in this city. He placed the blame on his alleged accomplice, Sarago.

Schaefer said he met Martin outside a restaurant. "I made a date with him for eight o'clock that night, and then I went to tell my room-mate, Jack Sarago, about it. We agreed that the man would be easy picking, that Sarago declared himself in on the job. He took off his shoes and hid in the closet of our room. Then I went and got Martin.

"I saw that the milliner was wearing a valuable gold watch, chain and locket, and that he had two diamond rings. At a signal Sarago sprang out of the closet and tackled our man, gripping him by the throat for fear of an outcry.

Didn't Know He Was Dead.

"In the fight, Martin fell to the floor, striking on the back of his head. He was unconscious when we picked him up. We carried him into the bedroom, gagged him, and bound his legs together, so we would have lots of time for our getaway. We didn't have the least notion that he was dead."

Schaefer said that with the valuables he and his accomplice took $6 from their victim. Then they fled from the city, going first to Baltimore and then to St. Louis and other points west. In these cities they pawned the jewelry. They quarrelled in Denver, and that was the last Schaefer heard of his partner, he said. He went later to New Orleans and thence to Buenos Ayres.

He was constantly a prey to his conscience, he said, after learning that Martin had been killed, and determined to work his way back and make a clean breast of it.

BANKER IS ON TRIAL FOR MAN SLAUGHTER

Toronto, Jan. 22.—Frank Nicolletti, the Italian banker, pleaded not guilty to-day when arraigned before Justice Britton and a jury in the Assize Court charged with manslaughter. He was defended by W. G. Thurston, K.C., and Mr. I. Hellmuth, K.C. The case is the result of a midnight automobile collision with a truck on College street July 21, in which George D'Alessandro, one of the occupants, was almost instantly killed.

John Bilton, driver of the truck, testified that the first he knew of the accident was when the auto crashed into the truck.

John Maroney, one of the passengers in the car, said that he met Nicolletti and D'Alessandro at the Italian Club about 12 o'clock, and that they had been playing cards and had taken a few drinks. He had heard Williams and D'Alessandro say "Look-out!" and the next thing he knew he was on the ground.

"As a matter of fact, you and the rest of the passengers were not asked by Nicolletti to get into the car, but just planted yourselves there?" asked Mr. Hellmuth.

The witness admitted that this was so.

Constables Reynolds said the automobile was travelling about 23 miles an hour. "The prisoner was the first man I got out. He was intoxicated and in no condition to drive the car."

Dr. Strathy, of College street, stated that he was awakened by the passing of the truck and heard the crash shortly after. The main thing that he had noticed was that the prisoner did not seem to appreciate the seriousness of the situation.

Constable Nelson was standing at College and Elizabeth streets, said: "Nicolletti was making a boisterous noise and said the whole thing was a joke."

"I arrested Nicolletti for being drunk," he said, "and when I took him to No. 3 police station he was so noisy he had to be put in a private cell."

A. W. Dawson, councillor of the newly incorporated town of Ojibway, is dead.

Chew Food Thoroughly

In these days of soft, mushy foods and quick meals, insufficient mastication of food is often responsible for stomach trouble, headache, biliousness, constipation, dull thinking and various other ills.

Generally these troublesome results can be avoided or corrected by having a regular daily ration of

Grape-Nuts FOOD

The firm, crisp granules, with cream on the side, invite thorough chewing which is of double advantage. It promotes a even mixture of the food with the saliva—the first step in digestion. It also tends to normal development and preservation of the teeth.

Grape-Nuts food is made of whole wheat and malted barley. It contains all the rich nutriment of the grains, including the natural Phosphate of Potash so essential for strength of body and keenness of brain.

Grape-Nuts comes ready to eat direct from the package—has a delicious taste—and is easily digested.

But slowly—chew your food thoroughly!

A LEGAL DILEMMA

Tangle of Red Tape In an English Extradition Case.

GETTING AROUND THE LAW.

Only the Quick Wit of the Canadian Police Inspector Kept a Notorious Criminal In Custody When In Reality He Was as Free as the Air.

The manner in which a prisoner extradited to England from a foreign country is treated while on the voyage home depends very much on the detective who has him in charge and also on whether or no there is any suspicion that he may be contemplating violence either to himself or to others.

For instance, in the case of Jabez Balfour, who was taken to England all the way from Buenos Aires, there was a strong suspicion—probably ill founded—that he contemplated committing suicide. Consequently Inspector Froest, who had him in charge, decided to take no risks that he could possibly avoid.

The [illegible] do get [illegible] an unconvicted prisoner being [illegible] on board ship once the vessel has left port, and he must be allowed one hour's exercise on deck each day. These [illegible] they only be [illegible] were [illegible] not withheld from Balfour.

But he got few others. For twenty-three hours out of every twenty-four he was imprisoned in a locked cabin. He was not permitted even to enter the public dining room, his meals being brought to him by Mr. Froest himself after the rest of the passengers had fed. He was, besides, constantly watched and was subjected to a most rigorous search immediately on coming aboard.

His only relaxation was an occasional game of chess with some of the passengers who kindly came to his table to play with him by permission and in the presence of his keeper. This sea imprisonment lasted exactly one month and a day, and Balfour afterward declared that it was the most trying experience of a captivity that was destined to continue for nearly twelve years.

One of the longest and in its later stages one of the pleasantest voyages ever undertaken by an unconvicted criminal was that which Charles Hylton Davidson, the notorious forger, made some years back in the custody of Chief Inspector Murray of the Canadian department of justice.

Murray tracked the wanted man to Mexico and secured his extradition to Canada. But then his difficulties began. He could not bring his prisoner to Canada by the direct route through the United States, for immediately Davidson set foot in that country he could have demanded to be released. There was therefore nothing for it but to convey him by way of Jamaica and England and thence back across the Atlantic to Quebec.

On the voyage Murray kept Davidson under close observation, although allowing him considerably more freedom than Froest allowed Balfour. When, however, he had got safely as far as London he was both mortified and astonished at the likelihood of his having had all his trouble for nothing.

The law was, he was told, that a prisoner extradited from a foreign country to a British colony could not be kept in custody in England for longer than twenty-four hours, nor could he be taken as a prisoner on board a British ship sailing from a British port.

Here was a dilemma. Davidson was free as air—had he only known it. But Murray was equal to the occasion. "Look here, Davidson," he said. "I've got you safe. There is only the last stage of the journey to complete. If I allow you to travel saloon with me as an ordinary first class passenger will you give me your word to play me no tricks?"

To this proposition Davidson, knowing nothing of the real state of affairs, was naturally quite ready to agree. And so it came to pass that one of the most notorious criminals Canada has ever known came home in state; free, yet not free, a voluntary prisoner, and yet an involuntary one.—Pearson's Weekly.

THE WORLD TONGUE.

Hardly a Land in Which English Is Not Now Heard.

The traveler of today, unless he is going to Tibet or Tierra del Fuego, can get along very well with a knowledge of the English language. The farther he goes the more he is surprised at finding that English is really "the" world tongue. In France and Spain and Italy the American traveler is craftily "spotted." He is approached on the streets by those who would for a consideration make him feel quite at home. One of his chief worries is to escape the pests who can speak English and who wish to apprise him of the fact. They may not necessarily desire to mulct him. Sometimes they are seeking merely to "show off." At any rate, they classify distinctly as bores. One may go to Smyrna or Constantinople or Beirut and still find the streets plentifully full of English speaking unknowns. At Jerusalem he will be fairly flooded with English. He may penetrate even to Damascus, and he will find at least a befezzed hall porter who can converse glibly with him and any number of fiercely willing dragomans. He may go to Cairo, and in the shadow of the pyramids he will find blue gowned Bedouins speaking more than passable English. He may go hundreds of miles up the Nile and may be steered through the locks of the first cataract by frizzly haired Nubian boatmen who make insistent demands for backsheesh in very intelligible terms. He may wander donkey back to the tombs of the kings in the Sahara desert and be painfully disillusioned by a few words of concise information or explanation by some barefooted, dusky tent dweller.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

METEORIC DUST.

Bombards the Earth In an Invisible, Never Ending Shower.

Meteoric dust particles are infinitely finer than grains of sand. They have an interesting origin. Meteors or shooting stars have been bombarding the world from the beginning at a rate estimated at many thousands an hour, of which, however, an average of only five or six are visible to the naked eye in that time.

Owing to our protecting envelope of air few of these missiles reach us. In weight meteors vary from a few ounces to many pounds. Occasionally one is of sufficient dimensions to survive the passage of eighty to a hundred miles through an atmosphere increasing in density as the earth is approached.

The speed at which they enter the atmosphere, calculated at not less than thirty-five miles a second, generates such intense heat by friction that the iron, of which the meteor principally consists, is immediately reduced to an incandescent vapor, which is the luminous trail so frequently seen in the heavens on a clear night. The vapor rapidly cools and condenses in the form of these minute particles, which assume the spherical form, as does shot during its fall from the top of the tower.

Finally the little spheres are caught up by the winds and currents in the upper air and gradually descend in their millions in an invisible, never ending shower. The perfect condition in which these meteors are found is due to the presence of certain noncorrosive elements found by analysis to be present in the bodies of meteors which have fallen to earth.—Chicago Tribune.

Romance of a Shadow.

It is hard to believe that a shadow is probably the origin of all astronomical, geometrical and geographical science. The first man who fixed his staff perpendicularly in the ground and measured its shadow was the earliest computer of time, and the Arab of today who plants his spear in the sand and marks where the shadow falls is his direct descendant. It is from the shadow of a gnomon that the early Egyptians told the length of the year. It is from the shadow of a gnomon that the inhabitants of upper Egypt still measure the hours of work for a water wheel. In this case the gnomon is a dhurra stalk supported on forked uprights and points north and south. East and west are pegs in the ground evenly marking the space of earth between sunrise and sunset. In a land of constant sunshine a shadow was the primitive chronometer. It was also the primitive footrule.—London T. P.'s Weekly.

Men With Green Hair.

"Copper is scarce," said a broker, "but there is still enough of it left to turn the copper worker's hair green."

"His hair green?"

"Precisely. In those copper districts where the ore is of a low grade it is roasted in open furnaces to refine it and make it more marketable. A gas emanates from the furnaces that turns the firemen's hair a bright green, this arsenic green that the firemen's hair takes on.

"So if you ever see a man with green hair you can say, a la Sherlock Holmes:

"'There, my dear Watson, is a copper furnace tender.'"

The Tourist Center of the "Playground of Europe."

Lucerne, situated in the heart of Switzerland, stands, as it were, enshrined amid the grandest and most picturesque features of Alpine scenery and is, of course, the tourist center par excellence of the "Playground of Europe," three main lines of railway converging on the famous town beside the lake. Nor could nature, indeed, have well done more for "Lovely Lucerne," as all the world acclaims it (declares a writer in London Sketch). On one side stands the Rigi, on the other Pilatus (7,000 feet high), with between them the fair, shimmering expanse of the Lake of the Four Cantons and beyond it again a widespread panorama of the glaciers and snow peaked ranges of the Alps.

From the Rigi (6,000 feet), easily climbed by aid of its famous "mountain train," the view takes in the Bernina, Gothard, Unterwalden and Bernese Alps, stretching far and wide, from the Sentis in the east to the Blumlisalp in the west, and to northward the Jura mountains, the Black forest and the Vosges barrier between Frank and Teuton. From the Rigi some fourteen lakes are visible on a clear day, among them Sempach, by the shores of which was fought the famous battle where the Swiss won their freedom.

A Pathetic Incident of Life in an English Village.

"Opposite my home," writes a correspondent of the Westminster Gazette from an English village, "are two cottages which for some time stood empty. A few weeks ago two old people from whom the pauper disqualification had been removed came slowly up the long hill and with trembling fingers unlocked the door and entered. A piece of paper very soon appeared to act as a screen across the window. We saw very little of the old people, but there were signs of what was happening inside. Before long a little white curtain replaced the paper. After dark no light appeared in the cottage. It takes time to furnish with an old age pension. One night as I drew down my blind a gleam of light caught my attention from over the way, and the picture I saw will remain with me for long. There in the middle of the room was a lighted lamp, and the two old people, with clasped hands, stood gazing up at it in silent delight. They must have had more creature comforts in the workhouse, but there was no pride of possession there and they could not be together either. But the pathos of it—beginning life at seventy!"

Lots of Them.

"There is one thing which has rather puzzled me."

"What is that?"

"When money talks does it always talk cents?"—Baltimore American.

His Argument.

"Dear, I only play poker for fun."

"But you bet, don't you?"

"Well, there wouldn't be any fun without a little betting."—Pittsburg Post.

Patient waiting is often the highest way of doing God's will.—Collier.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvenney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of diseases. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulvenney. Write for further information free.

THE BOX-PLAITED BLOUSE WITH POCKETS AN APPROVED NOVELTY

The triple skirt has been voted unusually becoming, especially when it is fashioned of a light flimsy fabric or a clinging silk. Another very attractive feature of many of the new frocks is the surplice bodice. This is another revival and promises to rival its first appearance in popularity.

As printed chiffons, taffetas and light silks are to be generally fashionable the coming season, it is safe to predict that bordered materials will have a first place. They are so well suited to the two and three tiered skirts and the overblouse designs.

Number 8150 is developed in a bordered chiffon over charmeuse and is a charming afternoon or informal evening gown. For size 36 this costume requires 5⅜ yards of 36-inch material.

There is a strictly practical element in the fashions to-day despite their frills and flounces. What could be more convenient than a real pocket on each side of a blouse? The smart blouse which is here illustrated is new and decidedly smart. As shown in 8129, it is made of crêpe de Chine in white; the pockets and straps are stitched and the tie forms a point at the back of the collar which is effective. A skirt of dark blue duvetyn with a plaid tunic accompanies the blouse. This blouse may be copied in size 36 with 2⅜ yards of 36-inch material; the skirt (8145) requires for size 24, 4½ yards of 36-inch material or 3⅝ yds. of 42-inch material.

Number 8150—sizes 34 to 44.
Number 8129—sizes 32 to 44.
Number 8145—sizes 22 to 30.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

Our Point of View

Andrew Carnegie is quoted as saying that he is a poor man, but so to date nobody has seen him in the bread line.

◆

Poison bottles with bells attached are the latest convenience, but there does not seem to be any demand for an alarm on a whisky bottle.

◆

A Toronto hospital is in need of human skin for grafting purposes. It might apply to Premier Borden, who has been taking the hide off a great many crooked politicians.

◆

When a municipal candidate seeks votes among laboring men he should paste a piece of sandpaper to his palm in order to make them believe that he has callouses on his hands when he gives the candidatorial shake.

◆

Some of our friends who mounted the water wagon on New Year's Day are on it yet, but they are wearing a very thoughtful expression, and we are afraid that in a fit of absentmindedness they will slip off.

◆

In Philadelphia a surgical operation has been performed in which the only anaesthetic used was music, the tune being "The Highland Fling," and the patient said he did not feel the pain. Probably the tune was played on the bagpipes and one agony neutralized the other.

◆

The Times has been informed that the slogan of Peterborough's new council is "Work, not talk." That is good enough in theory, but if they do not do some talking the majority of people will not know that he is working. Publicity is a necessity these days.

DIVORCE.

More applications for divorce pour in as the date of the opening of Parliament approaches. That Canada is a divorceless country—a boast sometimes made—has become a huge joke. We have a divorce mill in Canada which will turn if the applicants possess money enough to stoke up the engine. But no poor man or woman need apply. Divorce is with us a luxury of the wealthy. It is granted by a committee of politicians. It becomes at times a matter of debate in the House of Commons which has neither seen the witnesses nor heard the argument. Its granting is not safeguarded either by a fixed law or the judicial atmosphere of a court. If there is a worse system in vogue anywhere, we do not know of it. We should either take the privilege of divorce from the rich or extend it as a matter of justice to the poor.

PLENTY OF IDEAS

Force of habit causes us to view the evil of war largely from the standpoint of cash outlay involved. The withdrawal of immense sums of money from circulation for purely destructive purposes is what first appeals to us, because it means that much less for use in the arts of peace. But should this be our chief consideration?

Statistics compiled since the Balkan war show that as a result of that conflict the male population of Macedonia was reduced from 175,000 to 48,500. In Thrace the reduction was from 494,000 to 225,000, while in the district of Mustapha Pasha the reduction was from 33,000 to 4,000.

One does not have to think long to realize how much more important this phase of the evil is than the mere loss for the time being of the cash needed ta continue the fighting. The potential value of these slaughtered men to the country aggregates a sum that is staggering. And what of the actual loss to the countries concerned through the permanent crippling of their powers of production as a result of such unnecessary wholesale butchery!

STRETCHING HANDS ACROSS THE SEA

Pathetic is the appeal that comes ro Canadian generosity from the Balkans. The ravages of war in that region have been frightful—unexampled by anything in recent history, and impossible to realize, except by one actually on the ground, or by the help of a very powerful imagination.

The aftermath of the war is more terrible than was the war itself. The soldier, with weapons in his hand, at least has some chance for self-protection. But the widows and orphans who are starving amid blackened ruins of what once were homes, the wretched wayfarers, wandering through devastated country, the maimed and mutilated human relics of battle and seige, are the most pitiful of any creatures on God's earth to-day.

The great, wealthy Canada of ours, has many charitable causes of its own to attend to, yet it has never failed to respond to such a cry of distant distress as rises from the Balkans. And it will not fail now.

Your Bad Taste in the Morning Is Due to Catarrh

DESTROY THE POISONOUS DISEASE BEFORE YOUR HEALTH IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Perhaps you haven't thought of calling those unpleasant symptoms that affected your nose and throat by any particular name — but it's Catarrh just the same.

When the attack is severe, your eyes are watery and look weak. Your breath is offensive, due to inflammation in the nose and throat.

At last science has discovered a real remedy, a new scientific marvel which acts like no other Catarrh remedy on earth. "Catarrhozone" operates on a new plan; it is a direct remedy, goes instantly to the source of the trouble. Its rich, fragrant essences and healing balsams are breathed in vapor form through a special inhaler and gives instant relief.

Catarrhozone doesn't stop at the relief stage—it goes further—keeps on going till a cure is affected. Bad cases are cured, as you can judge from the following letter:—"Every morning for six months last winter I awoke with a bad taste, an awful breath and stuffed up feeling in my nostrils," writes Rob E. Rutland, of Regina. "It was simply an awful case of chronic Catarrh. Relief first came from Catarrhozone. I used that inhaler twenty times a day and took it to bed with me at night. I am cured, and by the use of Catarrhozone stay well. Now I am free from that irritable throat trouble, coughs, colds, headache, or catarrh."

No medicine on earth is so certain to cure every form of Catarrh or throat trouble as "Catarrhozone." Get the large $1.00 size, lasts two months and is guaranteed; medium size 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

THE SNOW-PLOUGHING FAKE.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—This morning at half-past nine the snow plough had not shown up in certain districts and pedestrians had to plod through snow up to their knees. This is outrageous in a place the size of Peterborough to have citizens walking through snow a foot deep at this hour of the morning. What is the matter with our City Fathers that such a state of affairs should exist? Alderman Gordon, who represent us, appears to be devoting his time to his other interests and giving no time and attention to his public duties.

A POOR SYSTEM.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Do the Aldermen we elect here think we give them honor just to enable them to look pretty, raise the poor man's taxes and get a cinch on what may be going? On Wednesday morning after the heavy snowstorm of Tuesday night, the business part of the city had its pavements cleared of snow. Now, it is an almost open scandal that the business section of Peterborough is assessed in too many places ridiculously low. I know of the mansion of a rich man located on George street assessed at $2500, for which he would not todaw take $12,000. Within a stone's throw are two houses of equal value assessed at $4,000. The point I am trying to make is that the central portion of the city which is notoriously under-assessed gets all the conveniences whilst the poor man whose vote helps elect our council, and who lives in the outlying streets and is assessed for every cent his property is worth, gets no accommodation. Yesterday many outlying streets had four or five inches of snow on the pavements. It is true the contractors supposed to remove the snow had, during the preceding night, gone with their ploughs over these pavements. I would suggest that the aldermen ask for tenders for snow-shovelling, of course, outside the sacred precincts of under-assessed George street, to include the dragging by an Angora goat of a kitchen range shovel. Thus George street will be protected and the man who pays his share of taxation burden will have his mouth closed.

H. Charles.

LENGTHY VISITS

Mayon is the Most Famous and the Taal Comes Next

The most famous Philippine volcano and one of the finest volcano cones in the world is that of Mayon. Its height is 8,000 feet, and the volcano is visible at a great distance. Since 1766 records have been kept of its eruptions. In that year many plantations and villages were buried under a stream of lava which flowed down its eastern slope. About 1,200 lives were lost in the eruption of 1814, which buried the country around a part of the base of Mayon under the outpourings of lava and dust. A similar calamity in 1835 destroyed the lives of about 1,500 persons. In the nineteenth century there were a number of severe eruptions, including one in [illegible] which continued about nine months. An eruption in 1897 killed 350 persons and destroyed much property. Twenty-two violent eruptions of this volcano are on record.

Next to Mayon the Taal volcano is the most remarkable. It is on an island in the lake of Bombon, and the island, built up by its outpourings, has an area of [illegible] square miles. The volcano is incessantly ejecting dust and vapor from its crater. Taal as well as Mayon has been the center of numerous destructive earthquakes, but no very great eruption has occurred since 1911, when four villages around the mountain were completely destroyed.

Dancing Mice of China.

Scientific study of the so-called "dancing mice" seems to indicate that the breed was derived originally from the mating of individual mice which exhibited the strange impulse to dance. These mice were first bred in China. In that country today and also in Japan they are commonly kept in small cages, not for the sake of their dancing habit, but because they are extraordinarily agile and acrobatic. Such cages are usually provided with revolving wheels and other apparatus which the little rodents set in motion as they skip rapidly about. They are sometimes called "waltzing mice" because they not only run in circles, but frequently whirl about swiftly as if on a pivot. It is a very curious phenomenon, and there seems to be no certainty that it may not be due to a nervous complaint perpetuated by inheritance.

IRISH BROGUE

It is Really the Old Time Method of Pronouncing English

Perhaps nothing illustrates better the vicissitudes of pronunciation in English than a study of what is called the "Irish brogue." This lingual mode, for it is scarcely to be called a dialect, is usually presumed to be a deterioration of language due to lack of education and contact with legitimate sources of English. It proves after a little study to be a preservation of the old method of pronouncing English which has come down to a great degree unchanged in Ireland from Shakespeare's time.

In Elizabeth's time, however, it came to be realized that if there was to be any real affiliation of the two countries then the Irish language must be supplanted by English, and a definite effort in this direction was made. This change of speech, resented and resisted, was nevertheless successfully accomplished all over the island except in the west within a decade after Shakespeare's death. This fact brings us a new significance when we study what we now call the Irish brogue in connection with what is known to have been the pronunciation of English at that time. The two are found to conform in practically every respect. Irishmen pronounce English as their forefathers learned it and have preserved its pronunciation because they have been away from the main current of English speech variation ever since.—Harper's Magazine.

PRICE 100 and ACCRUED INTEREST

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,300,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,924
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred ...	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1906 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in du course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $8,809,737.32. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephone at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

DR. DAVID H. REEDER,

REAL MEDICINE vs. DEADLY DRUGS:—The pendulum of the clock swings back and forth. Its movements measure what we call time. The pendulum of human actions, fancies or beliefs swing to and fro, action and reaction.

The history of medicine, to the close observer shows that the medical profession has always been slow to give up certain methods of treatment, no matter how erroneous time may prove such methods to have been. Reforms in practical and safe methods of treatment have nearly always been led by clear-headed, far-sighted, deep-thinking laymen, the kind that are called cranks or fadists. They get their first information from the physician. As a rule they are sufferers and happen to go go to the right doctor who tells them the truth about their condition and the safe means of home cure. They apply the means with their natural enthusiasm are cured and at once become a missionary, preaching the gospel of truth by the same road that restored them. We call them cranks and fadists because the same method that cured Hiram of Rheumatism will not always cure a Bunion, nore a sore throat in the case of Mary Ann. Those who do find really helpful things and advocate them strongly are nearly always persecuted more or less and usually by the people who should give them the greatest aid.

Old Doctor Samuel Thompson of New Hampshire, the blacksmith, botanist, was practically the father of non-poisonous herb medicines and for the great pains he took and the many cures that were wrought under his treatment, he was arrested time after time by men who styled themselves the legal practitioners of medicine and could bleed a man to death or give him a deadly poison without fear of the law. In our day such men as Bernarr McFadden, Eugene Christian and many other advocates of drugless healing have had to defend themselves in the courts.

For a number of years the pendulum of practice was in favor of the deadly poisons, opiates, narcotics, coal tar preparations and their kindred. Along with these came surgery and there seemed for a time to be a perfect carnival of gore, each surgeon trying to outdo the others in the number and daring of his operations. According to the usual reports the operation was highly successful, but the patient very inconsiderate of the doctors feelings in the matter, died of shock.

Properly selected foods, (and as foods I class all the herbs that are used in the treatment of diseases) properly eaten, together with hydro-therapy, exercise, massage, osteopathy, fresh air, sunshine and a reasonable sanitation about the home will do more for the sick than all the poisons, opiates, narcotics and coal tar preparations ever compounded by the most skillful chemist in the world.

After a person has been pronounced "cured" by these means they turn, as a rule to those of us who love mother nature and they try to follow her laws. The hardest part of our task is to get those foreign elements out of the system after which the original cause of the suffering can usually be removed, then nature does the curing.

Your body is made out of the food you eat. If you are not well you arenot eating wisely or well. There are, to be sure, many mechanical causes for ill health, but not so many as some surgeons would have us believe. Get in line with the Home Health Club, nature, good health and happy homes.

CLUB NOTES

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5030 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor—I received your last letter and as it is now a month since I started with the exercises, I wish to now let you know how I am getting along.

The Goitre does not grow smaller very fast, but I feel much better in my throat. I can now draw my body up so that I have my chin over the bar. My neck does not burn so very much, so I can easily apply the external treatment. I have taken treatment for the Goitre before, of two doctors, but withot permanent help, but I hope that this is the right treatment.

Not long ago I read that someone wanted a cure for Rickets. It was a child of three years who suffered. I know of a treatment which is better than medicine, and think it is better than anything else. I cured my oldest son with it. He was so weak and sick, had attacks every day; I tried doctors for him, but he did not get better before my mother told me of this, and then the attacks disappeared immediately afterwards and he became well and strong. People wondered over that he could become so well, when he had been so weak before. When I was a child I had Rickets, also my brother. My mother cured us both with this treatment.

Make a very hard dough of about one-half cup syrup and wheat flour, then have a tub ready for bath; take two handfuls of coarse rye flour, and two handfuls of salt, and put it in the bath; then lay a piece of white cloth over the tub and place the child in the same. First, bathe the child a little with the water, but not the head; then take the hard dough in the hands, wet it in the bath water, and spread it over the whole body, as if it were soap and water. Something will then come out of the pores, something sharp, resembling points. They will mostly appear on the back, chest and shoulders. You should not try to wash off the points, but have a woollen blanket, take up the child and roll him in the same, without drying him at all. Let the child lay wrapped in the blanket and sleep, when he will sweat a great deal. The treatment should be repeated every other day, or twice a week, until there will be nothing coming out of the pores.—Mrs. E.

It was hardly to be expected that any great improvement would take place at this early date from the goitre treatment, still I have already found the exercises beneficial and the longer you continue, the better the results will be. There is no way of overcoming a goitre at once. In most cases it takes a good many months before they will yield to treatment. Tissue foods internally are often of great help, as I referred to in my first letter.

Your home treatment for Rickets may be easily tried by any one and as it certainly does not seem in any way to be harmful, I do not hesitate publishing it. Personally I have the greatest faith in the tissue foods for internal use in cases of Rickets and the great success which has followed their use in every case of that kind that has been brought to my knowledge, is evidence of their value.

Thos. Jobin says:

"Please use my name for reference. Send copies of my letter to everyone in Canada, as everybody should and must know of this cure, which you have for kidney trouble. I could write all day, and then would not have told you all I think about Sanol."

LOST THE BET

One on the Arkansas Man Who Knew All Pests.

A St. Louisan who makes a specialty of Ozark stories tells this one of an old colonel who went down into Arkansas a great deal when the railroads were building through there to Texas.

He was not a sweet tempered man, and what he thought of Arkansas he was not soft to remark. One day he was particularly abusing the state, its mosquitoes, bugs and myriad pests. It was a little too strong for the natives, and one of them retorted:

"Don't see why yuh cain't stand it. We live down hyar all right."

"Do you call it livin' down here all right to set around an' slap bugs all day?" the colonel retorted.

"Don't slap bugs all day," the native answered.

"Yes, you do too. I'll bet $5 you can't sit there where you are five minutes with your hands folded in your lap."

It was a bet, and the colonel moved around behind the native as that worthy undertook the ordeal. Things with a few bugs of one kind and another, but the colonel placed his reliance upon something that was easier calculated to make an impression.

Standing where his adversary could not observe him, he took a small sun glass from his pocket and focused its beam upon the back of the native's neck. It was not very long until the red hair on the back began to curl up and smoke, and after about two minutes and a half the yellow skin began to sizzle. The native grinned his teeth and stood it for three minutes and a half.

A Beautiful Alloy.

Dr. Roberts-Austen of England has succeeded in making out of gold and aluminium a compound metal or alloy which is said to be the most brilliant known. Its general hue is a splendid purple, but as it is turned in the light it reflects bright tints of ruby color. A little more than three-quarters—more accurately, 78 per cent—of the alloy is gold, the remainder being aluminium. Certain of the expectations with respect to the possibility of substituting aluminium for steel and iron are not likely to be realized, but that metal is proving of great use in combination with others, and the discovery of Dr. Roberts-Austen is expected to lead to the production of very beautiful effects in jewelry.—Harper's Weekly.

HIS PLAN OF THE DAY

The Man Who Told It Said It Was Simply a True Narrative.

A man who formerly was a waiter on a big transatlantic liner told this story the other day:

"On a certain trip over I had at my table an irascible old gentleman who was a fresh air fiend. No matter what the weather he always insisted on having the porthole over the table open. It was no use to argue with him, but one day when the seas were very high and the ship pitching and rolling I ventured to remonstrate. He was up in arms in a minute. 'You are paid to obey orders,' he said tartly. 'Open that port.' I did. The soup course was served in safety. Then I asked him if he would have fish. 'Of course I will,' he snapped. 'And I'll have it in a hurry. Don't keep me waiting all day.'

"Just at that moment an unusually big sea rolled by—that is, part of it did. A goodly portion came through the porthole, soaking the old man and depositing on the table in front of him a live fish. No waiter on board of our ship had ever served an order so quickly before. But I didn't get any credit for it. The queer thing about that story," he added, "is that it isn't a fish story at all. I never told it yet to any one who believed it, but it is absolutely true."—New York Press.

TAP DAY AT YALE

What it Means to the Juniors Who Have Made Good.

The three great senior societies of Yale—Skull and Bones, Scroll and Key and Wolf's Head—choose on tap day fifteen members each from the junior class, the fifteen members of the outgoing senior class making the choice. Each senior is allotted his man of the juniors and must find him in the crowd at the tree and tap him on the shoulder and give him the order to go to his room. Followed by his sponsor, he obeys, and what happens at the room no one but the men of the society knows. With shining face the lad comes back later and is slapped on the shoulder and told, "Good work, old man," cordially and whole heartedly by every friend and acquaintance—by lads who have "made" every honor possible, by lads who have "made" nothing, just as heartily, for that is the spirit of Yale.

Only juniors room in Durfee hall. On tap day an outsider is lucky who has a friend there, for a window is a grandstand box for the play—the play which is a tragedy to all but forty-five of the three hundred and odd juniors. The windows of every story of the gray stone facade are crowded with a deeply interested audience. Gathered bands of old graduates mix with [illegible] lots of women. Every one is watching every detail, every arrival. In front of the hall are a drive and room for perhaps a dozen carriages near the fence—the famous fence of Yale—which rails the campus round. Just inside it, at the northeast corner, rises the tree. People stand up in the carriages, women and men. The fence is loaded with people, often standing, but to see that tree.

All over the campus surges a crowd—students of the other classes, seniors who last year stood in the compact gathering at the tree and left it sore hearted, not having been "taken;" sophomores who will stand there next year, who already are hoping for and dreading their tap day; little freshmen, each one sure that he at least will be of the elect, and again the fine gray heads, the interested faces of old Yale men, and the gay spring hats like bouquets of flowers.

It is perhaps the most critical single day of the four years' course at the university. It shows to the world whether or no a boy, after three years of college life, has in the eyes of the fellow-body "made good." It is a cruel test, a heartrending test for a boy of twenty years.—Mary R. S. Andrews in Scribner's Magazine.

-- KEEP THE PUBLIC INFORMED --

THAT is the motto of the modern merchant. He knows his business will grow exactly in the proportion of his ability to make it useful to the public.

The better he can make himself known for character, for courtesy, for fairness in price, the larger will be the measure of his success.

The modern merchant believes in taking the public into his confidence.

He believes people are interested in the sources of merchandise, its purposes, its character, as well as its fineness and price.

He deems these things as legitimate news of his store.

He tells this news through the advertising of live daily newspapers, like "THE TIMES."

WILLING TO LEND.

Only Her Husband, the Mean Thing, Had Plucked Her Wad!

Men have something to learn from women in the art of warding off "touches" for cash. Women respond to such requests once in about every thousand cases, but they are scientific in their refusals. A Cleveland woman with a reputation as a borrower turned up at the home of one of her friends the other morning with a much done over story about a persistent and threatening dressmaker and the usual request for the loan—"pay it back tomorrow, certain"—of $5.

"Why, my dear, certainly," was the pleasant response to her carefully rehearsed little yarn, "you poor thing, you! Just wait till I run upstairs and get my purse."

She ran upstairs. The male head of the house happened to be in the room where she kept her purse. He saw her dig the purse out of a chiffonier drawer and deliberately remove a wad of bills from it, leaving about 37 cents in silver and copper in the change receptacle. The man was mean enough to lean over the stair railing when his wife went downstairs to the parlor with her flattened pocketbook in her hand.

"Oh, I'm so sorry, dearie," he heard her say, "but I really thought I had the money. I find, though, that Frank, as usual, has been at my purse—I heard him say something about settling a plumber's bill last night when I was half asleep—and the mean thing has left me only enough for car fare. Too bad! Of course, you know, if I had it"—and so on.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He Sat.

It is related of the Rev. Matthew Clark that in the audience was once a young British military officer whose scarlet uniform far outshone any rival habiliments and so fixed the gaze of the young damsels present that the wearer, enjoying the impression he was making, not only stood through the prayer with the rest, but remained standing after all others had sat down until the pastor had proceeded for some time with his sermon, and at length, noticing a divided attention and its cause, the minister stopped, laid aside his sermon and, addressing his new hearer, said:

"Ye're a braw (brave) lad. Ye ha'e a braw suit of claithes, and we ha'e a' seen them. Ye may sit doon."

The lieutenant dropped as if shot.—From the "Autobiography of Horace Greeley."

Snubbed the Composer.

Gustav Mahler had a queer experience in Munich one day for which his fame was partly responsible. His new symphony was being rehearsed, and he took advantage of an hour's intermission to get some fresh air. "On returning to the building," says a Munich paper, "he lost his way and tried to reach the hall through a corridor in which plasterers were at work. 'You cannot pass through here,' he was told. 'But I am Mahler.' (Mahler is the German for painter.) 'You look it,' was the unsympathetic reply of the man who blocked his way. 'We are not ready for the painters yet, so run on.' And the composer, realizing that argument would be useless, plunged into the labyrinth and finally reached his destination."

Camels in Arabia.

There are two varieties of camels in use in Arabia, the dromedary and the freight camel. The [illegible] dromedaries are celebrated for their easy riding gait and speed. A [illegible] carries 150 pounds and travels about [illegible] miles a day. It can be purchased for 200 to 350 Maria Theresa dollars ([illegible] to [illegible]). A freight camel carries about 500 pounds and travels about two and a half miles an hour. It costs 300 Maria Theresa dollars ($137) or more.

How Mussels Move.

The general impression is that mussels do not move; they fasten themselves to certain objects or they lie in the mud and sand at the bottom of the water and there they pass their existence. In proof of this the fact is adduced that mussels are at times buried under the sandy deposit which a rush of water carrying a lot of silt with it. A naturalist who has devoted much time to the study of these creatures says that mussels do move slowly and the movement is accomplished in the following manner. The mussel opens its shell and projects its body to a certain extent from its projecting end. Then it exerts some force whereby it heaps the shell above the silt and uses its body to propel itself along the bottom just in the same way as a land snail [illegible] over the ground. If the sand is [illegible] after the mussel has taken [illegible] of these strolls it will be easy to [illegible] the [illegible] marked lines caused by the edges of the shell touching the ground.

Diamonds were first brought to Europe from the east, where the mine of [illegible] was [illegible], [illegible] in [illegible], a celebrated diamond mart. The mines of Brazil were discovered in 1728 and for a long time furnished most of the diamonds of commerce. In 1867 diamonds were discovered in Cape Colony, and in 1870 the wonderful fields in the Transvaal were [illegible] which resulted in the immense fortunes of the late Cecil Rhodes and others. Most of the diamonds of the world are now furnished by the South African fields.—New York American.

The Real North Pole.

The popular idea of the compass is that it is an instrument having a freely moving needle which points to the north pole. But the needle points to the north pole where the compass is [illegible] on the meridian of magnetic [illegible] pass through the north magnetic pole, and the geographic north pole and the magnetic north pole are not the same place. The magnetic north pole, toward which the compass needle really points, is situated in the northern part of Canada in [illegible] latitude 70 degrees 5 minutes and longitude 96 degrees 46 minutes west of Greenwich. It was first [illegible] 1831 by Sir James Ross. [illegible] magnetic pole is in a [illegible] position in the antarctic region. [illegible] was discovered by the [illegible] Shackleton expedition to be latitude 72 degrees 25 minutes south and longitude 155 degrees east.—St. Nicholas.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

You [illegible] get busy with the dope
And sling the classy slang.
It's got us going, and then some,
It's got our talk for fair.
Without it you are in the bad
And won't get anywhere.
Your girl's a little bear or skirt
Or kiddo—oh, you kid!
To be polite you show a front.
Your Kelly's now a lid.
Your friends are to the good or straight
Or on the Fritz—among
The dippy in the foolish box
Or in some manner stung.
You once were wont to walk and run
Or else perhaps pursue.
You beat it now or chase yourself
Or ramble or skiddoo.
There was a time with your wife's friends
You went and took a drink.
You gargle now or lap highballs
With some booze fighting gink.
Believe me, it is true, get wise,
And cinch it all by rote,
For if you don't it's nix for yours—
It sure will get your goat.

The Thistle in New Zealand.

When New Zealand was first occupied by the white men it was practically without a pest of any sort. The white man, however, introduced the rabbit, Scotch thistle and sparrow. These multiplied exceedingly, and then stoats and weasels were introduced to kill the rabbits and "little owls" to thin out the sparrows. Experience has shown that the stoats and weasels think more of native birds as articles of diet than they do of the rabbit. The "little owl," on the other hand, appears to have quite justified his introduction to New Zealand, as he is reported to be waging violent war on sparrows, beetles and grubs. So far nothing has been invented which will eradicate the Scotch thistle; it is characteristic of the country.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,[illegible] bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,[illegible] bushels, making a net capacity of 2,180,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 5,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

A Clever French Captive.

A person who was supposed to be the French General Mouton, count de Lobau, was once captured by an English vessel, but after a time the captain discovered that his prisoner was the Count de Montrond. "Why did you deceive me?" he demanded angrily of the count. "I did not deceive you," replied Montrond; "not at all. You thought I was General Mouton. You told me so. You have a fifty gun frigate. Was it for me, who have only a pocket pistol, to contradict you?"

The captain did not forgive Montrond and took every opportunity to treat him rudely. One evening at dinner some one proposed the health of the French. As Montrond rose to acknowledge it the captain cried: "They are all cowards! I make no exceptions!" When Montrond's turn came he gave this sentiment, "The English—they are all gentlemen, but I make exceptions."

A Request.

"I shall never forget," says the eminent man of wealth during the course of his little speech on "How to Become as I Am," "I shall never forget how I saved my first hundred dollars."

At this juncture a weary individual in the audience, who has heard the story many times and has read it many times, [illegible] interrupts:

"Well, if you can't forget it, for heaven's sake give the rest of us a chance to."—Chicago Post.

Early Landholding.

Nothing is clearer than the fact that the system of landholding in the most ancient races was communal. Private right in land was for a long time unknown, the source of life being held in common between the members of the tribe. Not only land, but all property that in any way had to do with the general welfare, was looked upon as belonging to the whole tribe in common, no individual having the right to call it his own. Gradually and after a very long time, under the old regime, the right of private ownership began to extend in until at last it became the recognized rule pretty nearly everywhere.—New York American.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

The Spot Is in Washington Township, Brown County, Ind.

An uneven field of rocks and scraggly trees partly covered with snow, a deserted water power mill beside a frozen creek, a quarter of a mile away a farmhouse of hewn logs, not a sign of life except a thin trail of smoke issuing from the chimney of the log cabin—a desolate scene, made more so by lowering clouds and a bitter north wind which whistled through the trees —such is the picture of the center of population of the United States, in Washington township, Brown county, Ind. A two hour drive due west from Columbus, Ind., on the county pike brought the writer to the spot. It was easy to find, for it was scarcely a stone's throw from where the road crosses a little creek at the county line.

Brown county is the wildest and least known part of the Hoosier State. Until three years ago no railroad crossed its borders and even now the Indiana Southern cuts off only one small corner of this barren tract. Yet here is the center of population of the United States.

The center of population in 1900 was in Bartholomew county, about five miles southeast of Columbus, Ind. The great increase in population of some of the southwestern states as shown by the census of 1910 caused the center to move westward about twenty miles, bringing it just over the line into Brown county, which adjoins Bartholomew county on the west. The census department has located the center as close as a forty acre plot, and in course of time the exact point will be determined by astronomical experts, who will visit the tract and take observations, and in all probability it will be marked with a stone monument, such as marks the spot where the center of population was in 1900.—Karl K. Kitchen in New York World.

When All Retreat Is Cut Off, Then You Must Go Ahead.

Young men often make the mistake when they start on an important undertaking of leaving open a way of retreat if things go too hard, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. No one can call out his greatest reserves, do the greatest thing possible for him, while he knows that if the battle goes too hot he has a line of retreat still left open. Only when there is no hope of escape will an army fight with that spirit of desperation which gives no quarter.

Many a great general in his march on the enemy has burned the bridges behind him, cut off his only possible retreat, for the bracing, encouraging effect upon himself and his army, because he knew that men only call out their greatest reserves of power when all retreat is cut off and when fighting desperately for that which they count dearer than life.

We are so made that as long as there is a chance to retreat, as long as there are bridges behind us, we are tempted to turn back when the great test comes.

"Will you hold this fort?" asked General Rosecrans of General Pierce at Stone river. "I will try, general." "Will you hold this fort?" "I will die in the attempt." "That won't do. Look me in the eye, sir, and tell me if you will hold this position." "I will!" said General Pierce, and he did.

Legend of Its Adoption as an Emblem by the Turks.

The crescent has been known since time out of memory. In ancient mythology it decorated the foreheads of Diana and of Astarte, the Syrian Venus. In the days of Rome's greatest glory the ladies wore it as an ornament in their hair.

Since the foundation of Constantinople, the ancient Byzantium, it has been the emblem of the city and as such adorns its walls and public buildings, besides being stamped on its coins and postage. The legend which accounts for its universal adoption in Turkey, and Constantinople in particular, is as follows:

Philip of Macedon laid siege to the city in the year 340 B. C. He chose a night of unusual darkness for the proposed assault, but was foiled by the moon suddenly appearing from behind a cloud. In commemoration of this providential deliverance the crescent was adopted as the symbol of the city. The Mohammedan sultans were slow to assume this emblem until some one [illegible] that it was the symbol of [illegible] power [illegible] as rapidly as the phases of the moon. —Westminster Gazette.

INSANITY IN THE NAVY.

Recruiting Methods Blamed For the Large Number of Cases.

A thorough study of the insane at the government hospital for the insane in Washington, says the Bluejacket, prompts Passed Assistant Surgeon Butts to comment vigorously on the methods of accepting recruits.

It is found that nearly one-quarter of the insanity in the navy and marine corps is furnished by privates in the latter service. This is held to be caused by the scant examination given by civilian physicians hired at outside recruiting stations.

Even the navy medical officers are censured for haste in this important matter, and it is suggested that some form of mental examination is desirable as well as a probationary service of six months to determine mental status and aptitude for service.

It is also deemed wise to inquire into family and personal history of candidates before accepting them.

It is found that among the foreign born the Germans have the best mental makeup. From January, 1890, to June, 1910, there was nearly 30 per cent of recoveries and less than 7 per cent of deaths. Over 62 per cent of the insane are between twenty and thirty years old.

A Sight That Checked Her Royal Extravagance For Awhile.

We are accustomed to think that the day is long past when a sovereign could oppress and offend a whole kingdom by personal extravagance. But the late Isabella of Spain belonged in spirit to the sixteenth century. An incident of her reckless career—which ended in the loss of the throne—is noted in Munsey's Magazine.

She spent money, pouring it out like water, at a time when the treasury was nearly bankrupt and when the proverb "Poor as a Spaniard" was far too true. All her best advisers urged her to practice economy. Very few of them succeeded, and those only for a short time.

A certain chamberlain of hers once hit upon a plan to make her realize how enormous were the sums that she was spending. Passing through the hall of the palace, she was surprised to see a vast heap of silver pieces, resembling the contents of a great bin of wheat, but piled up in the middle of the floor. The queen summoned her chamberlain.

"What is the meaning of all this money?" she demanded of him.

"Oh," he replied, with a low bow, "this is merely the amount which I have brought out to pay the bill of your majesty's glovemaker."

The queen colored and then laughed, and for several months she was less extravagant in her expenditures for clothes.

A DREAM JOURNEY.

It Was a Very Long One, but It Took Only a Few Minutes.

"Dreams are curious things," remarked the amateur psychologist. "Time does not seem to enter into their composition at all. For instance, the other day I was sitting on the porch of a hotel with a friend of mine smoking after lunch. It was a drowsy day, and conversation lagged. Presently I saw my friend nodding in his chair. He had dozed off, holding his lighted cigar in his left hand, which was folded over his right. His left hand relaxed, and the end of the cigar came in gentle contact with the right hand, inflicting a slight burn.

"'The devil it won't!' exclaimed my friend, waking with a start.

"The sentence sounded so incongruous that I burst out laughing. 'Won't what?' I asked.

"'How long have I been asleep?' he asked.

"'Not more than a couple of minutes,' I replied.

"'It doesn't seem possible,' he said. 'During that time I had a dream that pretty nearly took me around the world. I sailed for Southampton, did England, France, Switzerland and a part of Italy, then through the orient to India. It was in India that I became much interested in one of the native snake charmers. He had the snakes crawling all over him and offered me one to fondle. I told him I was afraid it would bite me. He assured me that it wouldn't, and I took the reptile in my hand. It promptly fastened its fangs in me. I said, "The devil it won't!" and dropped it, and then I woke up.'

"I explained the episode of the lighted cigar," concluded the amateur psychologist, "and we both laughed."—New York Sun.

Southey's Industry.

Southey probably deserves to rank as the most industrious of authors. In the greater part of his life he spent fourteen hours a day in composition. He had six tables in his library. He wrote poetry at one, history at another, criticism at a third, and so on with the other [illegible] which he was engaged. He [illegible] to [illegible] the division of his time—two hours before breakfast for history, two hours for [illegible] after, two hours for the composition of poetry, two hours for criticism, and so on through all his working day. "And pray, Mr. Southey," asked [illegible], "when do you think?"—London Chronicle.

GREAT SALT LAKE.

An Immense Fresh Water Sea Some Thousands of Years Ago.

In glacial times Great Salt lake was a magnificent fresh water lake the size of Lake Huron—that is, about 18,000 square miles—and had its outlet into the Port Neuf, the Snake and the Columbia rivers. This was at least 10,000 years ago, but since that time the climate has become arid, and not enough water has fallen over the Great basin to supply that lost by evaporation. Consequently the lake has ceased to flow from its outlet and gradually dried up from over a thousand feet deep to fifteen feet and from 18,000 square miles in area to less than 1,700.

It is now seventy miles long and about thirty wide, but is beautiful still and is the home of myriads of sea birds and other waterfowl. It is the great resort of the people of Utah, for from 2,000 to 5,000 visit its shores daily in the summer, and many bathe in its waters. The lake contains about 7,000,000,000 tons of salt.

When the lake is high the salt is so diluted that it has gone down to 11 per cent. When it is low, as it was not many years ago, it reached saturation which for the mixed ingredients of the water is 26 per cent.

There is nothing mysterious about it any more than there would be about a teacup with a teaspoonful of salt in the bottom. If a tablespoonful of water were put in the cup on the salt it would taste very salty, but if the cup were filled to the brim with water it would not.

The salt has come from the water of the rivers flowing into it since it ceased to flow from its outlet. All river water contains salt, and the annual evaporation of from two to five cubic miles of this water leaves large quantities of salt behind, and so it has accumulated for thousands of years.

Pretty Big Sometimes, but Then There Is Another Point of View.

I have a warm spot in my heart for the big American surgeons, says a writer in the New York Telegraph, and because of regular attendance for years at some of the most famous clinics in this and other cities I have been a witness of their unadvertised charities, acts of mercy and kindness which were never heard of outside the walls of the hospitals they honor by their services.

I knew a wealthy man whose daughter was suddenly stricken and whose life was saved by the attending surgeon. His fee was $10,000. [illegible]

"Your daughter's life is worth $10,000 to you," he explained. There was no denial.

"Well, this fee means that I can operate on fifty patients without any charge, and if you don't like it you can leave the fee to me. But I will get it without a suit or you will stand a lot of publicity."

And he got the money without recourse to a court of law.

It is safe to mark it down when you see a story of some great surgeon who has charged a high fee that there are many of his patients enjoying good health and relief from pain because he charged them nothing at all.

The Virginian's Mascot.

A black bear is the [illegible] prized pet of the United States [illegible] Virginia. This bear has been taught to smoke a pipe and to perform various other tricks and is very fond of taking his rest in a bucket. But the Parting Was More Strenuous Than Jim Expected.

A man named Rayner when gold hunting in Alaska had as partner a venerable prospector, who went about habitually with his boot legs stuffed full of dynamite sticks. The old man had a pleasantly casual way of filling the stove oven with these sticks in order that they might thaw out there. Sometimes, too, he forgot them, which was imprudent, to say the least. Rayner was not at all of a timorous disposition, but the ancient prospector's reckless carelessness troubled his nerves. He remonstrated with him repeatedly and strenuously, but his protest did not seem to have the slightest effect.

"Jim," he said finally when driven to desperation, "if you can't be more careful with that dynamite we'll have to separate."

That night as he approached the shack a terrific concussion rent the air and knocked him insensible. When he recovered consciousness he perceived one of the aged prospector's legs lying near. He stared at it a moment meditatively.

"Well, Jim," he remarked at last sadly, "I guess we've managed to separate all right, particularly you, Jim!" —Minneapolis Journal.

When Appetite Fails and Digestion is Bad

THERE IS DANGER AHEAD FOR THE MAN THAT NEGLECTS NATURE'S WARNING.

Dyspepsia Tendencies are Serious and Should be Treated Accordingly.

There is a strong moral in the statement of James Schrum of Pleasant street, Dartmouth, N.S. Like thousands of people, he was failing in health because his stomach and digestive organs were out of repair. His vitality was slipping away; he was losing ground every day.

"I could not have held on much longer. I was wasting away, simply because no remedy I used gave tone and strength to my stomach. The vital forces of my system seemed dead. I was advised to try Dr. Hamilton's Pills. What hidden weakness they searched out I don't know, but in a miraculous way they have made a new man of me. My stomach troubles are cured, rich blood now runs through my veins—clear skin and unmistakable evidences of health and vigor I feel every day. Dr. Hamilton's Pills have certainly mastered the secret of curing the sickly conditions [illegible] and I [illegible] to [illegible] in failing or low health [illegible] this grand remedy."

Girls wanted at Quaker Oats Company.

A Charming At-Home.

Mrs. W. H. Hall, of Weller street, entertained a number of young people last night at her residence in honor of the Misses Cooper of Ashburnham, who are shortly leaving for their home in Australia.

Our Ice Harvest.

Mr. John Allin begins to gather the annual ice harvest on Monday. Ice for cooling purposes only will be taken from Little Lake, while ice for drinking purposes will be taken from the canal where there is no danger of pollution.

Good Work by C.P.R.

Mr. H. B. Lowry, who has been engaged with the C.P.R. and who put in some 14 miles of siding at Trenton and other places, was in the city yesterday. In conversation with a Times representative, Mr. Lowry noted that the C.P.R. accomplished splendid work now nearly completed, between Agincourt and Glenlay.

Hockey News.

Both Peterborough teams play away from home to-night, the Intermediates playing in Belleville and the Juniors in Kingston. A win for the Intermediates will give them an almost unbeatable lead for the district while the juniors need to win at Kingston to ensure a tie up in the group.

Peterborough Industrial Directorate.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Industrial Association, the following directorate was appointed: Messrs. Thos. Brown, T. O. Gibbs, J. A. Stacey, T. Cruickshank, R. M. Glover, T. E. Moore, S. [illegible], R. Neill, B. Duffus, J. O. [illegible], J. [illegible], W. J. Cox, F. Wise, T. H. Hoover, W. A. Conway, J. J. Turner, H. Kinsey and W. J. Oke.

The Barbers Won.

In our issue of yesterday, through a typographical error, the score of a game played Wednesday night between the staff of the Oriental Hotel and the Oriental barbers, was wrongly recorded. The score should have read Barbers 5, Oriental staff 4. Anyhow, the Oriental Hotel staff bought the oysters for the [illegible] when a most enjoyable time was spent.

Electric Snow Plough.

Yesterday afternoon the Peterborough Radial Railway Company's electric snow plough was at work on the Jackson Park line. As this plough is seldom used at night and consequently few of our readers have seen it operate, a few descriptive words may be in season. This plough is attached to a street car extending from it about 12 feet. As the car proceeds the plough scrapes away all the snow for the breadth it covers, thus leaving a clear space for horse vehicles and motors.

Former Local Boys Make Good.

Mr. L. C. Thompson, of Cleveland, an old Peterborough boy, who was engaged here some two years ago in the motion picture business, arrived in the city yesterday. Mr. Thompson is engaged with the Thompson Amusement Co. as general manager. This firm, comprised of five brothers, handles the goods of the Universal Film Co. and European features. Mr. C. G. Thompson, another former local man, is president of the company. Mr. James Thompson, also an old Peterborough boy, who used to be in vaudeville in a bicycle act, has just returned from an extended European trip. Mr. Norti Thompson "books" the features for the company. These five boys are sons of Mr. Peter Thompson, local plumbing inspector.

A Local Rival of Dr. Cook.

A Times representative in conversation yesterday with Mr. L. C. Thompson of Cleveland, an old Peterborough boy, was told that Mr. Jas. Thompson of Cleveland, also a former local man, will arrive here to-morrow. Our informant told us a funny story of his brother. It seems that during a recent blizzard in Cleveland, Mr. Thompson was puzzled by the drifting snow. He followed the wrong street car track, and instead of walking towards his home, walked out into the other end of the suburbs. Next day the Cleveland Leader poked fun at him by saying "Is Jim Thompson a rival of Dr. Cook, who claimed to have found the North Pole and who was, that day, in vaudeville at the Priscilla Theatre? The Leader asked "Did Jim find any polar bears or white Esquimaults?"

Mr. Norman Rae left yesterday morning for Oshawa to accept the position of wire chief with the Bell Telephone Co.

Dr. Poole, a former resident is in the city for a short visit. Dr. Poole is on his return to Regina after a trip to England.

"Curley" Blount, of Youngstown, who is a possibility for the leadership of the 1914 White Caps, will be in the city to-day.

Mr. Herman McDuffy, of Brock street, the well known local insurance man, was in Port Hope yesterday on business.

Miss Gladys Cameron, Stewart street, is entertaining at a small tea this afternoon in honor of Miss Addison, of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Gray, of Toronto, and Mrs. E. Evans Smith and Master Frank, are the guests of Mr. W. H. Warren, Charlotte street.

The many friends of Mr. W. R. Moore, K.C., who fell and fractured a bone in his foot, some days ago, will be pleased to learn that he is progressing favorably.

THREE CANADIANS ARE IN CARNEGIE HERO FUND LIST

Toronto Widow Gets Silver Medal and $50 Per Month—Her Husband Died in Saving Two Women

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 22.—Individual acts of heroism which the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission has recognized since it was established ten years ago were brought up to a total of 781 to-day when thirty names were added to the honor roll. One Toronto man is honored. His case is summarized as follows: Frank Rance sustained fatal injuries in attempting to save Mary C. and Regina G. Cryan from burning in New York, December 10, 1912. $50 monthly to widow, till Delaware avenue, Toronto, Ont., with $5 monthly for child until 16.

The Commission held its tenth annual meeting here this afternoon. The awards announced were fewer than has been the case on previous occasions, and although in the past ten years 16 gold medals have been awarded; in nineteen cases, bronze appears in this class in the announcement to-day. Two Canadians are honored:

William Korr, 429 Cordova street, Vancouver, B.C., saved John Magee from drowning at Skagway, Alaska, Nov. 26, 1909.

Stewart L. McLelland, of Wilsons Corners, Que., who died in attempting to save Leo Dore from drowning in canoe accident, May 29, 1911, both men being drowned. Medal to McLelland's sister.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make it thick, glossy, wavy, luxuriant and remove dandruff—Real surprise for you.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and just try it.

Kratchenko, the Winnipeg bandit, is badly injured. John Barton, under arrest, has given details of the escape.

"CASCARETS" RELIEVE SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Move acids, gases and clogged-up waste from Stomach, Liver, Bowels—Cure Indigestion.

Get a 10-cent box now.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, dizziness and sick headache, means a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

ENGLISH PAPER HITS CANADIAN RAILWAYS

English paper hits canadian — — London, Jan. 22.—The Manchester Guardian concludes a generous eulogy of Lord Strathcona with some criticism of the Canadian Railway policy which, says the Guardian, assumes that though the States has given it land and money, and either secured its loans or [illegible] it direct, the railway company's duty, is to its shareholders.

But for Strathcona's first bargain the valuable land now owned by the companies would be the property of the State and the Canadian people not the shareholders, would be reaping the benefit. There would be none of the complaints which have been made and are being made in Canada, that while the people by their cash grants and loans create railways, the profit as well as the honor goes to "the titled 'empire-building' millionaries." "Criticism in these forms has been explicit in Canada in the lifetime of Premier Borden's Government," says the Guardian, "and must be heard of in future. The issue of it must determine the position of Strathcona in the estimation of his fellow-citizens of the Dominion. It cannot affect their admiration of his character, his capacity, his industry. It may affect their judgment on his political sagacity and public spirit".

CANADIAN REPRESENTATIVE.

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—It is practically certain that Canada will be represented at the funeral of the late Lord Strathcona in London by two men who formerly took a foremost part in Canadian public life. They are the Duke of Argyle, who as the Marquis of Lorne, was Canada's Governor-General from 1878 to 1882; and Sir Chas. Tupper, who gave up the position of High Commissioner in 1896 to take the Canadian Premiership, and who was succeeded in London by the late Lord Strathcona.

TORONTO MAN FROZEN.

Port Arthur, Jan. 22.—Apparently overcome by a fit while walking, Wm. Lowndsborough, aged forty, was found frozen to death, his body lying undisturbed and no sign of foul play. His brother is said to be employed at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, and his mother lives on Spadina avenue, Toronto.

TO FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC.

London, Jan. 22.—Claude Grahame-White, the aviator, to-day continued work on his plans to fly across the Atlantic in the summer of 1915. He said some of the work on his aeroplane for the trip has been done. He intends to make the trip in from 40 to 60 hours and land at New York, carrying four or five passengers.

A Hydro-Electric radial from Berlin to Woodstock is projected.

Your Temple of Music

The unmatched beauty of the Greeks' early temples has been the inspiration of architects for 2000 years. But their music is gone—forgotten. No genius can "restore" it as we do the crumbling columns of her Acropolis.

We have caught the spirit of their art, however, in the design of the modern temple of music—the Grafonola.

The Favorite, for instance, embodies the same principles of proportion and contour, and as an example of cabinet-making pays the same tribute to modern music as the architecture of the Greek temples did to ancient music. Grafonola music is worthy of this tribute.

You can put this modern Temple of Music with its inexhaustible repertoire in your own home for as little as $20.00.

You pay for it in convenient monthly amounts, whether you purchase the Grand at $650 or a lower priced instrument.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM DELIVERED EXCELLENT SPEECH IN THE HOUSE

Member For West Peterborough Follows Dr. Clark in the Debate on the Address

Mr. J. H. Burnham M.P., was selected by the Government to follow Dr. Clark, one of the leaders of the Liberal party, in the debate on the address, and certainly maintained his reputation in the House as an eloquent and forceful speaker. The following is his speech, taken from Hansard:

"I am sure it will be a cause of astonishment that I rise at this juncture but it is not altogether my fault. It arises, I presume from a desire on the part of some people to take advantage of this hour in the evening to take a nap. Let me say Mr. Speaker, in opening, that I should like to join my humble voice in the congratulations to the mover and the seconder of the Address for the manner in which they carried out that pleasant duty. The strength of argument, the breadth of view, the fluency and finish of their diction, excited general admiration. It is a great pleasure to see that the Government benches can do something of which the Opposition approve. We all wish to join our voices also in the universal praise of the pluck displayed by Her Excellency after her severe ordeal of illness in returning to preside in Canada. It is very gratifying to us to find that the Opposition unite with us in discussing the good qualities, the very brilliant qualities, of the new Solicitor General (Mr. Meighen.)

"I cannot understand why so much time is wasted by the Opposition in discounting the statements made by their own provincial Prime Ministers. We are told that, through the inaction or mistaken action, the ignorance or otherwise of the Conservative Government, Canada has failed to measure up to the standard as she should have done; and yet in the face of that, in the face of the great problem a country like this has before it, we have the universal testimony of the provincial Prime Ministers, that Canada is exceedingly prosperous. Logically what justification can there be for taking a fling at the conditions in this country at the present time? I think I may safely say, without being considered impertinent, that it is not only illogical and inconsistent, but distinctly improper to fly in the face of the the provincial Prime Minister, who is the best exponent of local conditions. Are we to suppose for one moment that the Prime Minister of Alberta or the Prime Minister of Saskatchewan, is anxious to place a feather in the cap of the Conservative Government of Ottawa? We know that he is more likely—being human and a Liberal—to minimize the conditions in Alberta and Saskatchewan than to magnify them. We must surely be allowed to rely upon the statements made by these men, and we do rely upon them more than upon the statements of those whose duty it is to find fault and endeavour to resume their places on the treasury benches where they committed homicide by misadventure in 1911.

"It must be remembered that the Naval or Imperial policy of the Conservative Government springs from the fact that first and foremost—first,

The Gannon's Narrows Bridge Grant

For some time the people of Harvey have been working to get aid for the building of a new bridge, which is badly needed, at Gannon's Narrows. The Dominion Government will reconstruct their end of it, comprising the swing, etc., and it is said that Mr. Burnham, M. P., is of opinion that the Ottawa Government will give some financial help to the Northern end also, if the other bodies concerned do likewise. Mr. Peck, M. P. P. does not give much encouragement from the Ontario Government, at least just now. What the County Council will do remains to be seen. Harvey will, of course, be heard from likewise.

TAYLOR MURDERER WENT TO HIS DEATH SILENTLY

Taylor Made No Statement Ere He Hung, And Ate Nothing

Brantford, Ont., Jan. 23.—In a narrow hallway in the county jail this morning, James Taylor, the half-breed who last September murdered Charlie [illegible], a 12-year-old boy, and then fiendishly mutilated his body, leaving it on the roadside where it was found the next morning, was executed.

Taylor, always of a sullen demeanor, bore up well until the end. Last night he showed signs of weakening, being quite sick until midnight, and beef-tea and other non-intoxicating stimulants were administered. After midnight, he slept fairly well until about six o'clock this morning, when without being awakened, he got up and dressed in his ordinary street clothes.

All that he asked for breakfast was an egg and [illegible] this some toast and beef tea were served for him, but he did not touch them.

He had not a word to say before going to his death. When the executioner entered his cell he quietly rose and submitted to his hands being fastened behind his back. Walking with firm step and bowed head, he then followed the hangman, a young fellow who goes by the name of Jack Holmes, and who had officiated at [illegible] previous hangings, into the death cell. He was accompanied by Adjutant Hargrove of the Salvation Army his spiritual adviser, who had been with him all night.

The trap was sprung at 8.07, and nine minutes later the jail surgeon declared the man dead. The body was then handed over to relatives to be interred in one of the local cemeteries.

BEST TREATMENT FOR ALL COMPLEXION ILLS

(From Woman's Tribune.)

I'll tell you my panacea for all complexion troubles. If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, overred, if it be rough, chapped, blotchy, or pimply, there's nothing that will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary mercolized wax. The wax literally takes off dead complexion—absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, so gently, gradually, you experience no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is thus in evidence, one so clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful, you look many years younger. One ounce of this wax, procurable at any drug store will rejuvenate even the very worst complexion. It is applied like cold cream before retiring and removed mornings with warm water. The mercolized wax habit is a healthier and more economical one than the cosmetic habit.

If the skin be wrinkled or creased, bathe it daily in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This acts immediately, effecting even the deepest wrinkles.—[illegible]

CAN WAR BE ENDED? WAS SUBJECT LAST NIGHT

Last night a large and intelligent audience gathered in the Collegiate Assembly Hall. The function was held under the auspices of the Women's Teachers' Guild.

The "piece de resistance" in this intellectual feast was an address by Prof. Oscar Skelton, who has gathered many honors in his university career. Prof. Skelton who originally came from near Cornwall, in 1899, took his M.A. degree in Latin and English. He also did post-graduate work at Oxford. He is a Fellow in Political Science at Queen's University and has attained many other distinguished honors.

His subject last night was "Can War be Ended?" The professor is a clear and impressive speaker, who with perfect enunciation, spoke of the evils of war and suggested means for preventing such awful conditions.

Dr. Morrison, chairman of the Board of Education who ably presided introduced the distinguished speaker.

A heart vote of thanks to the talented speaker was unanimously passed.

PARTICULARS GIVEN OF BRIBERY CHARGES

Burns Detective Details How He Trapped Quebec M.P.P. With $500 Bribe.

Montreal, Jan. 23.—Returning to its bribery allegations against three members of the Provincial Parliament at Quebec whom it names, the Daily Mail this morning gives particulars of the alleged act of bribery in the case of the member who, it says "stands out in special prominence, and who, it is charged, received the lion's share of the 'graft'' paid by agents of the W. G. Burns detective agency to secure the passage of the Montreal Fair Association Bill.

The Mail then gives what purports to be an interview between this member of the Legislation and George S. Sampson, General manager of Martin & Company, and a Burns detective, who was handling the affair of the Montreal Fair Assoc ation.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE NEEDS AN ENTIRE ATLANTIC CABLE

The Empire Press Union Argues to This Effect Before the Dominions Commission

London, Jan. 23.—The Empire Press Union has sent the Dominion Commission a memorandum submitting that a state-owned cable under the control of the governments of the British Dominions is required by the highest necessities of the Empire, pointing out that France and Germany have subsidized the maintenance of Atlantic cables for many years, although they have no colonial possessions in North America. The Union contends that the developments of wireless telegraphy cannot be urged as a reason against this State enterprise.

Sir Llewllyn Smith, permanent secretary of the British Board of Trade, giving evidence before the commission, said the work of the trade commissioners had been altogether satisfactory. Trade which had passed into the hands of foreigners has been recovered. In regard to steamship freights, he said, had been before the Board of Trade for five years, but they were powerless without legislation, which was very difficult to institute.

PRIZES WERE AWARDED TO THE ST. PAULS S. S. WINNERS

Last night the annual presentation of prizes in connection with the Sunday School of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church took place in the lecture room and proved to be quite an interesting event. Mr. S. Keyes, the efficient superintendent, occupied the chair and distributed the prizes. The presentation was the feature of the evening, although a very choice musical program was rendered.

LOCAL MAN GETS $25,000 FOR PATENTS

Mr. P. H. Spies, of this city, yesterday received a letter from the firm he organized in Detroit offering him $25,000 (twenty-five thousand), for his interests in the United States patents for the water wheel he invented. This water wheel is designed to develop power without the need of a head of water or dam. This wheel, or rather a toy model of it was seen in operation a few days ago by a Times representative at the Quaker Oats plant. The wheel made of iron was about twenty inches in diameter. Within the inner disk are three perpendicular flanges or sheets on one semi-circle of the wheel. The other concave half of the wheel is left vacant. The wheel is placed perpendicularly in the river. The current acting on the flanges drives the wheel around. The Times scribe took a ten-foot long gas pipe and used it, with its further end in the bottom of the river to get leverage and tried to stop the little toy wheel by using the pipe as a brake. He could not, however, make any effect even when using all his strength on the toy wheel. Mr. Spies has had a wheel 25 feet in diameter made at Wilson's machine shop. It would seem that this big wheel may revolutionize the whole power conditions of ourC anadian rivers. The big wheel will soon be used here for demonstration purposes and afterwards shipped to the Detroit Turbine Mfg. Co. Ltd.

AN ENJOYABLE DANCE

The Belmont Club Give Another Successful Dance.

The annual dance given last night in the Conservatory of Music, by the Belmont Club, was a particularly pleasing affair, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of invited guests.

The music was all that could be desired, being supplied by the Fralick Orchestra, of Toronto, which is no stranger to Peterborough lovers of the Terpsichorean art.

Dainty refreshments were served during the evening, the caterer, as usual being Mr. T. H. Hooper.

Mrs. A. W. McPherson, Mrs. E. V. Frederick, Mrs. James Hamilton, Mrs. E. G. Patterson, Mrs. W. H. Bradburn and Mrs. R. Deane.

The committee in charge of the function certainly scored another success in making it one of the most enjoyable ever given under the auspices of the Club.

SMOKING CONCERT LABOR HALL

A smoking concert was held last night in the Trades and Labour Hall, got up by a few employes of the C. G.E. to help a few of their fellow workmen, who have been out of work for some time. Considering the other attractions that were on, there were not many empty seats. After a short speech by the chairman, a well rendered programme was given as follows:

Violin Solo—H. Johnston.
Vocal Solo—J. Cairns.
Xocal Solo—G. Harris.
Comic Song—W. Stephen, encored.
Song—E. Bartley, encored.
Gramophone—J. Davidson.
Song—K. Sparrow.
Duet—Messrs. Bartley & Henshaw.
Comic Song—W. Winson.
Song—G. Harris.
Accompanist—G. Dickinson.

With a vote of thanks to the artists for their kind help a successful evening was brought to a close with "God Save the King."

He Had a Name

Patrick, lately over, was working in the yards of a railroad. One day he happened to be in the yard office when the force was out. The telephone rang vigorously several times and he at last decided it ought to be answered. He walked over to the instrument, took down the receiver and put his mouth to the transmitter, just as he had seen others do.

"Hillo!" he called.

"Hello!" answered the voice at the other end of the line. "Is this eight-six-one-five-nine?"

"Aw, g'wan! Phwat d' ye think Oi am? A box car?"—

A WORLD SURVEY ON THE WIDENING SOVEREIGNTY OF CHRIST

REV. J. H. KEITH
Pastor of Knox Church

Sermon Preached on First Sunday of New Year in which Some Remarkable Statements Were Made

In a New Year's sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Keith in Knox Church some remarkable statements were made that a number have requested should be given to the public. The subject discussed was A World Survey of the Widening Sovereignty of Christ and Mr. Keith refers to a book "The Call of the World," by W. E. Doughty as the source of many of these wonderful statements. These show the changed world conditions that indicate a very rapid widening sovereignty.

The world is now within easy reach of Christian forces. Hunter Corbett, a famous missionary in China took 4 months to get to his field the first time he travelled to it, and 21 days the last. It takes 12½ days from London to Pekin. Jules Verne's Eighty Days Around the World was a wild dream. The journey can now be made in 38 days.

The heathen world has undergone a marvellous change. A hermit nation such as Korea was thirty years ago is an impossibility. Christians are now either tolerated or welcomed and even sought after in every heathen nation. Old systems and old religions have undergone rapid disintegration and a search into Western thought, thought and life has taken their place. The change is a result, directly or indirectly or missionary effort, and the gospel is the only final means of satisfying their search.

All the institutions of Society, Home, State, School, Commerce, Religion are shaken to their very foundations and conditions can be described only as an upheaval which the Gospel alone can re shape.

During the same time Christian hands have altered in a wonderful way. The population of America 100 years ago was 5,000,000. To-day it is 100,000,000. The population of the world then was one thousand million and is now one thousand six hundred million. The population of Europe and America alone in that 100 years, has increased four hundred millions. The heathen world was at a standstill for while the birth rate was much higher the death rate was abnormally high.

The language of Christian countries have rapidly spread over a much larger area. In 1800 about 20 million spoke English. In 1900 130,000,000. During the same period the German tongue increased in use from 30,000,000 to 84,000,000. It is the only rival English language has. The latter is used in India in all the colleges. It is on the curriculum in China and spreading rapidly in Japan. The Greek language had become universal in the first century and became the Gospel medium. May it not be that now the English language will largely become the medium to the nations of the same Gospel story.

Mohammedanism has ceased to be a great political power and has lost control of large territories. Governments known as Christian have increased in their control of the world's surface from 7 p.c. to 82 p.c.

Another phase of the subject of the widening sovereignty is the increased number of those engaged in the task. Two hundreds years ago Ziegenbalg went out as the first Protestant Missionary to India. One hundred years later there were only two missionary organizations. At the Edinburgh Congress held in 1910 over nine hundred and ninet8 four missionary organizations reported. This Congress reveals the fact that modern missions have become a science. A supervision of the missionary effort of the world is now conducted. The heathen portions have been carefully divided and scientific principles have been adopted in the world wide effort. As an illustration of modern conditions look at Korea. The country is divided among four missionary organizations. A hymnal

NO DOUBT NOW AS TO OWNERS OF MONTREAL PAPEN

Is Plain That Sir Hugh Graham is Now in Control—Merger to be Next Week

Montreal, Jan. 23.—All doubt as to who is the owner of the Herald and the Telegraph-Witness have been dispelled at least as far as the employes of the two papers and those of the Montreal Star are concerned. Yesterday the Herald employes from the manager down to the latest office boy received their conge in the same way as the Witness-Telegraph men "got theirs" earlier in the week. An amusing incident in connection with the letter sent to the Herald employes is that the man whose name is signed to them also got one himself. It is also known that several employes in the composing room ofthe Star were notified yesterday that their services would be dispensed with in a week's time. There will be no wholesale dismissals in the Star office, however, although various weak members in the different departments may be let out to make room for better material available.

No announcement is forthcoming as to what the next step will be although it is known that the Telegraph will cease publication next week as a separate entity, and will be merged with the Herald, from whose office the publication will be issued.

The name, it is said, will be the Herald-Telegraph, with the latter name in small type.

The Herald staff will be a composite one from the best of both papers, with the exception of a very few who will go elsewhere. Nothing has been decided definitely as to Hon. W. S. Fielding. It is said he can have the office of chief editorial writer if he so desires, but the situation is a delicate one, and snags may be encountered.

Missed His Train

On his way to Rochester, Minn., where he was going to undergo an operation to remove gall stones. Distinguished Dunces.

The finer individual qualities are often late in revealing themselves. Some mature slowly and are called stupid.

George Eliot learned to read with difficulty. Thorwaldsen, the sculptor, spent three years in one class in the village school; Burger, the poet of German ballads, required several years to learn the Latin forms; and Alfieri, the Italian poet, was dismissed by his teachers, so backward was he.

The list of distinguished dunces might be indefinitely extended by adding Newton, Byron, Ibsen, Walter Scott, Pierre Curie and others.

Tolstoi, Goethe, and Dean Swift were refused their degrees because they failed in their university examinations, and for the same reason Ferdinand Brunetière was denied admission to the Ecole Normale Supérieure.

At Cambridge, also, Sir William Thomson, who became Lord Kelvin, was not a Senior Wrangler, though one of the examiners admitted that "the successful competitor was not fit to cut pencils for Thomson."

An Incident That Enraged the Actor and Amused the Audience.

Some years ago a melodrama was being performed in a country theater, the chief actor in which had made himself, from his haughty and overbearing conduct, disliked by all. In the last scene he was supposed to visit the tombs of his ancestors. In the center of the stage upon a marble pedestal stood the statue of his father. A heavy fold of drapery covered the figure. Sieur Albert, who [illegible] addressed the statue:

"I am here once again to gaze upon those features which in life so often looked on me with tenderest affection. Father, thy mourning son now comes to pay thee adoration. Let me remove the veil which from the vulgar gaze shields the beloved image of a once dear parent."

Off went the drapery, and, behold, there was disclosed the statue of the father gracefully standing upon its head.

The effect cannot be described. It was electric. The shouts of laughter which followed the mistake of the actor effectually put an end to the scene, which changed to the next as quickly as possible amid the jeers of the audience, the anger of the manager and the inconsolable rage of the actor.—London Telegraph.

HIS PLAN OF THE DAY.

Eight Rules of Living Made by a Colonial Minister.

An orderly arrangement of working hours is a desirable and time saving thing, but when one reads the plan of the day made by a colonial parson, he cannot help wondering where the good man's family life came in, and if the system held any possibility of relaxation. The record, quoted by William Root Bliss in "Side Glimpses From the Colonial Meeting House," is taken from the diary of Thomas Prince, a minister of the Old South church, Boston.

1719. Oct. 30th. I marry.
Nov. 12. We begin to keep House.
My proposed order is:
At 5 get up and go into Study. Pray and read in original Bible till 6 and then call up the Family.
At 6½ go to Family Prayers and only the Breakfast of Chocolate for Breakfast till 8. I go into my Study till 12½, then do something about the House till 1 to Dinner, except on Thursday study till 10½, then dress and 11 Lecture.
At 2 Dress and go abroad till Candlelight. Except Wednesdays after Dinner do something about the House and Saturday afternoons visit at Dr. Sewall's till 3½, then House and study till Candlelight. Study till 9½.
9½ go to Family Prayers and go to Bed.
N. B. I eat no Supper.

Dickens' Cramped Quarters.

Bleak House at Broadstairs is of interest to the Dickens lover because the greater part of "David Copperfield" was written there. But it is not the Bleak House of the novel, which is definitely located in Hertfordshire. The novelist and his family appear to have been somewhat tightly packed in their Broadstairs home. When Lord Carlisle contemplated paying a visit to "our watering place" in 1851 Dickens wrote promising him the North Foreland lighthouse for a night light in his bedroom, and he continues: "As we think of putting supplementary boxes outside the windows for the younger children to sleep in by and by I am afraid we should give your servant the cramp if we hardily undertook to lodge him." During recent years the house has been transformed out of all recognition.—London Spectator.

Where They Missed It.

It was their first baby.
The mother was in a perfect rapture.
It was an ugly baby, but she did not know it.
Happy young mother!
All of them are like her.
But the father had dark misgivings.
His salary was only two-ten a week, and babies are expensive luxuries.
Her father was rich, but he had frowned upon their union and had hidebound and heretical notions as to supporting a son-in-law besides.
Cruel old man!
One day when the baby was a month old the father came home from his office in the city and found his wife radiant.
She was not happy when the baby was out of her sight.
"What is it, Jennie?" asked her husband gloomily, for he was yet uncertain as to the blessings conferred by the baby.
He was also sleepy.
"Oh, Charlie!" she chirruped. "I heard from papa today."
Charlie looked gloomier than ever.
"Don't say anything, dear," she pleaded, for she knew her husband's opinion of her father. "He has heard of our baby, and, though he has not yet determined to forgive us, he has sent us a check for $50 for dear baby's sake."
At first the young husband's face lit up with pleasure, then it shadowed again.
"Are you glad, Charlie?" she asked, with a quivering lip.
Then he smiled joyfully.
"Yes, darling," he whispered; "but what a pity it wasn't twins!"—Ally Sloper.

Her Game.

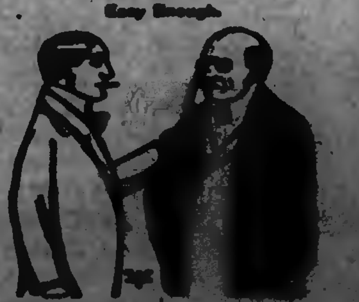
"Your father despises that young man you are engaged to."
"I know it, and so do I."
"Then why in the world are you going to marry him?"
"I wouldn't marry him if he was the last man on earth."
"Then why"—
"Dad will buy me off with an electric runabout in a few days."—Houston Post.

Perplexing Case.

Professor (after calling on Blank and waiting for him to recite)—Seems to me, Blank, you ought to be able to answer any question with all the prompting you are getting back there.

Blank—Well, professor, there's such a difference of opinion around me that—Gargoyle.

Easy Enough.



Just Out From College—The great trouble with you, dad, is you can't say "No." Learn how to say it and you will sleep better. By the way, dad, can you give me an advance?
"No," said dad, with ease.

Two Tales In One.

Six-year-old George's father had taken him to a circus, and that night the mother asked her little son what he had seen.

"Mamma," said George, all excitement, "I saw a great big elephant with two tails, and he was eating with one of 'em."—St. Louis Times.

Anachronisms That Crowded a Once Famous Poem.

The medieval romances are full of blunders, making contemporaries of men who were separated sometimes by hundreds, sometimes by thousands, of years, but as historical criticism had not then a being and the general information of the age was not superior in any particular to that of the novelist their plans do not amount to much from a literary point of view. Such an instance is the case of Ariosto, who might be supposed to know something at least of the truth of history, but whose once famous poem, "Orlando Furioso," is a tissue of historical absurdities from beginning to end.

In this poem Charlemagne and his peers are joined by Edward I. of England, Richard, earl of Warwick; Clarence and the Dukes of York and Gloucester; cannon are employed hundreds of years before the time of Monk Schwartz, and the Moors are represented as established in Spain in spite of the historic fact that 300 years elapsed after the death of Charlemagne before they crossed from Africa. In one place Prester John, who lived 400 years after Charlemagne, and Constantine the Great, who died five centuries before him, are introduced and hold familiar converse with the great Charles, while in another Saladin and Edward the Confessor are joined by the Black Prince.

Thought Once Was Enough.

The Sunday school lesson was from that Scripture which teaches that if your brother strikes you on the cheek you should turn the other also and endure even for seventy times seven. Johnny had listened to his teacher very attentively while she emphasized this fact, and after the lesson the superintendent rose to make a few remarks.

"Now, boys," she said, "how many times ought another boy to strike you before you hit him back?"

"Just about once!" promptly answered Johnny.—Judge.

THE BOX-PLAITED BLOUSE WITH POCKETS AN APPROVED NOVELTY

The [illegible] skirt has been voted universally becoming, especially when it is fashioned of a light filmy fabric or a clinging silk. Another very attractive feature of many of the new [illegible] is the surplice bodice. This is another revival and promises to rival its first appearance in popularity.

As printed chiffons, failles and light silks are to be generally fashionable the coming season, it is safe to predict that bordered materials will have a first place. They are so well suited to the two and three tiered skirts and the [illegible] designs.

Number [illegible] is developed in a bordered chiffon over charmeuse and is a charming afternoon or informal evening gown. For size 36 this costume requires 5⅞ yards of 36-inch material.

There is a strictly practical element in the fashions to-day despite their frills and flounces. What could be more convenient than a real pocket on each side of a blouse? The smart blouse which is here illustrated is new and decidedly smart. As shown in [illegible], it is made of crêpe de Chine in white; the pockets and straps are stitched and the tie forms a point at the back of the collar which is effective. A skirt of dark blue [illegible] with a plaid tunic accompanies the blouse. This blouse may be copied in size 36 with 2⅝ yards of 36-inch material; the skirt ([illegible]) requires for size 24, 4½ yards of 36-inch material or 3⅝ yds. of 42-inch material.

Number [illegible]—sizes 34 to 44.
Number [illegible]—sizes 32 to 44.

Ancient Egyptian Mortgages.

Of all the numerous Egyptian papyri dating from the Greco-Roman period and preserved in the British Museum none can be said to be of greater interest than those throwing light on the social conditions and manners and customs of the period. Many of these documents are mortgages, bills of sale and marriage contracts. Of the first named class a very interesting one is dated in the twentieth year of Cleopatra and Ptolemy. It appears that a shepherd named Menthu and his mother, Tuanir, finding themselves in difficulties, mortgaged their field to a woman named [illegible] for the sum of 600 pieces of silver, which they promised to repay in eight months' time with interest. In case of failure of this condition they were willing to forfeit the field without further trouble or litigation. After giving the measurements of the land and particulars of its boundaries the document is attested by Horu-sa-aat, scribe of Ueir-ar, alias Amenhotep.—London Globe.

Test For Butter.

Here is a test for butter so simple that any housewife can put it into successful practice: A clean piece of white paper is smeared with a little of the suspected butter. The paper is then rolled up and set on fire. If the butter is pure the smell of the burnt paper is rather pleasant, but the odor is distinctly tallowy if the "butter" is made up wholly or in part of animal fat.—Chicago News.

Butter in Pie.

A bit of butter about the size of a large bean improves the filling of a lemon pie, making it richer and smoother. Sometimes as much as a spoonful is used. A Frenchman often adds a tiny bit of butter to a cherry pie, and an apple pie is also improved in the same way.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvaney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 3 to 16 inches in length, the larger ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claims one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only [illegible] worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits, destroys the worms. The price is $2.00. My Remedy known as D'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, [illegible] lost energy and is a life saver. D'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. D'Well kills the germs, also kills blood poisons. Sold only by Prof. Mulvaney. Write for further information free.

Our Point of View

Things come to those wait, but it is well to be watchful and ready to dodge some of them.

A Toronto paper is publishing a series of articles on "The Great Trials of History," and somebody has been mean enough to remark that the greatest trial of Canada is Bourassa.

There is a town in Ohio where the saloon keepers limit their patrons to four drinks a day, but as there are ten saloons a citizen has no trouble in getting enough of liquid joy to produce a sizeable drunk.

The Globe says that the per capita average of money in Canada is $35.06. This great family journal does not question the accuracy of the figures, but it is rather distressing when we feel in our pocket for the per capita to find that it isn't there.

STILL FAR FROM PARLIAMENT.

The Home Rule question apparently is as far from settlement as before the conference. There was, indeed, not much hope from the first of agreement in this way, for neither party apparently was prepared to compromise. Mr. Asquith adheres to the un-Liberal refusal to consult the people. He is unable also to reconcile the Nationalist forces in his following with the suggestion for the federalization of the United Kingdom, Ireland being treated as two units. Similarly Ulster's determination to remain under the Imperial parliament removes the possibility of grant-Ulster home rule within home rule for Ireland. The contending forces have thus reached an impasse, with civil war threatening. Will a recognition of the critical situation thus developed finally bring the seemingly irreconcilable forces to a spirit of concession? It is unthinkable that with the horrors of civil war threatening, Mr. Asquith will commit the unpardonable folly of forcing the issue, and yet it looks as he might do so.

If Breathing is Difficult,
If Nostrils are Plugged,
You Have Catarrh

At Last a Remedy That Already Has Permanently Cured Thousands.

Perhaps you haven't heard of the new remedy—it's so pleasant to use—fills the nose, throat and lungs with a healing balsamic vapor like the air of the pine woods. It's really a wonderful remedy—contains that marvelous antiseptic only found in the Blue Gum tree of Australia.

The name of this grand specific is Catarrhozone, and you can't find its equal on earth for coughs, colds, catarrh or throat trouble. You see it's not longer necessary to drug the stomach—that spoils digestion—just simply inhale the balsamic essences of Catarrhozone, which are so rich in healing that they drive out every trace of Catarrh in no time.

"I look upon Catarrhozone as the most valuable medical discovery of recent years," writes R. V. Potter, of Prince Albert. "As a long sufferer from nasal and throat catarrh I was obliged to take considerable medicine, and, although it helped me, my digestion was always disturbed and the catarrh didn't go away. With Catarrhozone it was different. It cleaned my nose and throat of all phlegm and discharges, enabled me to breathe freely, relieved a stuffy feeling in my nose and frontal headaches. To-day I am entirely free from catarrh, and I use my Catarrhozone Inhaler a little every day in order to prevent the disease from returning."

With Catarrhozone experimenting ends. A permanent curative action begins. Lasting relief from Catarrh results. The large size costs $1.00, last two months and is guaranteed. Small size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

J. H. BURNHAM DELIVERED EXCELLENT SPEECH

last and all the time—they desire to remain within the British Empire. The weakness of the Conservative position unquestionably is—admittedly is—that $35,000,000 or thereabouts will be expended, to a certain extent outside the country. It is admitted that half of that, under the divine management of the Liberals, would have to be spent out of the country, because they simply could not build all portions of their navy here. I confess that is the weakness of our position; we do not say—or I presume we do not say—that our position at all points is invincibly strong; we do say that, in comparison with anything else that has been suggested our position is incomparably strong. But, who wants to embark upon a great military policy such as the Liberal policy is? Who wants to unfurl the Canadian flag of practical, if not nominal, independence, and sail the seas provoking conflict and disaster? The Liberals are either sincere or insincere. If they are insincere we do not wish to have anything more to do with them, nor does the country. But if they are sincere, then they propose to develop a policy which would place us alongside of such nations as Germany and France, who are now making a mad rush to complete a naval policy such as will be suitable to their station. I am told that Canada must do likewise. Now there is no force in the argument of building a tin-pot navy. There is no such idea on the part of Liberals. Their desire is to build and develop a great naval force. I am free to acknowledge that while that is an exceedingly extravagant and unwise proposition, I am sufficiently imperialistic and sufficiently loyal to wish to adopt that plan rather than nothing at all. But we find no reciprocity of spirit exhibited by our friends. They will not have the Conservative policy and, not having that policy, they will throw down their arms and wreck the whole scheme; they will sneer at emergencies and let everything, to use a common phrase, go to the devil. We are not like that. If these gentlemen were on the Treasury benches we might disapprove of their policy and say we had a much better one, but we are not so narrow, so stupid, so unloyal if I may not use the word disloyal—so unloyal, so entirely anti-imperialistic, as to decline to do anything to help the empire which we are supposed to adore, if we cannot have our own way. It is well to talk about sheep and cattle, but we had better see if we cannot develop some sort of a manly spirit—as well. What kind of an education did they give in Newcastle to the Leviathan of Alberta? Is it absolutely impossible for us to develop an independent spirit, a loftiness of conception, along with the material advantages of the world? Has the hon. gentleman never heard of Athens? Does he not know that twenty-five hundred years ago there was developed the spirit of freedom, of independence, of philosophy and of science the like of which the world has never seen? The whole history of Athens simply teems with the spirit displayed by her people. Many and many a time she might have sacrificed herself to material advantage, but she preferred to bequeath to posterity a noble name and a noble example. This we should never forget. Canada is in danger of becoming very materialistic. From one end of this country to the other we hear talk about free food, about dear food, about the high cost of living, and about the tango. That is all that is going on in the country now. Theories of Government are not being worked out; they are not working themselves out, and the Liberal politicians will not allow them to be worked out. The hon. member for Red Deer is deluded by baits; he sees a fish flashing by, with sparkling scales, straightway, makes a bite at it. He would say: 'Why do you seek fish in the South Sea when you can get them right here? He has no broad conception of things. The evolution of government has brought us to the time when the freedom of the people allows them and prompts them to manage their own business, but, strange to say, there are so many anomalies in the twentieth century, and we are now confronted with a vicious paradox. Over-supply produces scarcity; over-production produces starvation, and surplus of material produces stringency. It would be difficult indeed to unearth anything more absurd than this illogical fact. Why is it that we do not set ourselves to find out why these things are so? Is it that we must devote ourselves to something sentimental: to some esoteric theory such as free trade which exists only in the imagination of the hon. member for Red Deer, the gentleman who voted for our bounties? He despises tariffs, yet he overlooked the tariff which collects money for the public treasury and voted for bounties that put money into the private pockets of individuals."

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: I rise to a point of order. If my hon. friend is stating this as a fact, I may say that I have never consciously voted for the imposition of a tariff or the payment of a bounty. I do not think my hon. friend has the information as to when I gave such a vote.

Mr. BURNHAM: "I do not wish to be in the slightest degree inaccurate, and I was particular to make my assertion when the hon. member was present. I refused to vote for the lead bounty last year, but the hon. gentleman, on one occasion at least, I think, voted for it. If however, he did not vote for it, if I am not mistaken of it."

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: "I rise again to correct my hon. friend. I made as good a speech as ever I could against it."

Mr. BURNHAM: "All I have to say, then, is that I am utterly unable to understand the English language as spoken by the hon. member for Red Deer. I could a tale unfold, but I will not unfold it. However, as the hon. gentleman said in the course of his fine speech that he has a conscience, I will leave the matter with that conscience.

"No branch of industry—and I must be excused for being, perhaps, a little irrelevant—could possibly thrive if it were not given proper attention; if the stock were not taken and a balance struck; if there were not some intimate control and supervision exercised in regard to it. And yet, notwithstanding the fact that this House and the people generally are concerned most intimately with everything that takes place in this country, they are reproached in the most scathing language by the hon. member for Red Deer for failing to know all about the conditions of industry in Canada. He reproaches us with our ignorance, but would not allow us a commission which would find out why we do not know these things. And yet he says we are inconsistent. There are some very striking passages in the hon. gentleman's address, but I would direct your attention, Mr. Speaker, to this fact, that whilst government ownership and government control that is to say, public ownership and public control, are spreading the world over, there seems a haphazard condition here, so that they are neither one thing nor the other, and we are confronted with the extraordinary fact that we decline to provide a decent living wage for the working man, and yet demand that he shall live in a decent manner. We also decline to deal with the problem of unemployment and wonder that a starving man is inclined to strike. The injustice is done on both sides. We fail to regulate and provide for the employer those peaceful conditions which would enable him to develop his industry and we decline to provide conditions which only a government can provide for employees which will enable them to provide for the present and for the future in some respectable and certain manner. These things of course are extremely obvious. Books galore may be written upon them. Every president of every university in the world has written a book this last year or two upon that subject. Every man of prominence in every government has dealt with the question. Commissions have found out causes and commissions have failed to find out causes, and yet here we are in Canada, industrious as we are, painstaking as we are, capable as we are—and I think I may be forgiven for saying so—and yet we are not endeavoring to bend our energy to the solution of the most obvious and most pressing problems. It is useless to say that free trade is a perpetual or effectual bulwark against such a thing as the unduly high cost of living. It is admitted by the very speaker who leads free trade in this connection that it has not had the effect of lowering or preserving the cost of living in Great Britain. That cost has risen by fifteen per cent or thereabouts. Well, all we can say about that is that it is not a question between free trade and protection. It is a question of comparative effect of economic policies under the conditions that exist. It is idle to suppose or to [illegible]

"I would like to deal for a moment with one or two [illegible] made by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Clark). He scoffed at an emergency. Are we to understand that there is no emergency in the British Government at this minute over the navy question. I do not wish to meddle in other people's affairs, but the cables all tell us that at the present moment Great Britain is convulsed with an emergency and yet because the hon. member for Red Deer has not had it proved to him in black and white so that everybody would laugh at him if he did not admit it, he will not provide for an emergency. He will do nothing, he will throw his arms down and let it all go. He follows only too well the motto of the free traders, laissez faire, let everything go, let well enough alone, that is what that means. There are 4,500 millionaires by the last census in Great Britain, and who has the audacity to tell us there is no poverty there? Why are people leaving Great Britain? If the people were leaving this country as they are leaving Great Britain wages would be high and there would be no unemployed; but the fact is they are leaving Great Britain in such tremendous numbers that they themselves consider it a reproach that the people should leave Great Britain for another country under the conditions. It is not fair to argue in that way, it is inaccurate.

One half of the magnificent speech of the right hon. the leader of the Opposition (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) referred to the very bad business of the Prime Minister in calling the House on the 15th of January instead of the 15th of October. The hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Clark) knocked that all on the head in one minute but all I can say is that if the Opposition are going on like this, fighting each other in mortal combat, we will have to put a ring around them and charge an admission fee. [illegible] possibly a political advantage, was so distasteful to him and to the Senate that they decided to throw it out. That is to say, rather than forego a political advantage they would throw the material advantages of the people of this country to the four winds of Heaven. Are they aware that this Government is not responsible to the Senate? This is not oligarchical government, notwithstanding the fact that they are trying to make it so; we have still popular government in Canada, and if the government passes a bill against which the opposition think it their duty to make a protest let them make a protest and preserve their position without prejudice if they like; then, when this Government go to the country on this record, if the people disapprove they will turn the Government out. But the hon. gentlemen opposite know that the people would not disapprove and that is the reason why they killed that Bill. If that Bill meant that the Government were committing suicide, does anybody tell me that the hon. gentlemen opposite would not have provided a halter? Not at all, they would have said: certainly we disapprove of the Bill, go to the country; go further if you like, that is where you will end. But they did not do that, for they knew that with that Bill and other Bills of first importance and advantage to this country, they were not only out of the Treasury benches but hopelessly out, and that they might never see them again in their lifetime. That is what affected them and that is why the Senate was called upon to be so judicial.

Let me say one thing which convinces me, although it may not convince hon. gentlemen opposite. Living is cheapest in this world in that country which has the highest measure of protection, namely, France. Of all the countries on the face of the earth the country that is the cheapest to live in is France. She, two years ago, so approved of the policy of protection that she raised her whole system of protection by 20 per cent. If that is not a direct argument in fact contradiction of the statement of the hon. member for Red Deer I do not know what he—and it is not borrowed from theory but from practice and fact. I was very much upset,—although I may recover—by a statement of the same hon. gentleman about free wool from Australia. Why, Australia is a protected country the same as Canada. Why does he not treat the question in a logical way? and treat free wheat from Canada the same as Australians do their wool from Australia. But that unfortunately is generally his failing. He is very quiet, very picturesque, very deft and very polite, but as to being cogent we must allow to having our reservations. He said the price of Canadian flour was higher in Canada than in Great Britain. Is he aware that quality for quality it is not so? Flour is flour, he thinks. Well, I can tell him it is not. There are several hundred flours and that makes all the difference in the world. If he wants an analogy, a small one it is true, let him take the case of the old country tailor who sends his goods out to this country, pays the tariff and yet sells them at the same price he charges in England. How does that happen? I do not buy those clothes myself, I make my own, but if we are to have these considerations of trade brought up before us all the time, why are they not dealt with in a fair manner? There is no question that the Conservative party has made mistakes in the past and has profited by them. It is admitted that different conditions are suitable to different countries and to argue at large as if Canada were Britain and Britain were Canada, but shows the ineptitude of the hon. gentleman on these questions. However, I fancy that a due regard to patriotism and a certain virility which we have inherited from our ancestors both Gaelic and British, will enable us to weather the storm. I know that the Americans do not start to howl as if everything had gone to bow-wows. When they get into a bit of a slough, they set to work to get out of it, and they have set an example to the whole world. They cannot be excelled for strength of mind, and body and character, and surely we are not going to throw our doors open and howl as if the country was something we should be ashamed of. [illegible] Let us face the facts in a scientific manner and deal with them accordingly, and then we shall be much more edified than by a [illegible] of nonsense, and I am afraid, [illegible] condition.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,390,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,994
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred ...	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1906 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in du course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $8,869,737.32. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephone at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

Good Time to Turn Farmer.

In theory there never was a better time than right now for a sensible man to move from city to country. The movement has been away from the farm until prices of all kinds of food and labor are high. There is nothing in sight to indicate that prices will be greatly reduced by increased production. A crop well grown and handled with good business judgment will be reasonably sure of sale at a fair price. There never was a time when it was so easy to learn new methods and the principles of scientific farming. A man starting now may receive at once the benefit of thirty years of the experience and study of good farmers and scientific experts.—H. W. Collingwood in Metropolitan Magazine.

English Gambling Schools.

Obtain an entry into some of the many gambling schools in the North of England, and you will probably find out how it is that men manage to live without work.

Hundreds of these men attend the gambling schools regularly two and three times a week and risk their all on the tossing of two coins.

Rings are formed. Copper is used at one, silver at another, gold at another. A man is paid to toss up two coins, and the "punters" wager their pounds, shillings, or pence, as the case may be, on the coins dropping heads or tails. "Crows" keep a look out for the approach of the police.

One week a man may be in the gold ring, the next in the silver, and the third in the copper circle. A gambler in the West Riding of Yorkshire was pointed out to The Answers' correspondent as having lost over £2,000 in these schools, whilst another makes a point of speculating the whole of his rent-money every week.

Some men, of course, do well, but there are hundreds of Northern wives and daughters who would delight in the abolition of these "schools."—Answers.

THE JUDGE ERRED

His Mistake Clearly Explained by the Old Colored Woman

The judge of the juvenile court, leaning forward in his chair, looked searchingly from the discreet and very ragged piccaninny before his desk to the ample and solicitous form of the culprit's mother. "Why do you send him to the railroad yards to pick up coal?" demanded his honor. "You know it is against the law to send your child where he will be in jeopardy of his life."

"'Deed, judge, I doesn't send 'im. I nebber has sent 'im, 'deed"—

"Doesn't he bring home the coal?" interrupted the judge impatiently.

"But, judge, I whips 'im, judge, ebery time he brings it. I whips de little rapscallion till he cayn't sit, 'deed I does."

The careful disciplinarian turned her broad, shiny countenance approvingly upon her undisturbed offspring, but kept a conciliatory eye for the judge.

"You burn the coal he brings, do you not?" persisted the judge.

"Burns it—burns it—sure I burns it. Wy, judge, I has to git it out ob de way."

"Why don't you send him back with it?" His honor smiled indulgently as he snapped out the question.

"Send 'im back, judge!" exclaimed the woman, throwing up her hands in a gesture of astonishment. "Send 'im back! Wy, judge, ain't yo' just done been told me I didn't oughter send my chile to no such dangersome and jeopardous place?"—Youth's Companion.

The Skeeters Return.

Night time, and the skeeters come,
Round and round they're winging.
Where! Where are they coming from?
Listen to their singing.

"Z-z-z-z-z!" the skeeters say,
Bite all night and sleep all day.
Never can keep them away—
Fans, smoke or kerosene—
Even nip you through a screen.

Had Stomach Rumblings, Distress Before Meals

Was Seldom Free From That Weary, Dreary, Half-Dead Feeling

Now Cured and Gives Good Advice To Others With Dyspeptic Tendencies

If you have any stomach distress at all you will certainly be interested in the following experience which is told by Mr. Edward Dawkins.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

DAILY SHORT STORY

ROYAL ETIQUETTE.

In England It Assumes a Number of Curious Phases.

THINGS THE KING CANNOT DO

He Is Barred From Accepting Gifts From Individuals, He Must Not Belong to a Club and May Not Marry Without Parliament's Consent.

It may sound a little curious, but there are quite a number of things which, despite his exalted position as sovereign of the realm, King George V. cannot do. These disabilities range over all sorts of matters and concern etiquette, politics, religion and law. To begin with etiquette, it is an established practice that his majesty must never call upon or grant an audience to a foreign monarch except in the presence of a responsible minister. Etiquette also precludes him from accepting a gift which a loyal subject may wish to make him. Should, however, the gift be a joint offering the prohibition does not apply. This enables King George to accept gifts which are subscribed for by a number of people together.

A king never writes a letter to anybody outside his family circle. All other correspondence has to be conducted through one of his secretaries. Nor does King George accept invitations to dine or stop with a subject. What he does when he wishes to pay such a visit is to invite himself. Another strictly observed point of etiquette is that on ascending the throne a king shall withdraw from any clubs to which he has hitherto belonged. Similarly he cannot become a Free Mason, and if he happens to be one at the date of his accession he must resign from the craft. King George, however, has not been initiated.

Even in affairs of the heart a sovereign must bow to the will of others. Although King Cophetua might have loved and shared his throne with a beggar maid, the royal marriage act would render the occurrence of any such romantic union impossible in England. Members of the blood royal must have the sanction of parliament before they can marry, and this would certainly not be accorded unless the birth and position of the lady were beyond reproach.

An English king's position toward the law is somewhat peculiar. Theoretically he is above the law. In practice, however, he has to obey it, just as have his subjects. He must observe the established legal system of the country. Any royal proclamation which he issues is only binding in so far as it is founded upon an existing law. It cannot alter the common law or create a new offense, nor can a king set up private tribunals, such as the star chamber, or add to the jurisdiction of a court. By a special act of parliament it has also been decided that if his majesty were to lose an action brought against him by the revenue authorities he would be liable for the payment of costs.

By the law of the land the king cannot possibly commit an offense. Any injury or wrong suffered by a subject at his hands has to be attributed to the "mistake of his advisers;" hence it happens that King George is the only person in Great Britain who cannot arrest a suspected felon, even if such a one were to be seen by him entering Buckingham palace or Windsor castle. The reason for this is because no action for wrongful arrest could lie against him, and therefore if the person arrested by him were proved innocent there would then be a wrong without a remedy. Another legal disability of the king is that he is barred of all rights in matters relating to land after a lapse of sixty years. He is also prohibited from serving on a jury or from giving evidence.

Until so comparatively recent a period as 1870 if a subject were convicted of treason or felony the king could claim his property. Another lapsed prerogative of the crown is one known as "corody.") During its existence a king who wanted to advance the interests of a royal chaplain could compel a bishop to support such a clergyman until a benefice had been found for him. Nowadays he has not even the right of founding a bishopric or creating ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Similarly he must always be a member of the Church of England and cannot change his religion.

The theory that the king "reigns, but does not govern" is amply borne out by the political system of the country. While the members of parliament are his majesty's "faithful commons," they have certain privileges which he himself does not possess. Thus King George can summon or prorogue parliament at will, but he cannot prolong it beyond a definite period. Similarly he is absolutely debarred from imposing any sort of taxation whatever without first securing the consent of parliament. So jealously guarded is this privilege that a king cannot create new officers with new fees or annex new fees to existing officers, as such a course would be considered as imposing a fresh tax. In bygone times, however, when an English monarch was in want of funds he would levy taxes right and left and without asking anybody.

The francise does not extend to English monarchs. King George is one of the few men possessing a genuine stake in the country without the privilege of recording a vote. — London Bellman.

RAILWAY DETECTIVE

The secret service is a hard game to tackle, but, like all kinds of work, it has its easy jobs. One of them is that of special agent for a railroad. The agent is supposed to trace those who steal or destroy railroad property.

When he is notified that a trunk or other article of baggage is missing he finds out by its number from where it was sent and follows it on the books to the last station where it has been checked. Then he notifies the police in the vicinity between the station where the baggage was last checked and the station where it should have been checked. The police get busy, and probably the property is soon recovered and the thieves put in jail. The baggage is then turned over to the special agent, who notifies the railroad official that he has recovered the stolen goods.

If a freight car is robbed the special agent pursues the same tactics. He finds out where the car was last sealed and the place where the car was reported as having its seal broken. The police or constables in the country between the two points are notified, and if they fail to capture the robbers the railroad may never hear again of the stolen goods. Wherever destruction has occurred to railroad property it is usually police officers who trace and arrest those guilty.

However, the special agent must be a keen judge of human nature and with sufficient tact to make himself popular with the police officers in his territory. Usually he is an old time detective and is well enough acquainted with detectives and police throughout the country to obtain results where an outsider would fail.

AN ARTIST OF NERVE.

Remarkable Daring and Coolness In an Alpine Accident.

The architect Viollet le Duc was one day on the Schwarzenberg glacier at a height of about 3,400 feet, accompanied by Baptiste, the guide, who marched in front. The two men were attached to each other by a rope, as is usual in Alpine mountaineering.

The guide had passed over a crevasse, but when M. Viollet le Duc attempted to cross it he failed and fell into the abyss. The guide tried to pull him out, but instead he found himself gradually descending.

The architect perceived that his companion if he persisted in the attempt to save him would surely share his fate, and he asked if Baptiste had a family.

"A wife and children," was the answer.

"Then," said Viollet le Duc quietly, "I shall cut the rope."

He did so and fell, but a block of ice thirty feet lower down stopped his descent. When Baptiste saw this and that for a time the danger was lessened he went in search of help and returned with four stout peasants. Three hours afterward Viollet le Duc was extricated.

In spite of his perilous position the ruling passion was strong with the artist, for, although he was almost covered with icicles from the dripping water, he had contrived to make drawings of the novel effects he was able to perceive.

[illegible] Because of the Way He Solved the Closet Space Problem.

I must tell all my brothers how my wife and I have solved the problem which so bothers those who dwell where there is but little closet room. With one dressing case between us there was not room for all our things. As to the closets, they were crammed full, and even under the bed there were many hat boxes. So I purchased another dressing case.

I then took all my clothes, which had been crowding my wife's in her dressing case, and arranged them in my own. In the top drawer I put my handkerchiefs, collars and ties and all those other little articles of finery which every man loves so much. In the second drawer I placed my shirts and underwear and devoted the lower drawer to my trousers, neatly folded, and my hosiery. My wife was delighted, as it gave her her own dresser all to herself and relieved the closet somewhat.

But in a day or so the new plan proved to have a few defects, so at my wife's suggestion I emptied one of the upper drawers in my dresser, putting its contents into the other and allowed my wife to use the now vacant receptacle for a few of her jabots, scarfs, etc. The second day it was decided that my shirts and trousers could occupy the same drawer, the lowest one, so this was fixed, and into the second drawer my wife moved a few of her petticoats and such things.

Soon finding that I was still using too much space, I permitted her to put my collars and such effects into the lowest drawer with my trousers, etc., thus giving her both of the upper drawers and the next and still leaving me plenty of room in the one bottom drawer.

Since then, however, I have found that I do not require so much space for my few things, so have taken them out of the bottom drawer and packed them into a hat box, which I keep under the bed, thereby giving my wife all the drawers in my dressing case. I find the present arrangement very satisfactory, as all I have to do now is to empty the hat box on the bed when I want anything in it and then, when I have made my selection, sweep the other articles back into place.

In this way I have solved the dressing case problem, and everything is quite pleasant in our home.—Paul West in Delineator.

Escaped the Bullets.

Dr. James Craik, who was Washington's family physician, was with the Father of His Country in the expedition against the French and Indians in 1754, and the next year he attended General Braddock in his fatal campaigning. Fifteen years later, while exploring wild lands in the western districts of Virginia, Dr. Craik encountered a band of Indians led by an aged chief, who informed the physician through an interpreter that he had made a long journey to see Colonel Washington, at whom in the battle of Monongahela he had fired his rifle fifteen times and ordered all his young men to do the same. In fact, Washington had two horses killed under him that day, and his coat was pierced with four bullets, yet he left the battlefield unscathed.

A Chemical Experiment.

When the genial Quaker, Isaac T. Hopper, met a boy with a dirty face or hands he would stop him and inquire if he ever studied chemistry. The boy, with a wondering stare, would answer, "No."

"Well, then, I will teach thee how to perform a curious chemical experiment," said Friend Hopper. "Go home, take a piece of soap, put it in water and rub it briskly on thy hands and face. Thou hast no idea what a beautiful froth it will make and how much whiter thy skin will be. That's a chemical experiment. I advise thee to try it."—Life of Isaac T. Hopper.

'Let him alone,' quoth the gentleman. 'God is just. This boy's father did I kill five years since and never [illegible] and [illegible] revenged it.' And the gentleman died the second morning."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not Sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 28 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 35,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,750,000 bushels.

The very root of the electrical industry is iron. Without iron it is doubtful if the larger generators and the mighty motors could be built, for the powerful magnets upon which these inventions depend for their power are all made of soft iron either in the form of thin plates or long wires covered with insulation.

Nearly every one is familiar with the common horseshoe magnet, which is but a piece of steel bent in the shape of a horseshoe and charged with magnetism. When a steel bar of this shape is rubbed against another magnet it is "charged" and will remain so for a long time. The magnets used in electrical machinery are of the induction type—that is, the magnetism vanishes just as soon as the current is taken away from them. If you wind a long insulated wire tightly around a soft iron core and send through this wire a weak current of electricity the core will be instantly possessed of strong magnetic qualities. This fact is the basis of all electric motors and generators. The field coils are usually made of a soft iron core wound with yards and yards of insulated wire. When the current is sent through this wire the soft iron core is turned into a powerful magnet, and this magnetic power is used to drive motors or to generate more electricity.—Electrical Bulletin.

Preserving Spiders' Webs.

Naturalists employ an interesting method to preserve all kinds of spiders' webs. The webs are first sprayed with [illegible] with artist's shellac, and then, should they be of the ordinary geometric form, they are pressed carefully against a glass plate, the supporting strands being at the same time severed. After the shellac has dried the [illegible] carrying the webs can be stored away in a cabinet. [illegible] dome shaped webs [illegible] preserved in their original [illegible] them with shellac [illegible] them to dry before [illegible] supports. Many [illegible] very beautiful, and all are characteristic of the spider [illegible] webs they belong, so that, from a scientific standpoint, their permanent preservation is very desirable.—Harper's Weekly.

A Country Doctor's Record.

Dr. James Martin, who was one of the oldest medical practitioners in Scotland, has just died at Dunfermline. When he celebrated his jubilee as a doctor some few years ago he made this statement: "During my fifty years in practice I have attended [illegible] patients, administered chloroform [illegible] times with absolute immunity from fatal results, had [illegible] births ([illegible] consecutive cases without a death), made about [illegible] visits and traveled about [illegible] miles." [illegible]

NAPOLEON LOVED SNUFF.

And He Pinched the Boxes as Well as the Pungent Dust.

Napoleon loved snuff; not only on the battlefield, but at home in the council, he had recourse to the dust, especially when his schemes were unfavorably received and he wished to hide his uneasiness or impatience. Unable to sit still in his elbow chair, he would try in a thousand ways to divert attention from himself, and among other devices, as soon as he saw a member's eye fixed on him would hold out his arm and shake his thumb and forefinger, to signify that he wished for a pinch of snuff. Not less than four, and even six, snuffboxes disappeared in this manner during a single sitting, and it was not till he had left the council chamber that he became aware of the larceny. So confirmed was this habit that some of the councilors, whose snuffboxes were heirlooms or presents from foreign princes, hit upon the expedient of carrying cheap papier mache or wooden boxes for the emperor to pocket. The snuffboxes, however, always returned to their owners and in doing so were often found to have undergone a very pleasant metamorphosis. By some necromancy a wooden or tortoise shell box, on coming out from the imperial pocket, was usually transformed into one of gold, set around with diamonds, or bearing the emperor's miniature on the lid.—William Matthews, "Hours With Men and Books."

NOISY BUTTERFLIES.

One Species Produces a Sound Like the Snap of a Whip.

One does not think of butterflies as making any sounds, nor of caterpillars as noisy creatures, yet according to the late Samuel Hubbard Scudder in "Frail Children of the Air," the careful student will find some use for his ears when observing the habits of both. Says the author:

It is a fact that certain butterflies produce sound during certain movements. The "whip" butterfly when surprised makes a noise like the snap of a lash by opening and shutting its wings in quick succession. Some hibernating butterflies when disturbed make a faint hissing sound by slowly depressing and raising their wings. The noise thus produced resembles that made by blowing slowly through closed teeth. Other sounds resemble the friction of sandpaper.

A large number of caterpillars make sound by striking the head against the leaf on which they are resting or by swinging the head from side to side, catching the mandibles in the roughness of the leaf or on the silken threads spun on it. It is said that a certain kind of chrysalis when disturbed emits a slight, sharp chirp or clicking noise.

A Hard Face.

Bobby's papa, who is a naval officer, took him to call upon the family of a brother officer who had just returned from a cruise to the tropics.

Among the treasures exhibited was a large red and blue parrot, whose appearance and conversational powers proved most fascinating to the little boy. While the grownups were engaged in talking over old times Bobby, left to his own devices, drew nearer to the parrot's cage, bent on making friends.

Presently there was a squawk from the parrot and a little frightened cry from Bobby, who ran to his father, exhibiting a bleeding forefinger.

The little man was brave, though, as befitted the son of a sailor. He brushed away his tears and said:

"Gee, papa, but that bird has a hard face!"—Harper's Magazine.

Tips to Travelers.

Take a candle in your bag and a box of safety matches. When they are wanted you will be glad they were put in. The space required for them is small. A passenger on a steamer that was wrecked had a small candle, which enabled her to collect some of her most valuable possessions when the lights went out after the collision. Carry a few pens in your bag if you do not use a fountain pen. You will find that it is worth while, as the pens provided at some hotels and other public places are often so bad that it is impossible to use them with any satisfaction.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Just the Opposite.

An Irishman at a fair got poked in the eye with a stick and took proceedings against the offender. [illegible] the magistrate. "Come, now, [illegible] believe he meant to put your eye out."

"Faith, you're right this time," said Pat, "for I believe he tried to put it farther in."—London Tit-Bits.

The Moral Stimulus of Good Clothing.

[illegible] self respect [illegible] clothes. Their clothes earn them the approval of their fellows. In turn they are forced to grow to fill the measure of good opinion, so that, forced forward by the clothes he wears, man attains [illegible] their highest capability.—Sartorial Art Journal.

The Exception.

"Doesn't your husband [illegible] cats, Mrs. Binks?"

"No, indeed. He hates all cats except a little kitty they have at his club."—Baltimore American.

Bedouins and Water.

It is not unusual to hear a Bedouin upon reaching a camp where water is offered him refuse it with the remark, "I drank only yesterday." On the Bedouins' long marches across dry countries the size of the water skins is nicely calculated to just outlast the journey, and they rarely allow themselves to break the habit of abstemiousness, as this would be sure to make their next water fast all the harder. They are accustomed from infancy to regard water as a most precious commodity and use it with religious economy. They know every hollow and nook in the mountains where water may be found. Their camels and goats, which they take with them on their marches to supply them with milk and meat, live principally on the scanty herbage and foliage of the thorny mimosa. Neither men nor animals drink more than once in forty-eight hours. No wonder they can subsist where invaders quickly perish.

Mice That Subsist on Scorpions.

Among the queer forms of animal life that inhabit Death valley is a mouse that has acquired such a taste for scorpions that they form its entire bill of fare. The scorpion carries its formidable armament in the end of its slender, elongated abdomen in the shape of an exceedingly venomous hooked sting. When disturbed it elevates this in the air and goes in search of its disturber. But it is comparatively slow in its motions, while mice are proverbial for their quickness the world over. The mouse learned many generations ago where the scorpion carries its weapon, and when he meets it he leaps at the uplifted abdomen, takes off the sting at a single bite and proceeds to make a meal of his helpless prey. It is supposed to be the only animal that relishes scorpions.

A Point of Information.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge, "if the evidence shows in your minds that pneumonia was the cause of the man's death the prisoner cannot be convicted."

An hour later a messenger came from the jury room.

"The gentlemen of the jury, my lord," he said, "desire information."

"On what point of evidence?"

"None, my lord. They want to know how to spell 'pneumonia.'"—London Answers.

To find out what ails the gas range. To stand in line an hour for two trading stamps. To set up his wife's brother in business. To get up winter nights to investigate "robbers." To smile when his old sweethearts' pictures are burned up. To prefer halma at home to billiards at the club. To drop his old friends because they are "vulgar." To give up coffee because it disagrees with his wife.—Puck.

Frightened Off.

A Washington car conductor born in London and still a cockney has succeeded in extracting thrills from the alphabet—imparting excitement to the names of the national capital's streets. On a recent Sunday morning he was calling the streets thus:

"Haitch!"

"High!"

"Jay!"

"Kay!"

"Hell!"

At this point three prim ladies picked up their prayer books and left the car.—Lippincott's.

He Didn't Know Her.

The telephone call of a suit of apartments in a ladies' boarding house is 199.

One young lady, a recent comer, answered the call and was astonished to hear a man's voice inquire hurriedly, "Is this one nine o?"

When she could catch her breath the lady, who was a very proper young lady indeed, replied: "I think not. Were we ever introduced?"—Brooklyn Life.

Odd Test of Naval Vessel.

It is not often that a deliberate attempt is made to break a ship in two, but that is what the British admiralty department did when it suspended the torpedo boat destroyer Wolf by the middle without support at the ends and then at the ends without support in the middle in order to discover whether the boat was so weak that it would break amidships because of the unevenly distributed support of heavy waves at sea. The Wolf stood the strain not only of this but of subsequent tests. The experiments were made because it had been charged that the boats of this class were structurally weak.

A Veteran Tenor.

"He was a star of first magnitude in 1868," says a writer in the Frankfurter Zeitung, referring to Albert Niemann, who celebrated his eightieth birthday recently. "For many years he sang the heroic tenor parts in grand opera on the most important stages of the world and had the wisdom to retire in 1888, while still in the fullness of his powers. The veteran singer [illegible] about and wears his snow white head [illegible] as he did the blond one as Faust in the memorable performances when Pauline Lucca was the Marguerite."

Defended a Little Boy.

Nine-year-old Robert came home from school one day with a dirty face and a torn stocking and a generally disheveled appearance. There was a bump on his forehead which he was manfully trying to conceal by pulling his cap down over his face.

"Why, Robert, what have you been doing? How did you get so dirty? And what has happened to your face?" asked his mother.

Robert looked mysterious.

"Oh, I've been tryin' to keep a little boy from bein' licked," he replied, with an offhand air of accustomed virtue.

His mother was delighted.

"How fine and brave of you, dear," she cried. "That is what you must always do. You must always stand up for the little boys. I am sure you are going to grow up to be a hero. You are a splendid little man, and mother is proud of you. Who was the little boy?"

"Me," replied Robert. "I broke Jimmy Andrews' pencil box, and he tried to wallop me. It was an awful fight. He won."—Philadelphia Times.

A Fair Sized Trout.

The gentleman was strolling across a large estate when he came upon a man fishing. "What sort of fish do you catch here?" he said.

"Mostly trout," replied the man.

"How many have you caught?"

"About ten or twelve, sir."

"What is about the heaviest you have caught?" continued the gentleman.

"Well, I don't know the weight, but the water sunk two or three feet when I pulled it out!"

Divides the Waters.

Situated exactly at the highest point of the divide of the Rocky mountains, on the Crow's Nest division of the Canadian Pacific railway, in British Columbia, is a hotel. When it rains in the mountains the water which falls on the eastern slope of the hotel roof trickles away to join a tiny rivulet, which in due time mingles its waters with the Atlantic. The water falling just beyond the ridgepole, on the other side of the roof, flows westerly and ultimately into the Pacific.

And All of Them Americans.

An English visitor has recently been expressing his wonderment at the facility with which America assimilates its stream of immigrants. A friend with whom he was talking on the subject remarked: "My housemaid is a Norwegian, my grocer a Scotchman, my butcher is a German, my druggist is a Finn, my barber an Italian, my newsman a Jew, my laundryman is Irish, my fishmonger English, my florist Greek and my tailor Russian." —American Hebrew.

Sure on One Point.

"Do you believe that great wealth has a tendency to keep a man out of heaven?" queried the party who was addicted to the conundrum habit.

"I am not prepared to express an opinion on that subject," answered the student of human nature, "but I know that great wealth has kept many a man out of the penitentiary."—Chicago News.

Stuttered Out the Child's Name.

Flannery—It seems his full name is Dinnis K. K. K. Casey. What's all thim K's fur? Flanagan—Nothin'. 'Twas the fault of his godfather stutterin' while he tried to say "Dinnis Casey."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Also It Uses Up Gold.

"Did you ever notice how a ring is like the marriage obligation?"

"No. How do you mean?"

"A ring is more easily put on than it is taken off."—Boston Transcript.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Adds Healthful Qualities to the Food

Prof. Prescott, of the University of Michigan, explains why Royal Baking Powder adds healthful qualities to the food.

Testifying before the Pure Food Committee of Congress, the Professor stated that fruit acids were excellent articles of food and that of these cream of tartar, the acid of grapes, held rank with the highest both in itself and its effect in the process of leavening and baking. He regarded the results from cream of tartar baking powder as favorable to health. Scientists and hygienists are in accord with this opinion.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, GAS OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

Radical Resolutions, Opposing Military [illegible], to Be Discussed by the Mine Workers.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 23.—Some radical resolutions remained to-day for the consideration of the United Mine Workers of America, which began consideration of the report of the committee on resolutions Wednesday afternoon. It was hoped to complete the report late to-day.

Several resolutions directed against the militia and the Boy Scout Movement, have been introduced, but the committee has not announced its action yet.

One of these resolutions reads: "Be it resolved that this organization go on record as opposed to any of its members joining the militia, and that this organization oppose the Boy Scout movement as harmful to the best interests of the working people."

One resolution proposes that there be a general strike of miners in case an international war is engaged in by the United States.

A number of resolutions dealing with the working conditions of the miners have been referred to the scale committee which will report later.

One resolution demands that the organization take a stand for a six-hour working day, on the contention that the mining industry is crowded and [illegible]

LLOYD GEORGE AND CHURCHILL MAKE THEIR EXIT ARM IN ARM

First Lord of Admiralty is to Get the Four Ships He Wants, and Expenditures of Other Departments must be Cut.

London, Jan. 23.—Premier Asquith apparently provided a solution at to-days Cabinet meeting of Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd George's difficulty in making both ends of the budget meet, for the Chancellor and Winston Spencer Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, left the conference arm in arm as though there was never a vestige of a quarrel between them.

That. Mr. Churchill will get the four capital ships he insists upon is accepted in naval circles as an assured fact, while the other departments will have little expenditure.

In the meantime according to the Unionists, Mr. Lloyd George's Championship of the Little Navy faction has brought into line again a strong contingent of the non-conformist Government supporters who are showing restiveness at the forcing of Protestant Ulster under the rule of the Catholic majority.

LEGAL WAREFARE FOR STRATHCONA MILLIONS

A Boston Man Claims to Be a Relative of the Dead Peer.

New York, Jan. 23.—Legal warfare for the fifty million dollar estate of Donald Smith, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, was expected here to-day, following the admission that Attorney John W. Sterling is working on the case of Jas. H. Smith, of Boston, a supposed claimant.

Sterling's private secretary, when seen at his office, at No. 55 Wall street, said:

"Mr. Sterling is out of the city. He is handling the case of Mr. Smith of Boston and any statement must come from Mr. Sterling personally. I cannot say when he will be back."

Lord Strathcona, who died in London, aged 93, is recorded in the peerage as having only one heir, a daughter, Margaret Charlotte, who married R. J. Bliss Howard, F.R.C.S. Lord Strathcona's wife, who died last November, was Miss Isabella Hardisty. They were married in the early days while plain Donald Smith was a factor for the Hudson Bay Co. in the wilds of the Canadian Northwest. Nothing is shown in any official record available here to indicate that they had a son.

Just One More Woman Rises

TO TELL HER SISTERS THEY CAN FIND RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs. John Cabot, After Six Years' Suffering, Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Found New Life and Energy.

White Head Perce, Que., Jan. 23.—(Special.)—One more woman has risen to tell her suffering sisters they can find relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills. That woman is Mrs. John Cabot, well known and highly respected here, and she expresses her enthusiasm in these words: "I certainly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills. There is nothing better."

Asked to give her experience, Mrs. Cabot continued: "My troubles started in a cold and I suffered for six years. Rheumatism, neuralgia, stiffness of the joints, cramps in the muscles and heart flutterings were among my symptoms, and finally Bright's Disease developed. It was then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and they helped me almost from the start. After taking four boxes I feel like a new woman."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys. Healthy kidneys strain all the impurities and poisons—all the seeds of disease—out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills not only cure the disease but by ensuring good blood give new life and energy to every part of the body.

A WORLD SURVEY

for universal use was issued in a 24,000 edition and exhausted in a few weeks. In a subdivision recently made several thousand Presbyterians became Methodists with a stroke of a pen. Now automatically when residence is changed the member is transferred from one church to another.

At the beginning of the 19th century America had not a single missionary abroad. Now there are twenty-two thousand of an army at work in Foreign Fields.

It is an interesting appalling fact that even to-day in Canada as much as $11.21 per head is spent every year for liquor alone while only 31c. per head is spent for missions. But 100years ago only $100,000 a year was spent by the Christians of the world in Missions. Now over $30,000,000 annually is spent in bringing the heathen world to Christ. Of the money given the highest cost of administration is 8 p.c., while in many cases it is as low as 4 p.c. In 1800 it was learned that the Bible had been translated in 66 languages. To-day there are 500 languages in which the Bible is printed.

Further evidences of the increasing sovereignt8 are in the following facts. In the first century it is estimated there were 2,000,000 Christians. In the first centur8 t is estimated there were 2,000,000 Christians, in the eighteenth century two hundred millions and in the nineteenth five hundred millions showing a remarkably rapid increase in the last century over the previous 18. In America 100 years ago 1 in 14 was a Church member; now 1 in 4; 1 in 10 of college students, now 1 in 2.

In the non-Christian world 100 Sears ago there were 70,000 Christians In 1900 there were 2,223,000, increasing at the rate of 1,000,000 in twelve Sears.

In Japan there are now 70,000 Christians, twelve of whom are members of parliament. In China in 1848 after thirty-five years of service Morrison pointed to only six converts; there are now 195,905 members of churches and it is estimated millions of followers.

In Korea in 1887 the 1st seven were baptized in secret. The converts now average one for every hour day and night. The aggressiveness and liberality of Korean Christians are well known, putting most of us to shame.

In India 30,000 were baptized in one district alone in a [illegible]. Uganda and the New Hebrides are well known examples of the change. Marvellous changes have taken place in Turkey. The native Christians of the various heathen countries have produced 100,000 workers now on the fields and among them a number of world leaders of whom Bishop Honda of Japan was an example and Bishop Azariah of India is another. The humanitarian ideas of the Gospel have quickly spread. 100 years ago there was not a single hospital in the heathen world. Now there are 1688 and 8,000,000 treatments were reported for one year. Among all the vast changes that have taken place in education, Government and society, none is more significant or more closely associated with the Gospel influence and teaching than the uplift of women.

From these evidences we may surely conclude that the increase of His Government there shall be no end.

Your Temple of Music

The unmatched beauty of the Greeks' early temples has been the inspiration of architects for 2000 years. But their music is gone—forgotten. No genius can "restore" it as we do the crumbling columns of her Acropolis.

We have caught the spirit of their art, however, in the design of the modern temple of music—the Grafonola.

The Favorite, for instance, embodies the same principles of proportion and contour, and as an example of cabinet-making pays the same tribute to modern music as the architecture of the Greek temples did to ancient music. Grafonola music is worthy of this tribute.

You can put this modern Temple of Music with its inexhaustible repertoire in your own home for as little as $20.00.

You pay for it in convenient monthly amounts, whether you purchase the Grand at $650 or a lower priced instrument.

FIRST TRAIN OVER LAKE SHORE LINE GETS TO TORONTO

Special Train Bearing Vice President McNicoll Quietly Arrived After a Trip in Record Time

Toronto, Jan. 25.—What practically amounts to a double-track connection between Toronto and Montreal via the C.P.R., has now become an established fact. The passage in record time of a special train from Montreal, carrying Vice-President McNicoll of the Canadian Pacific to Toronto via the new Glen Tay line, on Saturday night marked the actual completion of the double track connection.

The new line, best known as the Lake Shore line, gives an additional line of steel from Toronto to Glen Tay, a distance of 190 miles from Toronto. From Glen Tay to Montreal a double track line is already in existence.

Vice-President McNicoll expressed himself as gratified at the excellence of the roadbed of the new line, and promised that early next month would see the inauguration of direct freight service between Toronto and Montreal via the Lake Shore line. Owing to the fact that a much better grade can be obtained than over the route now used, there will not only be a saving in time, but a heavier train per engine power will also be secured.

He said that early spring would see a passenger service to Montreal via the new route placed in operation, and a consequent reduction in the time taken to go between the two cities would result.

Building New Stations.

Passenger stations of the most up-to-date description were being built at the towns along the new line, and the work on these would be rushed so that they would be ready for use with the inauguration of the passenger service. The cost of the new stations runs from $15,000 to $20,000 each. The stations are being erected at the following places: Cherrywood, Audley, Whitby, Oshawa, Darlington, Bowmanville, Newcastle, Bondheads, Newtonville, Wesleyville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Grafton, Colborne, Brighton, Smithfield and Trenton.

How Bi-Lingual Schools Act in the West

Barely a month ago a German girl, fifteen years of age, was called to give testimony in the county court of Beausejour, Man. She could not understand the simplest question addressed to her in English, and had to give her testimony in German through an interpreter; and yet this girl was born and educated in Canada, in the province of Manitoba, and had attended the Ledywood bi-lingual school for more than three years. Such a fact needs little comment. And yet there are those who would have the French language taught in the Public Schools of Ontario.

CHIEF ANTI-TRUST LAWS AS URGED BY PRESIDENT

Here are the principal reforms urged by President Wilson in his anti-trust message:

1.—A law that would give the Interstate Commerce Commission absolute control over railroad capitalization.

2.—A law prohibiting interlocking directorates of banks, railroads, industrial, commercial and public service corporations.

3.—A law defining the debatable ground around the Sherman law; one that would prohibit trade agreements and all practices that are unfair to the public and to competitors.

4.—A law providing for the creation of an Interstate Trade Commission to assist the corporations and to assist the courts in dealing with corporations that break the law.

5.—A law making guilt personal by imprisoning responsible officers of corporations instead of punishing business.

6.—A bill prohibiting holding companies, with the suggestion that action should be taken to break the power of "individuals or groups of individuals," who control more than one corporation, even though they acted as individuals and not as holding companies.

7.—Giving to private individuals the right to sue corporations for redress on facts and judgments proved in government suits, and providing that the statute of limitations should run only from the date of conclusion of the government's action.

ANOTHER STRIKE LIKELY IN LONDON

Employers' Demand Causes Two Hundred Thousand Men to Quit Work.

London, Jan. 24.—Two hundred thousand men, employed in the building trades in London, were threatened to-day with a lockout by their employers, who demand that the men belonging to the trades unions sign an agreement to work without question with non-unionist workmen or quit their employment.

The men refused to comply with the employers' demand, and when they ceased work this afternoon for the week-end declared that the employers would have to withdraw their demand before they took up their tools again.

DONALD A. SMITH TO MAKE A CLAIM

Hasn't Definitely Decided Position in Regard to Strathcona Estate

Hamilton, Ont., Jan. 24.—That Donald A. Smith, 14 Spruce Side avenue, of this city, will in all likelihood claim a share in the large estate of the late Lord Strathcona, Canada's grand old man who died recently in London, England, has been established. While Mr. Smith does not claim relationship to the late Lord Strathcona he will not say anything definitely as yet as to the exact relationship between the two. It is stated, however, by people who know Smith personally, that he is a grandson of Lord Strathcona. His father, they say, is James H. Smith, who resides in Boston, and is a son of Donald Smith who was known in his later years as Lord Strathcona, and is also a full brother of Mrs. R. J. Bliss Howard, the recognized heir to the estate.

When spoken to over the telephone on Saturday afternoon, Donald A. Smith stated that he would rather wait until things have developed more fully before giving out anything definite as to his claims on the estate of Lord Strathcona. He would not admit or deny that he was a grandson.

John McGibbon sr., told of a feud of sixteen years' standing between his brother Peter and himself and their respective families. This feud had arisen through his purchase of his mother's farm at a sheriff's sale.

TORONTO SAVINGS & LOAN COMPANY'S GOOD YEAR

In other columns of this issue is a report of the annual meeting of the Toronto Savings & Loan Company, held at the head office 437 George St., Peterborough, on Friday, Jan. 23rd.

The directors presented their statement, the 29th annual occurrence of this event. It would seem that the company, with its progressive policy and due conservatism in the interests of the shareholders, shows a prosperous year.

A feeling tribute was paid to the late Senator Geo. A. Cox, who was president of the company. Mr. E. W. Cox, a former Peterborough boy, was elected president and the board strengthened by the addition to its membership of Mr. E. R. Wood, the Toronto capitalist, also a former local boy.

Presented to the Retiring Chairman of the N.F.S.R. Committee.

At a meeting of the Niagara Frontier Summer Rate Committee, which is now in convention at Buffalo, N.Y. the retiring Chairman, Mr. W. S. Cookson, Assistant General Passenger Agent, of the Grand Trunk Railway System, was presented by the Committee with a handsome gavel.

The gavel is made from a piece of quartered oak taken from the wood used in the Chateau Laurier, the first of, the magnificent chain of hotels which are being erected across the Continent by the Grand Trunk Railway System. The silver used for the ornamentation of the gavel was secured from Cobalt, the "Eldorado" of Northern Ontario and the richest silver camp in the world. Embedded in the head of the mallet is a section of "U" rail, taken from what is probably the last piece of rail in existence that was laid on the Grand Trunk Railway in 1854. This rail was of iron of remarkably good quality and was made by the Ebbw Vale Company in Wales, England. The joints were known as "Chair Joints" as there were no fish plates in use at that time. The rail was laid for over 1,000 (one thousand) miles, between the years 1854 and 1857, and the quality of the metal was so good that these rails wore away very evenly, some lasting for eighteen years. The railway at that time was known as the Atlantic & St. Lawrence Railroad. The case in which the gavel is placed is made out of a piece of oak from the handsome Grand Trunk Railway Central Station at Ottawa, the capital of the Dominion.

KRAFCHENKO'S HELP COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

No Charge is to Be Laid Against the Man Who Hid Alleged Murderer.

Winnipeg, Jan. 24.—After a preliminary hearing occupying nearly three days, Percy Hagel and John Westlake were committed for trial by Magistrate Macdonald this afternoon on a charge of aiding John Krafchenko to escape from the Central police station, after commitment for trial for the murder of H. M. Arnold, manager of the Bank of Montreal at Plum Coulee Man.

The police have decided not to lay charges against Frank Holt, who helped in the hiding of the alleged murderer in fear of his life, and J. H. Buxton, jr., who turned 'King's evidence,' which led to the re-arrest of Krafchenko. Percy Hagel was counsel for the prisoner.

PREVENT WAR BY GENERAL STRIKE

United Mine Workers Say the Burden of War Falls on Laboring Classes

Indianapolis Jan. 23.—Terms to prevent further immigration till all surplus laborers in the United States are fully employed, were favored by a resolution adopted by the convention of the United Mine Workers of America to-day.

Another resolution expressing sympathy for the striking copper miners in Michigan was adopted without debate.

The abolition of international wars by means of a general strike was proposed in a resolution introduced by Duncan McDonald of Illinois. The resolution was adopted and referred to the International Mining Congress. McDonald declared it the only method to stop international wars. He praised the work of Andrew Carnegie for international peace, but said his plans were futile. He declared that the burden of carrying on wars, both in money and life, fell on the laboring classes.

McDonald presented another resolution instructing the international officers to call on the United States government to purchase coal for the battleships only from mines where "miners are employed eight hours a day, and where humane conditions obtained." The resolution states that the government for a number of years has been purchasing fuel for the navy from non-union mines of the Virginia, Maryland and that vicinity. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

RAINED REAL CATS IN NEW YORK MEAT STORE

New York, Jan. 24.—The lean, hungry cats usually seen in Jamb street, exploring garbage cans in the early dawn, were missing to-day. Eight policemen and the proprietors of the Brighton Beef Co., No. 72 Jamb street, suspected the reason.

Policeman James Kenny heard strange sounds coming from the market last night. Six months ago a bomb went off in front of the place and caved in the front. Kenny remembered this and pounded with his night stick until seven other policemen came. Forming a flying wedge, with drawn revolvers, they burst in the door. Twenty-five cats of all sizes, weights and colors, scampered into dark corners. Chicken, beef, mutton and sausages were missing. The noise heard by the policeman was a fight over the bones.

With clubs the policemen charged, driving the intruders into the street. Their theory is that the cats were collected in the neighborhood by some enemy and tossed through the open transom.

SIR JAMES IS NOW MUCH STRONGER IN EVERY WAY

Saturday Afternoon Bulletin Indicated That Steady Improvement Before Noted Has Not Been Interrupted

It is rather significant that Mr. E. F. Whitney of Ottawa, who receives regular and special reports on Sir James' condition, has said all along that his brother would get better.

"Sir James Whitney is resting quietly this afternoon."

Toronto, Jan. 25.—This bulletin, issued late Saturday afternoon, following upon the encouraging report of the morning, which was as follows: "Sir James Whitney is decidedly better. He is much less delirious, and took a good breakfast. (Signed) Dr. A. McPhedran, Dr. C. K. Clarke, Dr. R. A. Pyne," is the most optimistic word that has been handed out by the premier's physicians since the commencement of his trying illness.

That there is not only a possibility but a probability of Sir James' ultimate recovery is now acknowledged by his doctors, who have up till now refrained from making any rash forecasts as to the probable outcome of the illness.

"The stamina of our patient has been wonderful. His doggedness has alone been responsible for his present improved condition, and unless unforeseen elements arise, I think the premier is on a fair road to recovery," said Dr. C. K. Clarke.

"He is better in every particular—his nerves are steadier, his heart action is stronger and he has recovered from his somewhat depressed mental attitude that was overcoming him."

VARSITY BEAT McGILL IN A SLUGGING MATCH

Arena Gardens, Jan. 24.—Varsity and McGill clashed in their first local Intercollegiate Union game here this afternoon, and the blue and white put on their strongest line-up, so that they could trim the red and white if possible. Ever since McGill turned the trick on them they have waited for the opportunity to turn the tables on their conquerors. The same team that went up against St. Mikes in the first game, with but one exception, was that faced McGill, and they looked just good enough to win, considering the fact that Queen's beat McGill last week. About two thousand people saw the game.

The score—5—4.

Referee—Fred Lake.

WOODROW WILSON'S GREAT MESSAGE TO HIS CONGRESS

A Deliverance That is Pat to Many Things in Canada—The Struggle Between Big Business and People

Toronto, Jan. 25.—(A great political revolution is being worked out in the United States, and marvelous headway in the direction of reform has taken place since Woodrow Wilson came into office as President. All the questions that are up for discussion and reform in the United States arise with more or less insistence here in Canada, and what takes place in the United States is more than a lesson to the people of Canada. We have the same issues here; we are not yet dealing with them in a vigorous way. For some reason or other, the bulk of Canadian papers are withholding from their readers details of what has taken place in the United States.)

Washington, Jan. 24.—"The antagonism between business and the government is over."

In this sentence President Wilson summarized the spirit pervading the anti-trust message which he read to a joint session of congress in the house this afternoon.

It took him exactly twenty minutes to outline the plans which, he said, when enacted into law, will result in completing the "constitution of peace."

Throughout the message he urged on congress the necessity of passing legislation that would destroy the instrumentalities by which one class of business has taken improper advantage of other classes. He insisted that in so doing no legitimate enterprise should be injured and no undue commotion should be caused in the business world.

He was applauded repeatedly as he read his message, slowly and impressively. Republicans joined with Democrats in noting their appreciation of the plans which he proposed. When he had finished a volume of applause filled the chamber.

The president struck the keynote of his message when he read:

"We are all agreed that private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable, and our program is founded upon that conviction."

JAPANESE IDEA OF IDEAL HUSBAND

Pekin, Jan. 24.—A Tokio review has been asking its lady readers for their ideal of a husband.

Here are the seventeen virtues of the paragon, placed according to the order of their importance in the eyes of fair Japan: He must not be a miser; not to be too much taken up with his own toilet; be manly in appearance; not be a woman's man; express himself clearly, avoiding anything like a hint; be prompt in decision, and clever in extricating himself from an awkward position; have an ideal which may be left to his own choice; leave the management of the household to his wife; never put his face inside the kitchen; never criticise his wife's hats or dresses; never make others the recipients of his confidences; not end by becoming an object of disgust to his wife; not interfere in feminine matters at all; cultivate the virtue of compassion; not drink heavily; not be lazy; not be too jealous.

Australia's Hinterland.

The one problem in Australia which really overshadows every other, says an English paper, is that of the huge rich, unpeople northern territories—not only that section of the north which is at present controlled from Adelaide but the whole of northern Australia. It is an even greater problem than that of immigration, which to some extent forms a part of it. Here are enormous stretches of well-watered land capable of growing wheat, vast grazing areas, auriferous belts, rich tropical lands, innumerable natural products, deep rivers, and fine harbors. The portion known as the Northern Territory contains little more than 1,000 white inhabitants; the rest is populated on the same scale. There is need for a very rapid awakening of Australian opinion upon this vital issue.

Wanted to Be a Sacrifice.

One of the strangest petitions ever received by a police magistrate has been presented at Calcutta. A young Bengali, with his forehead covered with heavy caste marks, entered the witness-box during the hearing of applications, and handed to the magistrate a stamped paper praying for an order to have his life sacrificed before the goddess Kali for the benefit of the Government, and also for the people of Hindustan. It added that the comet [illegible]

Reason For the Peculiar Signature on the Hotel Register.

Many peculiar signatures in the course of a season find themselves upon the register of a hotel. [illegible] The most [illegible] of all, however, was placed on the book only recently. It is this:

"Wm."

Only that and nothing more.

There is no surname, no address, nothing at all but just "Wm."

This is the way it happened:

A well dressed man entered the hotel the other day and followed his bags to the desk. The register was swung around into position for him and a pen handed him by the gentlemanly desk clerk. Then, in a free, swinging hand, he wrote the accepted abbreviation of his first name, "Wm."

As if a thought had suddenly occurred to him, he stopped writing and looked up.

"What do you charge for a single room here by the day?" he asked.

"Three, four, five and six dollars," answered the clerk.

"Ain't you got no dollar rooms?"

"No, we have no dollar rooms. Three, four, five and six."

"Gosh!" he said, and he didn't look the part either. "This is no place for me. Gimme my baggage."

And he sneaked out of the hotel as one who had trodden on sacred ground.

Which is why on the register today is the odd signature:

"Wm."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Countess Anne Marie Helene de [illegible], a member of one of the historic families of France, has made a curious will which has just been proved. She left her estate at [illegible], Eastbourne, England, to found "St. Mary's orphanage," laying down the following rules for the education of the girls: No competitive examinations, no study before breakfast, no study after 6 p. m., all lessons to be learned in the morning, no girl to work more than four and a half hours daily. No arithmetic except the multiplication tables for children under ten. No child with curvature of the spine to write more than five minutes a day until thirteen. Each girl must be certified by two phrenologists as not deficient in conscientiousness and firmness. No child to be vaccinated.

A Machine to Measure Love.

Science is slowly killing romance. The latest invention is an instrument called a plethysmograph for scientifically testing the warmth of lovers' affections. The person whose feelings are to be weighed in the balance puts his or her arm into a rubber bag which is then drawn tight and filled with water. Names of young men or young women, as the case may be, are mentioned, and if the name stirs the heart the pulse rises and the indicator jumps up. If the name leaves the subject unmoved the pulse remains stationary.—London Gentlewoman.

GLYCERIN.

In Many Ways It Is a Most Remarkable Substance.

One of the great advantages of glycerin in its chemical employment is the fact that it neither freezes nor evaporates under any ordinary temperature. No perceptible loss by evaporation has been detected at a temperature less than 200 degrees F., but if heated intensely it decomposes with a smell that few persons find themselves able to endure. It burns with a pale flame, similar to that from alcohol, if heated to about 300 degrees and then ignited. Its nonevaporative qualities make the compound of much use as a vehicle for holding pigments and colors, as in stamping and typewriter ribbons, carbon papers and the like.

If the pure glycerin be exposed for a long time to a freezing temperature it crystallizes with the appearance of sugar candy; but, these crystals being once melted, it is almost an impossibility to get them again into the congealed state. If a little water be added to the glycerin no crystallization will take place, though under a sufficient degree of cold the water will separate and form crystals, amid which the glycerin will remain in its natural state of fluidity. If suddenly subjected to intense cold, pure glycerin will form a gummy mass which cannot be entirely hardened or crystallized. Altogether it is quite a peculiar substance.

The Barbarous Suttee.

Suttee, or the practice of immolating widows on their husband's funeral pyres in India, was first attacked by the British government in 1829. It was on Dec. 4 of that year that Lord William Bentinck carried a resolution in council by which all who abetted suttee were declared guilty of "culpable homicide." In the year 1817 700 widows were burned alive in Bengal alone, but since the passing of the act the practice has entirely died out. Suttee was really a primitive rite, a survival from barbarous times, and not sanctioned by Hinduism, the passage in the Vedas supporting it being a willful mistranslation. But no previous governor had the courage to violate the British tradition of religious toleration. Lord William Bentinck also suppressed thuggism, which made strangling a religious rite to the goddess Kali.

THE MASTER SUN.

Sirius, the Dog Star, May Be the Center of Attraction.

Astronomers once believed that the entire starry universe revolved around a center of attraction, and the star named Alcyone, in the group of the Pleiades, was selected by Maedler as marking that great center.

It has long been known, however, that Maedler's conclusion, which was based on the apparent motions of the stars, was incorrect, and if any universal center exists it has not yet been discovered. In fact, many of the stars seem to be moving in straight lines, some in one direction and some in another, and among these is our own sun. But it is possible that further observations will show that all the stars are really moving in curved lines.

In the meantime it has been found that there are certain groups or sets of stars which appear to travel together. To what set, if any, the sun belongs we do not yet know, but Dr. Lowbey has presented reasons for thinking that those stars whose distances have been measured (that is to say, those which are nearest to us) group themselves around Sirius, the dog star, in a manner similar to that in which the inner planets are grouped around the sun.

If this be correct, Sirius may possibly be the master sun of which our orb of day is a distant satellite.—Harper's Weekly.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvaney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 6 to 15 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they inhabit the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claims one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. TO CONTROL MUNICIPAL FINANCE

The Saskatchewan Commission to control municipal finance has now entered on its duties. This Board supervises all municipal bond issues, and its stamp of approval means much to the individual municipality in floating its debenture issues. The Saskatchewan Government is the first in Canada to take this very important step. While it has been generally conceded that such a commission would be of enormous value to municipalities, nothing has been done outside of Saskatchewan. The commission gives advice on the best forms of raising money for improvement works, as to the advisability of the works contemplated, and the class of work most suitable. What this means to the investor in the old country or the United States, who seeks to purchase Western debentures, can be readily recognized. He is assured that unless the works are justifiable the commission will not approve of them, and this will have a tendency to trim expenditures of improvement works which are sometimes outlined by over optimistic municipal councils. The best men to be had have been secured to act on this commission, and their appointment is for ten years.

Old Winter Coughs Now Easily Cured

A New Remedy Now Cures Without the Use of Cough Syrups or Drugs

Just think of it—you can clear away that hard, racking cough, drive it completely out of the system, make yourself perfectly well by the new breathing cure that employs no medicine at all.

You wonder how; very simple, indeed; you simply breathe in through a Catarrhozone Inhaler rich balsamic essences that heal and soothe away the cough in a few hours' time.

In using Catarrhozone you bathe the lining of the nose and throat with that powerful antiseptic of the Blue Gum Tree of Australia, which is probably the surest cold and cough cure in the world to-day.

Clarence E. Cromwell, writing from Medicine Hat, says: "To cure a sneezing cold in about ten minutes the one thing I know of to do it is Catarrhozone. To relieve an irritated throat quickly, nothing can excel Catarrhozone. It simply eats up a cough or cold of any kind. I know of colds that have hung on for months that Catarrhozone cured quickly. Nearly every man I know carries a Catarrhozone Inhaler with him day and night, and in this country it makes a wonderful protection against all winter ills."

HE CITY ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I note the city council are somewhat exercised over the Waterworks Department, and the general welfare of the city. One [illegible] proposed that the city be run by commission, and there is some merit in that proposal. The Mayor and some of the city fathers proposed that the mayor be ex-officio members to the waterworks board. Twelve years ago the mayor acted as third commissioner in the Waterworks Department, but it was considered at that time that it would be more in the interests of the city to have a commission of three members entirely separate and distinct from the city council, which method has been followed during the last 10 years, and I am satisfied that the service given by the Commission during the term mentioned has been practically universally satisfactory. The members of the commission have a very complete knowledge of the waterworks department. The commission is elected by the people, just the same as the city council, and I believe the commission can handle the waterworks better without the interference of the city council.

Now, in regard to the consolidation of the engineering department, I think it would be a great mistake. Apparently the city engineer has enough to do at present, without taking charge of the Waterworks and Hydro-Electric Departments, and if the City Engineer was controlled partly by the City Council and partly by the Board of Water Commissioners, there would be friction in short order. We must remember that the revenue from the Waterworks Department approaches $60,000 a year, and the responsibility of handling it is very great, and it often happens that the engineer in charge has to give his whole and undivided attention to special work; furthermore, as soon as the Board of Water Commissioners take charge of the Hydro-Electric Department, the work of the Commission will be doubled, and the services of the engineer will be doubled. One would think, therefore, that the engineer in charge of the Waterworks Department and the Hydro-Electric Department, would have sufficient to take up his whole time. As a matter of fact the position will be an exceedingly important one, and the responsibility would be great. I think therefore, that the city council had better, in the interests of the City, leave the Public Utilities Commission alone, and allow them as in the past, to have their own engineer separate and distinct from that of the city.

I understand the Public Utilities Commission have practically decided to appoint an Engineer in charge of both departments, the Water and Hydro, and to have an assistant connected with each. This, I believe, is a move in the right direction, and it should prove eminently satisfactory. It is of great importance to have an engineer in charge of these two departments, DIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE TO THE COMMISSIONERS, AND TO NO ONE ELSE. Toronto tried to run all the departments of the city by one engineer, and we know the result. Many of the cities and larger towns throughout the Province run the Hydro separate from that of the Waterworks Department, but others have one Commission who control both departments, and from all I can learn this way of dealing with the business is considered very satisfactory. Two examples are London and Waterloo.

With all due deference to the city council, I believe it will take them all their time to handle well the departments they now have in hand, without making any attempt to widen their sphere of usefulness, and if they give the same satisfaction to the city that the Water commissioners have given during the past number of years in dealing with civic affairs, there will be no reason to complain.

Yours respectfully,
CIVITAS.

MEMORY IN FISH

Striking Results Shown in Test With Grey Perch

Even the fishes of the sea have pictures on memory's wall. Experiments have been made with several fishes as to their faculties for remembering, but the most striking results have been obtained with the gray perch, which lives chiefly on small silvery hued sardines. Some of these were taken and colored red and were then put into the tank where the perch was with several silver colored sardines. Of course the normal sardines were at once seized and eaten, but it was not until hungry that the perch made a tentative meal of one of the red colored victims.

On recognizing the sardine flavor, however, he promptly demolished the remainder. Later the perch devoured the sardines irrespective of color, thus showing not only traces of a memory, but also the power to differentiate color.

Subsequently sardines colored red and blue were placed in the tank together with the silver ones. The same scene was repeated, the blue sardines not being attacked until the others were eaten and hunger compelled investigation of the newcomers. After this introduction the perch ate the sardines of all three types without any difficulty.

Some spines of the sea nettle were then fastened to the blue sardines. These were at once avoided by the perch, which promptly got out of the way of the newcomers. This showed traces of memory, as the results of contact with the sea nettle were shown and recognized.—Chicago Tribune.

THE WARM BREATH

Why it Comes Out Cold Thro' Partly Closed Lips

When one breathes out used air from the lungs through the wide open mouth the breath has the same temperature as the body, 98.6 degrees F., and frequently on a cold day we warm our fingers by breathing on them. If, however, we blow the breath vigorously from the mouth the temperature of the breath appears to be much lower than when breathed gently and with open mouth and is decidedly cooling in its effect, writes J. Gordon Ogden in Popular Mechanics.

The latter fact is due to the well known principle established by Lord Kelvin, that a compressed gas upon expanding will absorb heat. The breath, compressed by being forced to pass through the small orifice made by the puckered lips, immediately expands upon being admitted to the outer air and to do so must take up heat.

This is also the identical principle involved in the manufacture of artificial ice. Ammonia gas is first compressed into a liquid and then liberated into a network of tubes surrounding large sheet iron boxes filled with distilled water. The liquid ammonia, set free at one end of the pipe system, begins at once to evaporate, and by the time it has meandered through the long iron tubes it has become gas. As we have learned, to change a liquid to a gas requires heat. This heat is taken from the iron piping, an excellent conductor, which in turn robs the water of its heat, thus freezing it.

The spiders begin on the flies by wholesale. Mosquero nests are very tidy, pretty and old maidish. A lot of tiny beetles make their home therein with the spiders. The beetles live on fly legs, the crumbs and scraps from the mosquero's table, and pay for their bed and board by keeping the web house perfectly clean and refined, eating everything and dropping no litter in the Mexican [illegible] gentleman's house. Miss Mosquero is a very quiet, orderly lady who never wanders from her own fireside or strays from her own back yard, but when a fly calls round she gets very busy with her [illegible].—New York Press.

"Wolf Month."

January, the month with the Latin name, had a grimmer name in Saxon England. Richard Verstegan in his "Restitution of Decayed Intelligence in Antiquities," a curious book published in [illegible], writes: "The month which we now call January our Saxon ancestors called 'wolf monat'—to wit, 'wolf month'—because people are wont always in that month to be in more danger to be devoured of wolves than in any season else of the year, for that, through the extremity of cold and snow, those ravenous creatures could not find other beasts sufficient to feed upon."—London Chronicle.

PRICE 100 and ACCRUED INTEREST

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,[illegible] bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,064
" " " 31, 1910	541,334
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1903 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $6,[illegible]. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

SOLDIER AND SCULPTOR

It is said of Captain Adrian Jones, who has designed the four-horse war chariot, weighing upwards of thirty tons, which is to be erected near Hyde Park Corner as a memorial to "Peace," that he is probably the only living sculptor who understands a horse from tail-tip to nostril. As a boy he loved and studied horses, and would have liked to become an artist, but his father had other plans, and he entered the army. He saw much active service, and was then advised to become a sculptor, having devoted most of his spare time when in the army to painting and sculpture.

A Radical Lord.

Lord Denman, who is 38, is one of the Liberal minority in the House of Lords, and has been lord-in-waiting to the King under the present administration. At present he holds the ornamental, and not too burdensome, post of captain in the Hon. Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms. He fought for a year in South Africa. The barony of Denman, like so many others, is of legal origin; but the present holder never showed any predilection for the law. He is married to a very charming lady, the only daughter of Lord [illegible], and they have a five-year-old son and heir.

Philosophy.

Picturing the Face.

"Why do you photographers always photograph the left side of the face by preference?"

"Because it's the best looking," was the prompt reply. "The left side of the face is always the more regular, and it always shows least the marks of time.

"But," he continued, "if you want to bring out the real character of a face photograph the right side. There nature sets her points. There the lines are bold and unmistakable. There every defect, no less than every excellence, is stamped deep.

"The left side, where everything is softened down, for beauty. The right side, where everything is well rubbed in, for character. These are the portrait artist's two chief rules."—New York Tribune.

Her Importance.

Herbert Spencer once told this story of a woman of his acquaintance: "Vain as well as vulgar minded, she professed to have a high admiration of Shakespeare and was partial to reading his plays aloud and considered that she declaimed the speeches extremely well. On one occasion, after enlarging upon her reverence for him, she ended by saying: 'Ah, I often wish that he were alive and that I had him here. How we would enjoy one another's conversation!'"

A New Rifle Muffler.

The stir created by Maxim's murder gun rifle silencer, which is really a muffler, not a silencer, has brought other inventors into the field. A Moore silencer is chronicled that is said to have many advantages over that of Maxim, not the least of which is its relative cheapness. The ordnance department of the army is now giving it a test. With a considerable crop of "silencers" it is probable that a really effective eliminator of the report of a rifle will eventually be evolved. The next war is thus likely to be fought in a deadly silence, far more terrifying than the roaring of the [illegible] gunpowder of historic battlefields.—New York Press.

A King's Coin Collection.

Victor Emmanuel is considered, and rightly so, an exceedingly clever numismatist. A rather interesting story is told of the manner in which the king, while still little more than a child, acquired a taste for the science of numismatics. One day he received a noble bearing the head of Pope Pius IX. A little later, finding another, he added it to the first, and in this way he collected fifteen. Meanwhile his father, King Humbert, presented him with about sixty pieces of old copper money, and thus was formed the nucleus of his collection.—McClure's Magazine.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Pile Wharf and Approaches at Gananoque, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, February 23, 1914, for the construction of a Pile Wharf and Approaches at the Town of Gananoque, County of Leeds, Ont.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the District Engineer's Office, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster at Gananoque, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

VICTIMS OF HUMOR

Proctor Knott and "Sunset" Cox Bewailed Their Funny Tags

The late Proctor Knott seems to be remembered chiefly as the author of the [illegible] Duluth speech, says the New York World. Yet he was a great lawyer, and as chairman of the house committee on the judiciary he had to do with serious and vastly important affairs. Mr. Knott's single appearance as a humorist fixed his reputation for all time, and no amount of profoundly serious work could change it.

Samuel S. Cox had a similar experience with greater reason, for in early life he had cultivated the childish quite devotedly. Mr. Knott lived long enough to perceive that he was to be identified not with learning or public service, but with an oratorical conception, and Mr. Cox found in his maturity that the speakership, the goal of his ambition, was denied him because it was no place for a funny man.

Although never a humorist, Proctor Knott accomplished something with satire and irony in which most men fail. He made himself understood. Everybody knew that he was joking. Nobody ever demanded an explanation of his remarks on Duluth or a retraction or an apology. From that viewpoint, therefore, he was one of the successful men of his generation.

MARK ANTONY'S TRICK.

It Worked Like a Charm Till Cleopatra Learned the Secret.

According to Plutarch, Cleopatra was a votary of the piscatorial art, and so keen did the rivalry become between her and Antony that he resorted to the meanest artifices to insure victory. Mortified and irritated by the queen's superiority, he engaged divers to take live fish and place them on his hook. This was done so expertly that he pulled up fish after fish in rapid succession. Learning in some way the secret of his sudden success, Cleopatra pretended to congratulate him and to admire his dexterity, but at the same time she devised a stinging means of revenge.

Another match was arranged, and the fishing began in the presence of a large company of friends. Antony soon had a bite and pulled up a huge salted fish to his great disgust and amid the loud laughter of all present. The cat was out, Antony's trick was exposed, and once more woman's wit had proved the match for man's ingenuity. A diver, specially instructed by the queen, had got the start of Antony's and attached the salt fish to his hook.—Harbours in "Angling."

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feeling of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all traces of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE TALE OF A PIG

Chief Justice Marshall's First Case as a Lawyer.

HE OUTWITTED A DEADBEAT.

When Marshall Sued Old Haskin Smiled, When the Case Was Won and Payment Claimed He Laughed, but When the Climax Came He Wilted.

Chief Justice John Marshall's first case as a lawyer was tried in Fauquier county, Va. It was the suit of Cohn versus Haskin, and the descendants of the great interpreter of the constitution delight to this day to tell of the subtle strategy whereby the budding jurist achieved victory over that case hardened deadbeat of a Haskin person.

This same Haskin, it appears, was a man possessed of property. But he was also possessed of a shrewd knowledge of the law. He kept all he had in his wife's name, excepting what the statute exempted from seizure for debt.

In an evil and absentminded moment Cohn, who ran a general store in Haskin's neighborhood, trusted him for sugar and coffee to the amount of $11. This was years before the entrance of young Marshall into the law, and in the interim Cohn had given the claim for collection to every young lawyer in the county to cut his teeth on. Swiftly following Marshall's unfurling of his shingle to the Fauquier winds came Cohn with his claim. Even the callow attorney recognized it as a veteran among claims. However, having nothing else to while away the time, he took the case, Cohn promising him all he could get out of it, which showed Cohn's valuation of it as an asset.

Young Marshall promptly brought suit, at which Haskin smiled. When judgment was obtained, Marshall rode out in person to Haskin's place and demanded payment, at which Haskin laughed.

And while Haskin chuckled the keen eye of the young lawyer wandered about the farmyard. He saw one plow, which was exempt under the law; also one harrow, also exempt; also a huge leviathan of a pig drowsing lazily in a pen—a very Gargantua of a pig.

"That's the only pig I got," volunteered Haskin, reading the lawyer's thought, for Haskin, also law wise, knew that under the statute he was entitled to one pig exempt from seizure for debt.

The future chief justice rode home pondering deeply. Next day he was seen strolling around the outskirts of the town looking into casual pigsties and keeping his thoughts to himself.

One noon shortly after a youth, trudging along the big road in front of Haskin's house, stopped to ask for a bite to eat. Over his shoulder he carried a grunty sack. Haskin handed him out a pone of bread and a chunk of meat and then demanded a quarter for the repast. "I haven't got a quarter," replied the youth; "thought you would give a feller a little snack like that."

"Not much," growled Haskin. "What you got in that bag?"

"Nothin' but a month old pig," answered the youth. "Say, if you gimme a quarter in money I'll give you the pig and we'll call it square."

"I reckon you stole that pig," commented Haskin, "else you wouldn't sell it so cheap. Here's your quarter; gimme the pig."

The youth disappeared with the quarter, and Haskin, with the content of one who has driven a hard bargain, carried the shote over to the barnyard and spilled it into the pen where lay the porcine Gargantua. Coincidentally there rose out of the alder bushes adjacent the forms of young Marshall and another man—the other man was the constable. In his hand he held a writ of execution. He climbed solemnly over into the pigsty and, pointing to the fat porker, said:

"I levy on that pig in the suit of Cohn versus Haskin," and he waved his hand to a man who was waiting with an empty wagon down the road.

"But that pig is exempt," exclaimed the irate Haskin. "The law allows me one pig."

"You've got him there," answered the constable, pointing to the shote as he trussed up the big fellow and called to the man in the wagon to lend a hand. "You can't make your selection for exemption after the levy's made."

"But the fellow that sold me that shote stole him," urged Haskin, growing desperate. "I can't own a stolen pig."

"All right," put in young Marshall, wholly unperturbed. "Mr. Constable, just arrest him for receiving stolen goods."

But Haskin had fled to the safety of his back porch, seeing which the constable, Marshall and the man in the wagon hauled the complaining porker aboard and drove away, leaving the bewildered Haskin to ruminate at leisure over the intricacies of the law which permits a man to keep even his religion in his wife's name, but ravishes away his choicest pig from under his very nose.

And, concluding, the multiple descendants of the great John also delight to tell how that pig sold for $19.85—enough not only to pay the ancient claim, but to satisfy exactly the demands of court and constable for costs, leaving not a penny over for the grief stricken and wicked Haskin.

To which the reader may add, "And they all lived happily forever after"—except Haskin.—New York Times.

-- KEEP THE PUBLIC INFORMED --

THAT is the motto of the modern merchant. He knows his business will grow exactly in the proportion of his ability to make it useful to the public.

The better he can make himself known for character, for courtesy, for fairness in price, the larger will be the measure of his success.

The modern merchant believes in taking the public into his confidence.

He believes people are interested in the sources of merchandise, its purposes, its character, as well as its function and price.

He discusses these things as legitimate news of his store.

He tells this now through the advertising of live daily newspapers, like "THE TIMES."

He feels it is part of his service to keep the public informed.

CASTLE ASHBY

Castle Ashby, the residence of the Marquis of Northampton, stands alone among all the "stately homes of England" as embodying in its architectural features texts of Scripture in solid masonry set out for every one to see in the most prominent places possible. The porter's lodge at the entrance to the mansion bears on its outside the inscription in Latin, "The Lord preserve thy coming in," and on the inner outside the text, "The Lord preserve thy going out." The same ideas have been carried out in the design of the balustrades of the terraces surrounding the lawns and flower beds, which make the gardens of Castle Ashby among the most beautiful in the country. The mansion itself is unique, as all its pediments are composed of texts of Scripture in Latin. Commencing at the south end of the west wing is the inscription in bold letters, "Except the Lord, the Keeper, keep the house, in vain he watcheth who keeps it." Then follows another inscription dated 1624, the year the house was completed, "Except the Lord build the house, they have labored in vain who build it." Along the outer balustrade we read: "Blessed are they who keep the Lord, who walk in his ways. Praise ye the name of the Lord. Amen."—Treasury.

EVERYBODY [illegible]

A CITY IN THE SEA.

Ruins of an Ancient Town on the Bed of the Adriatic.

Near Rovigno, on the [illegible] of Istria, in the Adriatic sea, the ruins of a strange town are said to exist at the bottom of the sea. It had been observed for some years that fishermen's [illegible] expeditions entangled in what appeared to be masses of masonry, of which fragments were brought up from the sea bed, says the Pall Mall Gazette. A diver declared that he had seen walls and streets below the water.

The city authorities decided to investigate. They sent down a diver, who, at the depth of [illegible] feet, found himself surrounded on the bottom of the sea by the ruined walls, undoubtedly the work of man. Continuing his explorations, he traced the line of walls and was able to distinguish how the streets were laid out. He did not see any doors or window openings, for they were hidden by masses of seaweed and incrustations. He traced the masonry for a distance of 100 feet, where he had to stop, as his diving cord did not permit him to go farther.

Some people think that they identify this lost town with the island mentioned by Pliny the elder under the name of Cissa, near Istria. This island cannot be found now, and it is thought the submerged town may have been a settlement on the island that so mysteriously disappeared.

LIGHT REFLECTION.

The Reason Why Foam Always Appears White in Color.

When water or liquid of any color is violently agitated small bubbles of air are mixed up with it, and then foam is formed, and its whiteness is due to the fact that when light passes from one medium to another of a different refractive index it is always reflected, and this reflection may be so often repeated as to render the substance impervious to light.

It is, then, this frequency of the reflections of the limiting surfaces of air and water that renders foam opaque, and as each particle reflects light in all directions so much light is reflected that the mixture appears white.

To a similar cause is due the whiteness of transparent bodies when crushed to powder. The separate particles transmit light freely, but the reflections at their surfaces are so numerous that the resulting effect is white. Thus glass when crushed is a white powder and is opaque, but when it is put under water it once more becomes transparent, because the water fills up the interstices between the particles and the reflections are destroyed. Salt and sugar are also common examples of this condition.

How Roots Penetrate Hard Ground.

The extreme tips of a delicate root are protected by a sheath set with minute scales, which as it is worn away by friction against the soil is as constantly replaced, so that it gets [illegible] and the root thread is [illegible]. Another aid to penetration lies in the provision whereby the root as it pushes downward in search of nourishment assumes a slightly spiral, screwlike motion which works its tip into the ground. Another important agent is the acid cell sap which exudes on to and dissolves [illegible] the rock or hard soil. This may be tested by placing a small piece of polished marble in a pot in which a plant is set and covering it with earth. After some weeks the marble will be found to have been corroded by the continuous action of this acid.

City of Three Kings.

Do you know what city has been given the name of the City of Three Kings? It is Cologne, in Germany. The reason is that it is in Cologne that the three "kings," or "magi," or "wise men," who went to Bethlehem [illegible] are supposed to be buried. According to [illegible] legend, their bones were brought from Milan to Cologne by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa in 1162 and presented to the archbishop of Cologne. SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months' residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,[illegible] bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,[illegible] bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building [illegible] concrete tanks, [illegible] feet in diameter and [illegible] feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 22,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately [illegible] bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

They Were All "Pills."

One of the fashionable east side churches recently witnessed a funny incident at a choir rehearsal. They were preparing for the following Sunday morning a beautiful selection, the first words of which were, "I am a pilgrim." It so happened that the music divided the word "pilgrim" and made a pause after the syllable. The effect was most amusing. The soprano sang in a high key "I am a pil" and then stopped. The tenor solemnly edged that he was a "pil," and when the bass came thundering in with a like declaration, "I am a pil," it was too much for the gravity of the singers, and they roared. No amount of practice could get them past the fatal pause without an outburst, and the piece had to be given up.—Musical World.

A QUEER LEGEND.

Feodor Kouzmich, the Hermit, May Have Been a Russian Czar.

A curious legend is associated with the name of Alexander I. of Russia. It is to the effect that the emperor in 1825 was sojourning in the Crimea. When near Taganrog his coachman by some means managed to overturn the carriage of a court courier named Maskof, who was killed. The emperor, wishing to rid himself of the cares of state, so the story runs, caused it to be reported that it was he himself who was killed. Then he carried out a plan which he had for long conceived of retiring to Siberia and living there under an assumed name. Schilder, the historian, professes to have satisfied himself that at all events the remains in the Cathedral of Peter and Paul are those of the courier. Schilder asserts that he learned this much from the children of Maskof.

According to the legend, Alexander I. of Russia died in Siberia in 1864, but history records that he died at Taganrog in 1825. It seems that in 1836 a mysterious stranger appeared in Siberia. He gave his name as Feodor Kouzmich and never revealed any other or the place whence he came. He lived the life of a hermit and was received generally with respect. In 1859 he accepted the invitation of a rich merchant to take up his abode in his house at Tomsk. There he was very retired and held communication only with Mlle. Kromof and the merchant, her father. Every one who saw him was struck with his extraordinary resemblance to the defunct czar. The Grand Duke Nicholas Michaelovitch contributed an article to the Revue Historique in which he denied the sensational part of the story, but admitted that the hermit of Siberia might have been a natural brother of Alexander I.—London Globe.

Why Iron Rusts.

British investigators estimate that the [illegible] in England [illegible] every day and that the larger part of this loss is due to the effects of rust. The problem of rust is of great economical importance not only because of [illegible] but also because of the great [illegible] Recent experiments indicate that pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust. It appears to be necessary for the production of rust that some acid, notably carbonic acid, shall be present. When iron is subjected to the action of water containing traces of acid and in the presence of atmospheric oxygen it always rusts. The rapid rusting of iron in railroad stations is ascribed to the presence of sulphuric acid derived from the smoke of locomotives.—Harper's Weekly.

The Dodging in Japan.

Lately I have been far afield in a small Japanese-English dictionary, from which I have culled a choice collection of words peculiar to the country, such as:

An—A small house inhabited by a Buddhist priest.

Ashiarai—Washed rice offered to idols.

Gedan—Rice fields about which a false statement has been made in order to diminish the tax.

Now, idols are all very well, for even in this country we have idols (of sorts) to which we devote more precious gifts than much washed rice; also no [illegible] nourished merely on rice will be able long to withstand the assaults of the [illegible] criticism. But it is rather melancholy to find that tax dodging is not unknown to that most patriotic though by no means lightly taxed nation.—Atlantic Monthly.

Marriage in Burma.

In Burma marriage is civil, not religious, and is regarded as a simple partnership which, if not happy, may be dissolved at any time. After marriage there is no outward symbol like a wedding ring on a Burmese woman. She does not even adopt her husband's name, but retains her own. [illegible] a divorce with facility.

Anything to Oblige.

The conductor of the [illegible] London [illegible] to the driver:

"Look 'ere," he exclaimed [illegible]

"Orl rite—orl rite!" responded John. [illegible]—London Answers.

The Voracious Cod.

So voracious is the codfish that it will swallow anything it sees in motion. [illegible]

DARING WORK IN A FOG.

Clever Seamanship of a Captain in a Landlocked Harbor.

"The greatest piece of seamanship I ever saw," said a traveler, "was on a trip to Halifax. It was a marvel, and this is how it happened.

"We were steaming along about twelve hours out from our destination one summer afternoon. It had been clear all day, and the sea was beautifully blue, but about 4 o'clock the fog began to shut down—one of those swift, dense fogs that come on that coast and shroud a boat from sight in less time than it takes to tell of it. Of course the fog whistles began to blow, and many of the passengers got nervous under the strain of its continued bellowing.

"After dinner I went up on the bridge and was permitted to stay. The captain would not enter into any conversation—that is, I could not talk to him, but in his restless pacing up and down the bridge he would frequently make a remark to me. It went on that way for hours, the fog as thick as steam and the whistle reiterating its mournful warning.

"At length the captain gave a sharp order. 'Two points, northwest by north,' he said. 'No, a little more—that's right,' he finished as his command was executed. I was bewildered, and my face must have shown it as he passed me, for he vouchsafed the explanation that he wanted to pass within a few hundred feet of a certain whistling buoy near the harbor. I said nothing, but I did not understand. Why, the night was so thick that it was hard work to see from the bridge to the rail, and what could be meant by making a buoy?

"On and on we went, and always the fog seemed to me thicker. I could not sleep, and most of the night I was on the bridge. When it must have been nearly morning a new whistling began to sound on our starboard bow, as nearly as I could judge. It was a fearful fog siren, and kept getting nearer and nearer. We had stopped whistling, and the passengers were terribly frightened. I looked at one naval officer who stood with me on the bridge, and his face was like a dead man's. Mine must have been also.

"Then, just as it seemed that some giant steamship must strike us, so close was the whistling, the fog lifted like a veil, and there, not 150 feet away, was the buoy that the captain had mentioned.

"Almost at once the fog closed down again; but, do you know, he took us past two warships, into the landlocked harbor and up to the dock in it. It was magnificent, and, though we really could not put our admiration in tangible form, we got together and gave him a gold watch on the return voyage as a little souvenir."—New York Post.

Learn to Obey.

Learn to obey! By obedience I do not mean merely outward submission to enforced force and authority, but the voluntary subordination of one's own will under the will of a better and higher intelligence. He who has not learned to do this in childhood will have great difficulty in learning it in later life; he will rarely get beyond the deplorable and unhappy state that vacillates between outward submission and [illegible] rebellion. No greater wrong can be done to [illegible] conceives the duty of the educator to consist in giving in to all desires of the child, in gratifying all its wishes, makes himself guilty of the gravest sin toward his child. He denies it what, in view of its future mission, it cannot afford to lose—namely, the exercise in voluntarily subordinating its own will under necessity, be it a natural or a social one.—Professor F. Paulsen, University of Berlin, in Educational Review.

A Deadly Verbal Insult That Will Render Him Speechless.

A discreet knowledge of slang is a very useful accomplishment for the stranger or the foreign resident in Paris. Thus if a cabman is rude or more than usually extortionate or if he splashes you with mud from head to foot as he passes and then turns around to grin at the damage done, and cochers frequently do these things, an inadequate command of the niceties of the French language leaves all the advantages on his side.

You might call him "idiot" or "sauvage," but this would only tickle him. If, however, you were able to shout "Va done, Collignon!" the result of the encounter would be at once wholly in your favor.

To say "Collignon" to a cocher is the supreme insult. It leaves him gasping and further speech on his side useless. It is easy to understand why.

Collignon was a coachman who so long ago as 1855 went to the house of a poor professor and murdered him [illegible] Collignon [illegible] condemned to death and guillotined. To this day, [illegible] "Va, Collignon!" [illegible] the last word.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.

LENGTHY VISITS.

The Unstinted Hospitality of Old Virginia.

Virginia hospitality is a byword. The old time country house, says Mrs. Roger A. Pryor in "My Day," was built of elastic material, capable of sheltering any number of guests, many of whom remained all summer. Indeed, this was expected of them.

"My dear sir," said the genial master of Westover to a departing guest who had sought shelter from a summer storm, "my dear sir, do stay and pay us a visit."

The guest pleaded business that forbade his compliance.

"Well, well," said Major Drewry, "if you can't pay us a visit come for two or three weeks at least."

"Week ends" were unknown in Virginia, and equally out of the question an invitation limited by the host to prescribed days and hours. Sometimes a happy guest would ignore time altogether and stay along from season to season. I cannot remember a parallel case to that of Isaac Watts, who, invited by Sir Thomas Abney to spend a night at Stoke Newington, accepted with great cheerfulness and stayed the rest of his life, nearly forty years, but I do remember that an invitation for one night brought to a member of our family a pleasant couple who remained for years.

Mozart's Musical Memory.

Mozart had a wonderful memory of musical sounds. When only fourteen years of age he went to Rome to assist in the solemnities of holy week. Immediately after his arrival he went to the Sistine chapel to hear the famous "Miserere" of Allegri. Being aware that it was forbidden to take or give a copy of this renowned piece of music, Mozart placed himself in a corner and gave the strictest attention to the music and on leaving the church noted down the entire piece. A few days afterward he heard it a second time and, following the music with his own copy in his hand, satisfied himself of the fidelity of his memory. The next day he sang the "Miserere" at a concert, accompanying himself on the harpsichord, and the performance produced such a sensation in Rome that Pope Clement XIV. requested that this musical prodigy should be presented to him at once.

The First Iron Bridge.

The first iron bridge ever erected in the world and which is in constant use at the present time spans a little river in the county of Salop, on the railroad leading from Shrewsbury to Worcester, England. It was built in the year 1779 and is exactly one hundred feet in length. The total amount of iron used in its construction was 378 tons. Stephenson, the great engineer, in writing concerning it said: "When we consider the fact that the casting of iron was at that time in its infancy, we are obliged to [illegible] skill alone could conceive and carry into execution such an undertaking."

A Hospital Nurse's Hands.

As an example of trademarks have you ever noticed the hands of the hospital nurse? The soft white hand which in fiction is occupied in cooling fevered brows does not exist and could not. It is a skilled hand, but its work makes it rough and chapped. Try bathing your hands in disinfectants twenty times a day and you will find that, look after them as you may, they will soon be covered with cracks, which in east wind often burst to bleeding cuts. And as they are worked hard for some twelve or thirteen hours a day the nurse takes a somewhat larger size in gloves than most women. If you ever see the photograph of a hospital nurse you may observe that she prefers to keep those hands behind her back.—London Chronicle.

Longest Family Tree.

The biggest family tree in the world is believed to be the one which traces the genealogy of Queen Elizabeth back to King David and thence to Adam, or at least as near to Adam as one could get. The coat of arms is given in almost every case, with full particulars of the dates of births and deaths. The labor of providing coats of arms is abandoned before Methuselah's time, but the chart measures forty-five feet and certainly does take one through a maze of nobility.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Francis Rovey.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Rovey, corner Woodbine and Erskine avenues, have the sympathy of their many friends over the death Friday night of their little son Francis, who passed away suddenly.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

Miss Margaret Madden.

The death occurred on Friday night at her residence, 240 Simcoe street, of Margaret Madden, daughter of the late James Madden of Smith Falls, Ont.

The deceased lady was born in Smith Falls, but had resided in this city for several years. She was a member of St. Peter's church and was very highly respected by all who knew her.

She is survived by two brothers and two sisters.

The funeral will take place to-day at Smith Falls.

IF HEADACHY, DIZZY, BILIOUS, "CASCARETS"

Your Liver is Full of Bile; Bowels Clogged, Stomach Sour, Tongue Coated, Breath Bad.

—Get a 10-cent box now.

You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

TORONTO SAVINGS AND LOAN COMPANY

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company was held at the Head Office of the Company, No. 437 George street, Peterborough, on Friday, the 23rd day of January, 1914, at 2 o'clock p.m.

DIRECTOR'S REPORT

The Directors submit herewith their Twenty-Ninth Annual Report, showing the result of the business for the past year accompanied by the Balance Sheet to the 31st December, 1913.

The Gross Earnings for the year were $286,422.83, and after the payment of Interest on Deposits and Debentures and all expenses of management, there remained a Net Profit of $157,102.01. To this amount has been added $53,232.54, the balance carried forward from last year, which makes a total sum for distribution of $210,334.55.

This amount has been disposed of in the following manner:

(1) By payment of Four Quarterly Dividends at the rate of 10 p.c. for the year, amounting to	$100,000.00
(2) By addition to Reserve Fund	50,000.00
(3) By amount carried forward to Profit and Loss Account	60,334.55

The above addition to the Reserve Fund increases it to $850,000.00 or 85 p.c. of the Present Paid-Up Capital.

All payments maturing during the year on the Company's investments have been satisfactorily met, and the rentals from the property owned by the Company have also been promptly paid. The books, accounts and securities of the Company have been carefully examined by the auditors, and their Report is attached to the Financial Statement.

It is with a feeling of deep regret that we have to record the death of Senator Geo. A. Cox, who was President of the Company since its inception and to whom in a very large degree, the present strong position of the Company is due.

Your Temple of Music

The unmatched beauty of the Greeks' early temples has been the inspiration of architects for 2000 years. But their music is gone—forgotten. No genius can "restore" it as we do the crumbling columns of her Acropolis.

We have caught the spirit of their art, however, in the design of the modern temple of music—the Grafonola.

The Favorite, for instance, embodies the same principles of proportion and contour, and as an example of cabinet-making pays the same tribute to modern music as the architecture of the Greek temples did to ancient music. Grafonola music is worthy of this tribute.

You can put this modern Temple of Music with its inexhaustible repertoire in your own home for as little as $20.00.

You pay for it in convenient monthly amounts, whether you purchase the Grand at $650 or a lower priced instrument.

SIMPLE CEREMONY AT THE GRAVESIDE OF LORD STRATHCONA

Previously Service in Westminster Abbey Had Attracted Thousands--Marked Contrast is Plainly Shown

London, Jan. 26.—London paused to-day as the Capital of the Empire to pay tribute to an Empire builder, Lord Strathcona, Canada's grand old man. Before ten o'clock there was considerable of a gathering, silently respectful, outside 28 Grosvenor Square. The Dominion, ambassadors and residents, all classes were represented in the crowd, and there were many who shed genuine tears at the loss of a friend who aided them always when in distress. Lord Strathcona's many private munificences will never be known, but the gathering outside his house proved that he was not only a great man, but also a man of great heart. Shortly after nine there was a simple Scottish funeral service in the mourning room, where a flowered covered casket rested. Only members of the family were present.

Wreath From Canada.

It was an hour later when a motor hearse completely covered with wreaths left for Westminster Abbey, where the nation was gathered to pay tribute to a simple Scotsman, who became Canada's great ambassador. At the rear of the hearse was a great wreath of white lillies from "Sorrowful members of the Government of Canada." As the long funeral cortege passed slowly out of the Square into the busy streets of the West End all traffic was halted and every one stood silently.

Stately Pomp of Service.

No contrast could be more decisive than that between the stately pomp of the Abbey service in presence of England's greatest in politics, letters, science and arts, and the actual interment where Lord Strathcona was just laid to rest beside his wife in the quiet suburban cemetery of Highgate. Their united resting place is marked by severe though [illegible] simplicity. All the public can see is a large plain slab in the midst of green grass plot, hedged by winter shrubs, some of them in flower. The grave is close to the highways, just within the cemetery gates, but claims attention because so distinctly apart from the many thousands of graves which shelter some of the most eminent English men and women.

Protestants and Catholics Agree

(Special to The Times.)

Regina, Jan. 26.—Religious union as far as school education goes, has been effected in Regina. As far as is known this is the first attempt to have a system of religious training in public schools, that is suitable to Protestants and Roman Catholics alike. For some time past the various clergymen of the city, including among others: Rev. Dr. W. W. Andrews, formerly of Regina Methodist College, and Bishop Mathieu, representing the Roman Catholic denomination, have been considering the question of the form which religious teaching, in public schools, should take. By eliminating certain parts of the form used by the different churches and picking out the parts which in all these denominationsq teachings are similar, a system was arranged which is now suitable to all. Owing to the many objections which one denomination finds in another's teachings, it was expected that some obstacle would come up. This, however was not the case.

DOCTORS WILL KEEP VISITORS AWAY FOR A LONG TIME YET

Premier Continues to Make Progress--He is Eating Well and There is Good Hope for Recovery

"Sir James Whitney's condition is satisfactory. He is improving steadily."

Toronto, Jan. 26.—Such was the bulletin issued this morning by the three doctors in attendance on the Premier. Supplemented by the additional information secured from Doctors McPhedran and Clarke, Sir James' improvement continues and affords increased cause for hope of a rapid recovery.

No Visitors Yet.

"Sir James had a very fair night," said Dr. McPhedran, in answer to enquiries. "No one, but his immediate relatives have seen him, and it will be a long time yet before he is able to receive visitors." Asked if the Premier was delirious at times, Dr. McPhedran replied that he still wandered a bit.

He Is Eating Well.

Dr. Clarke said Sir James was eating well, his diet being the same as last week—eggs, milk and ice cream. The same question was put to him as to how long it would be before Sir James was able to see visitors.

"We don't want any visitors until he is out of the wood," was the reply. He added that they discouraged all visitors. He said Sir James was stronger, and remarked, "We are hoping for gradual improvement."

McCLAY FOUND GUILTY OF ADMINISTRATING DRUGS

The case of the young local tailor, McClay, charged with administering noxious drugs to Margaret Dale, a young Welsh girl, was tried on committment before his honor, Judge Huycke. The evidence seemed to be practically identical with that given by Miss Dale at the preliminary hearing in the police court. Miss Dale said the prisoner first met her last June on Circus Day. He took her to the show that evening and acted quite properly. Next night he took her for a walk to the Lift Lock. On the way home he took improper liberties with her. She had relations with prisoner later on, quite a number of times. She liked him better later on. She was in trouble and prisoner gave her pills.

Adjt. and Mrs. McElhaney were present to support the complainant. The [illegible] said complainant asked prisoner, "why did you offer a doctor [illegible]?" He said, "The Woman's [illegible] took the case up." He and his wife sent for McClay to try and get the trouble straightened out. He thought he might be able to get the girl in S.A. Home in Toronto.

Afternoon Session.

When the hearing was adjourned until the afternoon, Dr. Scott said that the pills administered were not prescribed by medical men, although many married women [illegible]. Such pills are commonly sold by druggists.

Another doctor thought pills supplied were as harmless as pills of bread and water.

Here the Judge called Mr. Wensley, who acted for the prosecution and asked whether the pills administered had contained drugs. The Acting Crown Attorney replied "No."

A young woman, next witness, at whose house complainant lived, said quite a number of men, besides McClay, called on Miss Dale.

The prisoner, in the box, said he promised to marry the girl last July. He admitted giving her the pills. He did not marry her because he saw her with other boys.

Mr. O'Connell, who with Mr. [illegible] acted for the defendant, made a strong plea for the defendant. He claimed that the prosecution should have [illegible] of the pills.

Mr. Wensley made a strong address for the prosecution.

The outcome was that McClay was found guilty and he was remanded for a week for sentence.

COUNTY COUNCIL TO-DAY

Election of Warden the First Business of the Council.

The inaugural meeting of the County Council will take place this afternoon, when the first business will be the election of Warden. The names mentioned in this connection are Messrs. W. G. Howden, Robert Shaw, A. A. Wilde and C. C. Darling.

The following reeves and deputy reeves constitute the Council for the year 1914:

M. Brown, Asphodel.
A. A. Wilde, Belmont and Methuen.
N. Lean, Burleigh and Anstruther.
D. Campbell, Chandos.
C. J. Darling, Dummer.
N. Walsh, Douro.
S. Killen, Ennismore.
C. Cohen, Galway and Cavendish.
W. G. Howden, North Monaghan.
W. A. Anderson, Otonabee.
D. Doyell, Otonabee.
J. H. Garbutt, Smith.
J. McKee, Smith.
R. Squire, Norwood.
Dr. Kindred, Havelock.
H. Fitzgerald, Lakefield.

The sessions of the Council will continue throughout the week.

One of the most important questions which is to come before the Council this year will be the construction of a permanent bridge at Gannon's Narrows. It is proposed that this bridge be built partly by the Dominion and Ontario Governments and County and [illegible] by the latter.

THUGS [illegible] SET FIRE TO STORE

Montreal Tobacconist Felled by [illegible]—Bandits Start Fire in [illegible]

Montreal, Jan. 26.—Louis Gowen, who keeps a tobacco store at Pointe St. Charles, had a most unfortunate [illegible] on Saturday. About 11 p.m. he closed his store and started for his home. Passing a dark lane, two men sprang out on him and felled him to the ground with a black jack. While he was lying unconscious the thugs took from his pockets his day's takings and the keys of his store. They went to the place of business, opened the store, but in the course of their search for further valuables one of them dropped a match. Mr. Gowen returned to consciousness to hear cries of fire and staggering in the direction of his store found it in a blaze. [illegible]

WILL CONTINUE TO BOYCOTT BUTCHERS

Toronto, Jan. 26.—West Toronto Jewry have decided to continue their boycott against the butchers until the latter lower the price of meat. A meeting has been planned for to-morrow night at the offices of the Associated Hebrew Charities, 218 Simcoe street, and it is expected that as a result all the Jews in Toronto will follow the example of those in West Toronto.

RABBI LIKES TANGO AND OTHER DANCES

San Francisco, Jan. 26.—Rabbi Jacob Nieto, addressing the congregation Sherith Israel, warmly commended the tango and kindred dances.

"The old padres in the early days of the California missions were wise men," said the Rabbi. "Every Sunday afternoon they let the people dance, and watched them while they did so. In the middle ages the Jewish Rabbis had the young people dance every Sunday afternoon.

"What we need is more common sense and less theology. The tango, danced by cultured persons, is beautifully pleasing; by the awkward it appears vulgar. You can take a religious ceremony and make it a farce."

EMPRESS OF RUSSIA HAS NEAR ESCAPE

New York, Jan. 24.—A Paris cable to the Tribune says: L'Intransigeant states that Queen Alexandra of England has recently received a letter from Empress Marie of Russia, saying that she had narrowly escaped death on a journey from Denmark to St. Petersburg.

A bomb exploded only ten yards from the train but no damage was done. The Empress had received a nihilist's death sentence. The accident was officially attributed to a short circuit of electricity.

PRIESTS, NUNS, AND STUDENTS PRAY FOR SIGHT FOR BLIND

New York, Jan. 26.—Half a million Catholic students in colleges and seminaries throughout the country, and priests and nuns to-day were engaged in a nine-days' prayer for the restoration of the sight of Henry J. Wessling made totally blind by an explosion in the chemical laboratory of the Jesuit College in Buffalo several years ago.

Wessling's class will be presented in June for ordination before Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore.

As a deformed or partially deformed candidate cannot be raised to the priesthood under the laws of the church, the Pope may be asked to grant a special dispensation in Wessling's case, should his sight not be restored after the nine days of prayer.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION HELD IN THE Y. M. C. A.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the annual convention of the Peterborough County Temperance Alliance, held in the Y.M.C.A. yesterday afternoon. The devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. R. Pogue.

Mr. H. B. Cowan spoke on the subject: "A Review of the Past; the Next Step." He said in part, that they had an excellent organization in Peterborough. He drew attention to certain arguments that were brought forward by the liquor interests against local option. He showed that there were once 114 licenses in Peterborough and now we had fourteen as the result of the local option campaign.

Dr. McTavish spoke of "Law Enforcement." He said the license holders know the conditions under which they receive their licenses and they should be made to observe them.

Whatever is done in the way of law enforcement should be done by the local committee. Two members ought to go to the License Inspector or send the complaint in writing to the inspector, give him thirty days to take action, and see that he acts upon it, and if not report him to the head of the department. Mr. Hanna had assured them that he would deal firmly with inspectors who were remiss. You could also prosecute an inspector who failed in his duty.

The convention was continued at George street church lecture hall last night.

A SURPRISE PARTY IN OTONABEE

An enjoyable evening was spent on Monday of last week when about thirty young people of Salem neighborhood accompanied by the Superintendent of Salem Sunday School, Mr. Thos. E. Sargent and his wife, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Webster, where their daughter Violet was made the recipient of a beautiful "autograph quilt" presented by Miss Edith Croft, while Miss Margaret Johnston read the following address:

Miss Violet Webster:

Dear Friend—We, your friends of Salem neighborhood, wish to extend to you our appreciation of the genial and kindly interest manifested to all with whom you associate.

And especially the keen interest you have always taken in our Sunday School in which work you have performed the duties of teacher so cheerfully and unassumingly for a number of years.

We the members of the "Ladies Bible Class" of which you have been president for the past year ask you to accept this "autograph quilt" as a slight token of our esteem.

Hoping in the years to come as reading over the names here inscribed, it may recall our pleasant associations together.

Signed on behalf of Bible Class,
ADA I. CURTIS,
CLARA ARMSTRONG.

Signed on behalf of the neighborhood,
EDWIN SARGENT,
STANLEY JOHNSTON.

Miss Webster, although taken entirely by surprise, replied in a suitable manner thanking her young friends.

The evening was spent in music and games after which all did ample justice to the good things provided by the guests before returning to their homes.

MARGARET ANGLIN LAST NIGHT

Grand Opera House Filled to Welcome Famous Actress.

Last night the Grand Opera House was filled to the doors to witness the production of Shakespeare's great drama, "As You Like It," in which Margaret Anglin, the famous Canadian actress took the leading role. This was Miss Anglin's first appearance before a Peterborough audience, and her splendid representation of the leading character of the play fully justified the high reputation which she has attained in the hearts and minds of theatre-goers.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons are to be congratulated on their success in securing this great attraction.

CLAIMS FIRST WIFE WAS MARRIED WOMAN

Herbert Bevis Sets Up Novel Defence in Perjury Charge.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—Herbert A. Bevis, it is alleged, when taking out a marriage license to marry Ethel Hinkley, 1007 Dundas street, in March, 1912, swore that he was a bachelor.

He admits being married to a Miss Margaret Wood in 1909 at Trinity Square, but holds that his first marriage was illegal, as Miss Wood was a married woman at the time. Miss Wood has disappeared, and Bevis states he has not seen her for three years. The case stands until to-morrow.

MUSTARD SANDWICH IS POOR SUSTENANCE FOR STARVING MEN

Manager of British Employment Agency Criticizes The Mission Diet

Toronto, Jan. 26.MUnemployed is no more acute this year than usual according to agents and others in close touch with the situation, but the difficulties of the unemployed are severe because June, July, August and September of last year were bad months for work. A slight improvement was noticeable in October, and November was really a good month for the work era. But even skilled mechanics cannot make enough in one month to tide them over the future.

Mr. Frank Wise, who does a great deal in a quiet way, particularly for men from the Old Country, is of opinion that there is a good deal of hysteria at present about the agitation for the unemployed. He notices a general feeling of optimism for the coming year. At the British Employment Agency on Simcoe street, which is financed by Mr. Wise, enquiries are being received for skilled workers for the middle of February and beginning of March.

Some Irresponsible.

Mr. Frank Wise complained of the irresponsible character of many of the men who have to be dealt with. He cites instances of men who have been found posts, had their transportation advanced by the agency, and who have taken other jobs on reaching their destination, and then avoided repaying the cost of transportation and paying the agency commission.

But from the same agency comes another story. Mr. de Fleury, the manager, admits that some men behave in this manner. This is not his immediate concern. He has on his books many men who are known to him as good steady workers. He can find no work for them at present; that is to say nothing of a permanent character, and he can hold out little hope of improved conditions until the middle of February.

A Tasty Sandwich.

Mr. de Fleury complained bitterly of the manner in which men had been treated at the Young street Mission. He showed a representative a sandwich which had been brought back to the agency by an applicant for relief. It consisted of bread with mustard spread on it, nothing else. This and coffee without sugar was the fare offered. Several workless men present corroborated this story.

THE CHILDRENS AID SOCIETY HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

Yesterday the commodious Bank of MontrealC hambers was well filled by a representative gathering of ladies and gentlemen interested in the progress of the Children's Aid Society.

The chair was ably filled by the President, Mr. R. W. Travers, Manager of the Bank of Montreal in this city. The local Society, judging by the attendance and general reports presented below, is in a healthy condition.

A document was presented by the Ladies' Aid Sewing Society, of this commendable charity, was presented. One hundred and eighty articles have been supplied for the children during the past year.

Dr. Amys said the children only sustained one death. He paid a high tribute to Superintendent and Mrs. Henry for their excellent work during the year. He also referred in no uncertain terms to the duty of the Ontario Government to take over the charge of feeble minded children and the discountenance of marriage between feeble minded persons.

Work Done at the Shelter.

To the President, Officers and Members of the Children's Aid Society of Peterborough.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I have the honour to present to you my report of the work carried on at your Shelter during the year 1913.

I am glad to say that all of the children cared for in the Shelter during the year have enjoyed good health and there has been no serious illness nor any deaths during the year.

All children admitted to the Shelter of school age are regularly sent to school as soon as properly clothed and cleaned. I am pleased to report that our wards do remarkably well at school and during the year I received no complaints from any teacher respecting them. On the contrary several teachers have spoken to me stating how pleased they were with the deportment of the children.

During the year 38 children were admitted and registered on the books of the shelter and we had three at the beginning of the year from 1912 making a total of forty-one. Of these seven were cared for in the Shelter for a temporary period pending treatment of their mothers in the hospital. A number were placed in the Shelter by the Chief of Police pending trial. This applies more in particular to the case of several young girls. Four were placed in the Shelter pending charges and trials for theft, all of whom were convicted. Two were [illegible] from foster homes. One child was committed to the St. John's Industrial school. A number of children were placed in the Shelter due to charges against parents for neglecting to send children to school. These were afterwards returned to the parents on condition that the children were sent regularly to school in the future. A number of the children made wards of the Society were allowed to return to their parents pending probation by the parents.

I am glad to report that as a result of my visits to these families that all are continuing to do well.

During the year I was appointed by Mr. J. J. Kelso, Superintendent of the Society, to visit the wards in Peterborough City and County. I find on the whole that your wards are well placed. As a result of my visits I recommended three removals, one of whom was a ward in the city and two were wards of the Provincial Society and placed by them direct.

I would call the attention of the Society to the need of a new fence at the Shelter around the front adjoining Water street and along [illegible] street.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. HENRY.
Supt. of Shelter.

Mr. E. A. Peck then made an eloquent defence, that is incontrovertible, for the Ontario Government, in reply to Dr. Amys. He said the Children's Aid Society has done splendid work during the past year. [illegible] added that whilst the Ontario Government was in sympathy with the Children's Aid, their funds were limited, but promised that the Government would soon pass resolutions taking care of the feeble-minded. He thought that homes either under County or Province would be provided.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I have the honour to present the Annual Report of the Executive of your Society for the year 1913.

The year just closed has been one of progress in every department of the Society's sphere of usefulness.

At the close of the year 1912, we had three children in the Shelter, and during the year our books show that in addition to these, thirty-eight children were registered in the shelter, making a total of forty-one. Of this number, twenty-three came from the city, thirteen from the county and two from outside places. It is of interest to note that of the total forty-one children in the shelter during the year, twenty-one were girls and twenty boys.

In addition to the children registered in the Shelter, thirty-two were dealt with direct in the Secretary's office without being placed in the Shelter.

The Shelter has as usual been kept up to a high standard of efficiency under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Henry, to whom too much praise cannot be given for their careful attention and care given to the children.

To the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Society is also due much praise for their active work in preparing clothing for the children.

The work of the Society continues to increase in volume. We found this especially during the latter part of the year, when we were called upon to assist a number of families deserted by their husbands. In this class of cases deserted mothers are usually obliged to go out working, leaving a family of small children in the house to do as they please all day. These deserted mothers earn hardly enough to supply food and pay for the rent, and when they become ill or incapable of working, situations occur which call for the immediate attention of your Society's officers.

The increased cost of living and the present industrial situation necessarily mean the production of a large number of cases for the attention of your Society this Winter. Reports are made to us of a number of cases which will probably need early assistance on account of the wage earners of the REALITY OF THE AMAZONS.

Relics of Women Fighters of High Rank In Olden Times.

The tradition of the Amazons, a valiant race of women warriors, was a favorite one with the writers and artists of ancient Greece, but it has been generally treated in modern times as a poetic myth. Now comes an interesting archaeological discovery which makes it appear certain that there were indeed women fighters of high rank in the old days.

There was recently unearthed a sepulchre in the part of Italy once known as Etruria in which was found a war chariot of bronze and iron and crouching in it the skeleton of a woman. There were about her not only the remains of rich robes and beautiful ornaments of gold and ivory, attesting truly feminine vanity, but also the same weapons which the ancient traditions say the Amazons used in battle. The bronze work and the terra cotta vases definitely fixed the date of the tomb at about 800 B. C.

The earliest accounts of the Amazons located them in the northeast part of Asia Minor, but Etruria was peopled from Asia Minor and had attained a high degree of skill in certain of the arts long before Rome was founded. Such evidence as this tomb affords is more convincing than the pictures of Amazons on the old vases of such legends as that of Queen Penthesilea, who is said to have led 5,000 female soldiers to the aid of Priam in the Trojan war.

The traditional man-of-war's man who made it a practice to roll his quid to the other side of his cheek and spit on his hands before taking to the guns is decidedly a thing of the past, according to the reports of the navy department.

The quid of chewing tobacco is no longer an essential characteristic of the man behind the guns. He is coming to the conclusion that he doesn't care for chewing tobacco or that it is not a nice habit or that he hasn't time to chew and be about his business too.

Last year the navy department contracted for 220,000 pounds of chewing tobacco for the use of the men of the fleet. This year the contracts will call for about 70,000, less than one-third of that amount.

There was a time when chewing tobacco was as important a feature of the ship's commissary as the allowance of grog was to Captain Kidd's crew and Captain Marryat's sailors. But the modern sailor has changed his habits.

He is a daintier sort of person by far, a cleaner one, more orderly being who has not lost altogether his social perspective. Nowadays the sailor is less inclined to both nicotine and grog than he has ever been before.—Manhattan.

It Cost Money to Be Smart.

A sprightly young matron hopped on a car at Eighth and Chestnut streets, handed a half dollar to the conductor and hurried to a seat without getting the change. The conductor, grinning broadly at the outcome which he expected, awaited developments. When the car reached Sixth street the woman turned to the conductor and remarked, "Did I get my change?"

The conductor laughingly handed her the change.

Then the scene changed.

"My good man," icily spoke the young woman, "I gave you a dollar."

Protestations on the part of the conductor availed him nothing. He fished about his clothes and found another four bit piece and handed it up, with a sigh.

"The next time I try to be funny," said the conductor, "I hope some one catches me before it costs me so much money."—Philadelphia Times.

The Twist of Trees.

A singular uniformity has been observed in the twist of tree trunks. In 999 trees out of every 1,000 whose trunks show torsion the direction of the twist is from right to left. This accords with the direction of the revolution of cyclonic storms in the northern hemisphere and also with that of whirlpools, which the French savant Jean Brunhes says always [illegible] turn from right to left. The query arises whether in the southern hemisphere the torsion of tree trunks has an opposite direction, like the cyclonic motions of the atmosphere in that half of the globe.—Harper's Weekly.

Fertile Socotra.

Socotra, a large island in the Indian ocean, is one of the least known of the inhabited parts of the world. It is mountainous, but very fertile, and in ancient times was famed for frankincense and myrrh, aloes, dragon's blood and spices. But now Sumatra and South America produce more dragon's blood.

A FUNNY FRENCHMAN.

The Brand of Humor With Which He Made Paris Laugh.

M. Sacha Guitry, who is the son of France's foremost actor, M. Lucien Guitry, is one of the funniest men in Paris.

He lives from morning till night in an atmosphere of constant joking. If his watch has stopped he rings up a number chosen at haphazard in the telephone directory. "What time is it?" he quietly asks. The person at the other end is so taken aback that he gives him the time. "Thanks," says Sacha Guitry; "that's all I wanted to know," and rings off again. The other day he shocked some stiff and starch friends who were taking him for a motor drive in the Bois by gravely saluting all the people he passed like a sovereign. "Why do you do that?" asked his friends. "I want to increase my circle of acquaintances," he answered.

There was a time when on the staircase of the flathouse he occupied at a pretty good height one saw a board just a few steps from his own landing showing the encouraging announcement, "M. Sacha Guitry—five stories more." The trick having become public property, he replaced the notice by another: "Don't hurry. I don't like people out of breath. I would rather wait for you another five minutes." When on his wedding day the maire asked him whether he would take Mlle. Lyses for wife he assumed a discomfited air, put his finger in his mouth and only some long seconds afterward deigned to reply to the official, who was growing impatient, "After all, if it will oblige you, I will say yes."—London Tatler.

Logan grove, for years the camping ground of tribes of Kansas Indians and a place of historical interest, will soon be a cornfield. This grove is ninety-nine acres in extent and is a mile and a half south of Junction City.

The grove is on the bank of the Smoky Hill river and was a favorite camping ground for Indians from the north and south parts of the state. They would come for powwows and would often leave their families in camp there while they went out on buffalo hunts. Many Indian relics are still to be found there.

In 1856 a soldier from Captain Henderson's company, then stationed at Fort Riley, went out to the site of the grove and built a small cabin. The next year Captain Henderson bought the ground and cabin, later homesteading the entire grove. For many years he had a sawmill there, and many of the houses in Junction City are constructed of lumber from Logan grove.

The cabin, which is still standing, was the first schoolhouse in Geary county. The place was then named Logan grove by Captain Henderson, who was a great admirer of General Logan, who was then stationed at Fort Riley. Mrs. Logan presented to Captain Henderson a large flag, which still flies on legal holidays from a flagstaff near the grove.

A few years before he died Captain Henderson erected a granite monument to the explorer Coronado, who followed the Smoky Hill river and camped at the grove, which was then the site of an Indian village, Quivera. It was the original intention to keep the grove in its present beautiful condition, but the high values of bottom land have made it too expensive to maintain in that condition. Robert Henderson, a son of the captain and the present owner of the land, will have it cleared.—Junction City Cor. Kansas City Star.

The Opium Couch.

In the library of a Chinese gentleman the opium couch is as inseparable a feature of a gentleman's home as the armchairs and cigars of an American den. Perhaps it must disappear now before the prohibition campaign which is being waged from Peking, or it will remain under the innocent guise of a reclining reading table, as some innocent globe trotters have described it. Opium as used in the ordinary citizen's private house is considered no more a vice than tobacco with Americans. It is the custom; that is all. The host waves you to the couch for a perfunctory whiff just as Americans begin by offering a guest a cigar.

The Size of Antarctica.

It is a somewhat curious fact, if it is a fact, that the last of the terrestrial continents to be explored is the largest mass of raised land in the world. The concentration of attention upon the south pole since Commander Peary landed the other end of our axis makes it highly probable that the antarctic antipode will soon be dangling from some explorer's belt. Incidentally the south polar continent will be opened, if not to the settler, at least to the mapmaker. We already know something of its fringes at a few points, and Lieutenant Shackleton pushed into it south of Mounts Erebus and Terror for several hundred miles, but the greater portion of its surface is still terra incognita.—Collier's.

A Suitable Career.

"What kind of a career have you mapped out for your boy, Josh?"

RIGHT HAND RULE.

The Way It Is Applied in Driving and in Navigation.

London's drivers, sitting on the right side of the driver's seat, turn to the left. Why? In order that looking down at the right side of the vehicle they may gauge to a fraction of an inch the hubs of a vehicle meeting them. In the United States the driver still preserves the right side of the seat and in turning to the right of the roadway has the least knowledge of where his hubs may be in passing.

But in international navigation the right hand rules always obtain. It is the narrow channel winding into a port where the extremest of emphasis is laid upon the vessel keeping to starboard, no matter how many crooks and turns and loops the channel may make.

This was illustrated in a collision on the Whangpoo river, in China, when the Pekin and the Normandie collided. The Normandie was descending the stream, keeping to starboard. The Pekin was ascending the channel, keeping to its starboard. At a sharp turn in the channel the two boats collided. The Pekin's master declared that owing to the sharp bend in the river it was a "crossing" case, in which the Normandie was to blame.

In the house of lords, however, it was held that the right of any channel of any degree of sinuosity lay at the right of the channel's center; that, therefore, when the Pekin failed to observe the rule in the sharp bend and "cut across" it became an offender against the law and must pay damages.—Chicago Tribune.

"Trim his claws! Mamma, I'm no manicure!"—Chicago Tribune.

Quick Growing Trees.

A remarkable tree has been discovered about the region of Lake Chad. Its power of increase in every way is remarkable. In a few months an extensive tract of land, we read, became an impenetrable forest. In one season it is said to grow to the height of from four to five meters—in other words, from thirteen to over sixteen feet. Its foliage is said to resemble the mimosa, and its branches are thorny. The wood can be cut into planks, and the natives work it up into canoes. The Tilho mission has utilized the wood for making tables and doors.—London Globe.

The Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. held their first meeting for the new year in the Lyceum, when a very interesting lecture was given on the "Hedge Schools of Ireland," by Rev. Dean McColl. A very good musical programme was rendered.

FOR OUT OF DOOR WEAR NOTHING EQUALS THE MIDDY BLOUSE

In the matter of outing clothes Dame Fashion is quite as "fussy" as with the more conventional garments. One would never think of playing golf in a peg-top skirt, unless it were unusually wide at the bottom; and a frilly bodice would be quite as much out of place. The Middy Blouse is an ideal garment. It is so American like that [illegible] copied in Paris and very well liked.

Number 3384 is a design showing as a new feature, the raglan sleeve. Linen or some heavy wash material is usual but here it is fashioned of dark blue serge, collared and cuffed in white. The plaited skirt is also of serge. For the school girl a design of this sort would be attractive and very comfortable.

This blouse requires for size 36 2⅝ yards of 36-inch material. The skirt may be made in size 24 with 7½ yards of 36-inch material.

A simple little afternoon gown is illustrated in number 8157. It is a design that is particularly suited to bordered materials. A dark green flowered silk is employed here with a border embroidered in soutache braid. The least extension in the front of the skirt is a novel detail which at the same time gives a suggestion of the peg-top.

To copy this dress in size 36, 5½ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

Number 3384—sizes 30 to 42.
Number 3330—sizes 22 to 32.
Number 8157—sizes 34 to 42.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size. Measurement over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

The Picture It Brought From Out a Dark Cavern.

Dr. Francis Clark told an interesting story of a youth living in Maine who was out in the woods one day taking photographs of attractive bits of scenery. He came upon the mouth of a little cavern between the rocks, and he said to himself, "I will see what sort of picture I can get out of that cave," and as it was a dark day he decided to take a "time exposure" instead of a "snapshot." Steadying the camera upon his knee as well as he could at the edge of the cave, he gave the sensitive plate a long, deliberate look at the semidarkness within. Then he continued his tramp through the woods and after a few hours returned to his camp.

Several weeks afterward, when developing his plates, you can imagine his astonishment to see in the picture in the very center of the cavern, with arched back and bristling fur and within springing distance of the spot where he had balanced his camera, a huge Canada lynx that might easily have destroyed his life. And yet he came and went and saw no signs of danger.—Christian Herald.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvaney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 6 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claims one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a miracle [illegible] also a worm killer; [illegible] and [illegible] all kinds of [illegible]. B'Well kills the germs, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulvaney. Write for further information [illegible]

POISONING INTERNATIONAL WATERS

Last week a report of Dr. A. J. McLaughlin, of the Public Health Service, was presented to the International Joint Waterways Commission concerning the pollution of the international waterways on the boundary between the United States and Canada. The report showed that there was extensive pollution of the waters adjacent to the larger cities, and it declared that owing to the present position of the intakes there is not a single city on the Great Lakes which can be said to possess water that is safe without treatment. The remedy, Dr. McLaughlin thinks, should be sought by the very best sanitarians which the world can provide. The Commission itself has no power to remedy the conditions complained of, but it will suggest the employment of well-known sanitarians and health authorities, and when these experts have reached satisfactory conclusions the Commission will recommend legislation embodying their views to the Canadian and United States Governments. The report showed that in the case of the Detroit and Niagara rivers serious pollution extends normally more than ten miles into the lakes, and occasionally occurs sixteen and even eighteen miles from shore. There is no point in either the St. Clair or Detroit rivers where a safe water supply can be secured. The Niagara river is badly polluted, while the St. Lawrence during the summer shows very evident traces of contamination. This fact established, it now remains for wise men to depise a feasible remedy.

Couldn't Breathe Through His Nose Stuffed With Catarrh

Catarrhozone Inhaler the One Means of Relief and it Cured Quickly.

The extraordinary efficacy of Catarrhozone is without a parallel. A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes, a harsh cough is cured in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly drawn from the system. In case of asthma and bronchitis the relief and certain cure that comes from the healing balsamic extracts in Catarrhozone is simply wonderful.

"For more than twenty years I suffered with a cough, bronchitis, asthma, and nasal catarrh, writes J. P. Fenwick, of Staunton P.O. "Every attack I had seemed to grow worse and I could hardly breathe on account of an accumulation of phlegm in the nose and throat. One day I tried Catarrhozone and in ten minutes was wonderfully relieved. I could breathe freely and naturally through the nose, and blood spitting was stopped—the phlegm was cleared away and my regular breathing restored. No remedy can do more than Catarrhozone."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c. At all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE DOG NUISANCE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am pleased to see that some of our citizens are waking up in reference to the dog nuisance that exists in our fair city. In conversation with people who have travelled quite extensively, they tell me that in no place of the pretentions of Peterborough have they seen as many dogs at large. I feel sure that if our citizens would take hold of this question as they should, and bring the matter before our aldermen, the nuisance would soon be abated. One don't require much observation in looking over the canines that roam at will at all hours of the day and night, to see that the great proportion are mongrels, and of no use —save to frighten timid people.

In noting the homes they frequent it occurred to me that most of the people who own these dogs would be very much better off without them.

In looking over the dogs at large I have failed to see a tag on one. When a license is issued doesn't a tag go with it?

If our worthy representatives would look into these questions that may appear small to them, and take action, they would remove some of the causes, and learn why the good women of the city are seeking the appointment of a police woman.

One Interested.

IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends Indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

Spiders and Whooping Cough.

"Will you please give mother a nut to put a spider in, as baby's got the whooping cough?" This extraordinary request was made to a Tiverton shopkeeper the other day by a little girl whose mother believes that if she imprisons a live spider in a nutshell and ties it round her infant's neck the whooping cough will disappear when the spider dies.—London Mail.

CHILDRENS AID SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

families being out of employment, and those wage earners have failed during years of prosperity to provide for the period of depression.

Your Society during the year has provided medical and hospital attention for a number of deserving cases, and have been the means of having a number of crippled children receive proper attention, and we are glad to report that in two of the cases the children are now free from physical deformation. In connection with this branch of the work, I may say that upon investigation we found that it was beyond the means of the parents of these children to provide necessary medical and hospital attention.

We regret to find in the prosecution of our work the number of defective and feeble-minded children passing under our observation, also to learn from time to time of marriages of this class of people. A prominent writer speaking on this subject says, "It makes one ask, will the time ever come when this danger of the future well-being of society can be better safeguarded than at present." A long line of weakness, incapacity, drunkenness, immorality and crime follows in the train of these marriages. It is impossible to place these defective children in foster homes when they are far below the moral standard mentally, morally and physically. These children if placed in foster homes are soon returned because of various faults and defects, many disgusting beyond description. It is a matter well worthy of being seriously pressed upon the attention of the Legislature of this Province, and that some Provision and some means be provided to meet this unfortunate social condition.

A sad feature of our work is the frequent interviews with broken-hearted parents, who perhaps while often in fault themselves for neglect and lack of parental control, are prostrated with grief because of the ruin of their children. In most cases the errors and faults complained of are the evils usually resulting from allowing their girls and boys the freedom of the streets after dark. It is well said, "Small children neglected grow into legal and moral law breakers by the simplest rule of evolution." While the remedy for this position of affairs seems difficult, yet it would appear to your executive that if the present curfew law was amended, and made of more practical value so that its provisions could be adequately enforced by constables and police officers, and if our out-lying streets and parks in the summer, at least, had adequate police supervision it would to a large extent prevent the accomplishment of the ruin of the girls and boys of the community.

Your officers are in constant attendance at the juvenile courts, and I am pleased to say that the Provisions of the law governing the trial of juvenile offenders are strictly observed. In this department of our work we have the sympathetic co-operation of the Police Magistrates of the city and county, and I also wish to acknowledge the valuable assistance furnished us by Chief Thompson and his staff.

The work of the Society has been similar to that of former years, and has as its object to extend protection to every neglected child in the city and county, irrespective of nationality or creed. Every complaint made to us of cruelty and neglect of children has been investigated and action promptly taken if your officers found the complaint well founded. We have served a large number of warnings upon the parents and others having children in charge, and where these warnings have not been followed by immediate improvement in the homes, then informations have been laid and the parties brought before the courts.

All of our wards placed in foster homes have been carefully visited and reported on by agents of the Provincial Department of Neglected Children.

I am glad to say that we have received on the whole very encouraging reports from the Inspectors. The condition and conduct of the children of the Shelter and their education, together with their physical condition will be reported on by Mr. Henry and Dr. Amyot.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

PRICE 100 and ACCRUED INTEREST

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,[illegible] bushels; 124 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,126,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909 .... $716,054
" " " 31, 1910 541,934
" " " 31, 1911 481,210
" " " 31, 1912 521,431
" " " 31, 1913 576,724
Being an average for the five years of $567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred ...	7 p.c.	7 p.c	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1906 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $8,500,737.32. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephone at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

COLOR OF HIS COAT

Professor Virchow was almost as famous for his excessive bluntness of speech as for his very remarkable mental attainments. Often he spoke so unfeelingly to the students who sat under him in the lecture rooms that they have been known to leave his classes and not return. According to Berlin traditions, one of the professor's favorite replies to a wrong answer to one of his questions was:

"Certainly not. Any cook would know better than that."

On the other hand, he seemed to appreciate the spirit in some of his students which prompted them to answer him back in very much his own tone. Once when he was presiding in a very old and faded suit of clothes he turned suddenly upon a seemingly bashful man sitting near him and asked:

"Do your eyes tell you the truth? What color is this coat of mine?"

Without an instant's hesitation the young man rose and said: "I presume it was once black. Now it is any color except white."

That student was passed.

Blind Tom.

Blind Tom was born near the city of Columbus, Ga., of slave parents about the year 1849. He belonged to General James N. Bethune, at that time editor and proprietor of the Cornerstone. Being blind, Tom would stray away from home and was often found in the woods, roaming around and listening to the birds. It was in his whistling imitations of the bird songs that his wonderful musical ability was first revealed to his master. He could repeat perfectly anything that he heard in the line of music. As to his idiocy, it is generally understood that, his musical ability aside, he was very near being a "natural." Outside of his love for music he seemed to be quite stupid, and if not an idiot he was dangerously near being one. Blind Tom is still the standing puzzle of the psychologists.—Exchange.

SENDING TO COVENTRY

The expression "sending to Coventry" had a military origin, according to The London Chronicle. It arose, so it is said, in the days of Charles I., when the inhabitants of Coventry strongly objected to any intercourse with the military quartered in their town, and a woman known to speak to a man in a scarlet coat was at once the subject of scandal. So rigid were the natives that the soldier was confined to the mess room for conversation. Thus the term "sending a man to Coventry" if you wished to shut him from society took root on the English language.

A Historic House.

The Countess of Warwick, who is about to sell off part of her Easton Lodge estate in Essex, is the lineal representative of the Maynards, whose seat it has been for well over 300 years. The manor of Little Easton, in which the venerable and picturesque lodge is situated, was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Henry Maynard, secretary of the great Lord Burleigh, her famous treasurer. His grandson was advanced to the peerage in 1627 as Baron Maynard, and the seventh baron was raised to a viscountcy.

WATER NECESSARY FOR CROPS

A grass plant will in the course of a hot day exhale its own weight of water, and a young leaf of wheat or rye exposed to the sun may even exhale its own weight in an hour. Experiments summarized by Storer indicate that "more than 300 pounds of water pass through a plant and are transpired from its leaves for every pound of dry matter fixed or assimilated by the plant." In Wisconsin King found the mean amount of water used by barley, oats, corn, clover, peas and potatoes in producing a ton of dry matter ranged from 270 tons for corn to 576 tons for clover, "the average for the six crops being nearly 400 tons, or four acre inches for each ton of dry matter."—Agricultural Department Year Book.

The Magnetic Needle.

There are two places on the earth's surface where the magnetic needle must point due south. They are not easy places to reach. One is in the arctic regions north of the northern magnetic pole, on the line between that pole and the geographical north pole. The other is in the antarctic regions, south of the southern magnetic pole, on the line between that spot and the geographical south pole. In the first case the point of the needle is attracted to the northern magnetic pole. In the second case the other end of the needle is attracted to the southern magnetic pole.

A KISS

from a man who has been smoking a strong pipe or a "dark" cigar, or has "smoker's throat" is not very pleasant.

Smokers should remember this, and before kissing wife, or sweetheart, or children, take a Pep.

Peps quickly soothe that dry, "throaty" feel after a heavy smoke, remove the soreness of throat and palate, and sweeten the breath.

Peps are carried easily in the vest pocket, each being wrapped in a silvered envelope. Upon being put into the mouth pleasant pine fumes and healing medicinal vapours are liberated which form the latest, and most effective treatment for all throat and lung troubles, bronchitis, etc., etc.

For that tickling cough they are splendid. Contain no opium or poison. Druggists and stores, 50c box, or post free from Peps Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

WITH THE SOOTHSAYERS.

Quaint Horoscopes of King George and Queen Mary.

The stars are favorable to a glorious reign by King George and Queen Mary. At least, that is the conclusion come to by the editor of "Modern Astrology," who has been casting the horoscopes of their Majesties. Apparently King George has one defect, however. This is his lack of diplomacy.

"He loves the straight and direct road," says the astrological expert, "and can rely sufficiently upon his own judgment, but this necessary quality of diplomacy will need to be supplied by his admirable wife, whose gift in this direction is shown by the Moon in conjunction with Jupiter at her birth. He will suffer from severe headaches at times, also stomachic troubles, but have no real organic disease. He loves temperance, is passionately fond of his children, and firmly believes in spiritual things."

Queen Mary will make an ideal queen. Here is her character and future as indicated by the stars: "The Queen has a strong will and decided opinions, with a quiet, firm, and determined nature. In disposition she has open, frank, truthful, and self-contained. She is very faithful in all her friendships, constant in her attachments, a shrewd judge of human nature, and rarely deceived in her estimate of the character of others. The poor and all who suffer will be glad to know that Queen Mary's chief concern will be the welfare of her people. A good nurse and an excellent mother, she is sympathetic towards the sorrows of others.

"Queen Mary will in many respects be a remarkable Queen, and the nation is fortunate in having one so capable and competent to help the King through his great responsibilities."

Regarding the young Prince of Wales, it is prophesied that his marriage will take place in his twenty-third year. "He will thus marry under the most favorable auspices," says the same authority, "and will be blessed with a beautiful and good wife. The horoscope denotes exceptional ability, and the mind being so very intuitive and receptive he will absorb knowledge quickly, turning his attention to original and unconventional thought, and cultivating a love of music and the fine arts, also metaphysics and mysticism."

A Japanese Romance.

Prince Ito, the Japanese statesman, married a geisha girl who saved his life. He was pursued during the struggle forty years ago between the followers of the mikado and the shogun. He took refuge in a tea house, where he implored a geisha to save him. Every Japanese house has a dust hole. As the ground floor is raised about two feet above the earth, a square hole is cut in the floor to serve as a receptacle for the sweepings of the rooms. With great presence of mind the geisha put Ito down this hole, which she covered with a board, placing a brazier on top. When the pursuers arrived they found a languid girl sitting by the fire, who expressed her surprise at their visit and assured them they were at liberty to look through the house. After a search they departed, disappointed, not one of them having thought of the dust hole.—Washington Herald.

The Queen of an Ant Colony.

The queen of an ant colony is at first winged. Just as soon as she has strength enough she picks a mate, and they have a marriage flight. When she comes back again she rubs off her wings and prepares to raise a brood. Although the queen lives to be thirteen years old, on an average, the only flying she does is on her nuptial flight, which might be compared to the honeymoon of a pair of newly weds. As soon as she gets back to earth she takes her abode in a piece of bark or other suitable place and remains there for nine months. There she raises a brood of workers; these workers go out and bring in food to the queen, and through the workers the ant colony is kept up. After the queen loses her wings the muscles undergo a physiological change. The substance of the muscles goes into the blood. The queen becomes so light that she would float on water.

India Land of Holidays.

India is a country of eternal holidays. Every sect and tribe, roughly speaking, has its own festivals, and these are religiously observed. On such occasions the open spaces are filled with swings and merry-go-rounds, and the booths where food and sweetmeats are sold do a roaring trade. It is very interesting to watch the different racial types that come to make holiday—here women veiled and mysterious, there women who show their faces and wear tight-fitting trousers instead of skirts. The people are of all shades—from the fair, almost European, complexion of the northern types, to the practically coal-black of the original Dravidean stock of the south. It is in India, at the typical religious fairs, that you see the quaint originals of the "Great Wheels" known to exhibition visitors of the west.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 22,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 5,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

During the contest, however, reference was constantly made to Lord Rosebery's opposition to the budget, which his son supported.

On one occasion the candidate was asked whether this action on the part of his father did not amount to "hitting below the belt."

"Exactly," said Mr. Primrose, "But when one's father does hit one, it is generally below the belt."

SUPERSTITIONS OF THE SEA.

Origin of Most of Them Is Wrapped in Deep Mystery.

While most sailormen will stoutly deny that they hold superstitions and that the occult has no stronger hold on them than on land men, the popular belief is to the contrary. It is likely that the seaman's isolation from outside influences and the weeks and months spent afloat with only his mates for company served to foster superstitious notions in the days of sailing vessels, while the general spread of knowledge works but slowly in these occult matters, concerning which Jack is peculiarly unreasoning.

"The Finn is the most superstitious of all sailors," according to a writer in The London Globe. "There are many of this race who still believe in the ominous portent of the phantom ship, the folly of starting a voyage on a Friday (a notion by no means confined to seafaring men), the low burning blue lights which are ghost spirits hovering near to give warning of approaching disaster, and many other things, all of which

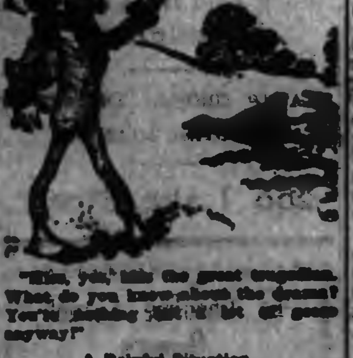
'Fill the sailor's mind with nameless fear,
And speak to him of wrecks.'

"A story is told of a brigantine which numbered several extremely superstitious men among her crew. One night when there was no wind and a slight ground swell was running, the watch, who happened to be the most superstitious of them all, heard an unearthly wailing coming apparently from the very surface of the sea. The mate and the helmsman also heard it, but the former lacked imagination and although he was certainly interested, he nearly blew the watch's head off when he ventured to suggest mermaids. The helmsman did not feel quite happy, but he had to stick to the wheel. The watch was pale with terror, but he kept silence owing to the mate's complimentary references to his courage and abilities. Slowly the sound began to move along the ship's side, becoming more and more agonized as it approached. This annoyed the mate, and going to the side of the vessel he waited until he had located the sound and then emptied a bucket of water over the rail. There was a gasp, and then dead silence, and nothing more was heard that night.

"When the watch went off duty he, of course, gave a detailed and lurid account of the incident to his shipmates, who listened, as he thought in awed silence, and then called on one of the audience for his version of the matter. This man, a Tynesider, who dearly loved a joke and had no respect at all for hoary superstitions, had conspired with his fellows to play a trick on the watch. On the night in question he had crept over the bows without a sound, carrying with him the ship's cat, secured in a bag. Crouching under the stays, the joker let the cat's head out of the bag, which he tied round the animal's neck so that it could not escape. He then applied his teeth to the unfortunate animal's tail! Everybody knows the fearsome sounds an angry cat is capable of producing, and those to which a cat whose tail is being bitten gives vent are among the most hair-raising. The sound was more or less regulated by squeezing the luckless beast's body. The mate's bucket of water was an unwelcome as unexpected, and caused the Tynesider to beat a hurried retreat.

"Not only is the origin of many sea superstitions 'wrapt in mystery,' but also any logical explanation of cause and effect. It would puzzle any one to say why it should be unlucky for the ship's boy to whistle on the weather bow, except that it is generally unpleasant from a music lover's point of view for a boy to whistle on any bow at all. Nor would it be easy to explain why a sneeze to starboard presages disaster, and why should the squeaking of a pig at night be considered an evil omen? At the mere sight of an overturned hatch many a seaman will declare that another ship has just gone to the bottom, and he 'will say the same should the salt box or the "soft tack" barge' (anglice) biscuit box be upset."

Hamlet's Soliloquy.



"Ham, yes," [illegible] the great tragedian. "What do you know about the drama? You're nothing [illegible] anyway!"

A Painful Situation.

"What's the use of going to night school at your age? Lots of rich men can't talk a mite better than you can. Let the family squirm."

"The family ain't kicking. But my [illegible] breaks were very embarrassing to the butler."—Washington Herald.

In South America.

"Your soldiers look fat and happy. You must have a war ahead."

"Not exactly, but things are on a higher plane than they used to be. This revolution is being financed by a moving picture concern."—Pittsburg Post.

GRIDIRON HEROES.

Ones Who Never Win Places in the Football Hall of Fame.

AND THEY WEAR NO "LETTER"

These Practically Unknown Men Are the "Scrubs" Who Help to Keep the Varsity Team on Edge—They Play the Game For the Game's Sake.

There is no royal road to a thorough knowledge of American college football. The preparation of the varsity eleven is long and hard. The mills of the coaches grind slowly, and they grind exceedingly fine. There is nothing in store for much of the good material that in the end must be relegated to the side line. These men, wrapped in gray blankets, who line the low fence surrounding the field on the day of the big game, are the scrubs, or second team men.

There is a paradox in their situation—their only chance for personal glory lies in the defeat of the varsity eleven. There comes a time in many a big game when a coach, realizing that the day is lost, that his varsity men have done their utmost to no purpose and are being swept steadily down the field, will throw into the game scrub after scrub, hoping against hope that these men will play better than they really have a right to and so turn the tide. And even ten seconds in the big game give the scrub his letter.

So it is in after years that one may point out many a wearer of the letter who was not nearly so good a football player as many scrubs. It has happened, too, that a man has fought for years in the hope of making the eleven, but improved slowly, if surely, has been sent into the big game as a forlorn hope and has played a game the like of which had not been seen on the field that season.

Even scrubs take their triumphs and their disappointments differently. There are not a few who are proud to have been on the second team in the year that the first eleven swept all before it. They have no varsity letter, but the discriminating know that they were better players than some of the varsity men of other years. There are other scrubs who bemoan the fact that they were not in college when the general average of the players was low and they would have been almost certain to make the first team. Be it said, however, for the honor of the second team that instances of the latter type are rare. A scrub player learns the lesson of self sacrifice. It is his lot to be walked over daily by the varsity, while most of the instruction and encouragement are lavished on said varsity.

As a rule, however, there comes at least one week in the season when the scrubs are pampered and petted and made much of. The varsity is in the throes of a "slump," is lagging, dispirited and sullen. It is then that the scrub team suddenly finds that it is being taught to play the game just as if it were to take the field as the first choice against the foe. There is a coach for almost every man, there are words of encouragement, much valuable instruction and a new esprit de corps. Under the new inspiration the second team sweeps the flagging varsity off its feet, humiliates the first string players to the uttermost, while the coaches cheer the scrub and jeer the varsity. At least once a season it is very good to be a scrub, for at least once a season the scrub defeats and humiliates the team that has proved perhaps a terror to all its outside rivals. Nothing has such a salutary effect on the varsity as the eating of humble pie once in awhile.

In late years the scrub is getting more consideration than in the old days. Yet the men play principally for the love of the game and in order to make the going as hard as possible for the varsity. Sheer loyalty and the thrill of battle keep them at it year after year. They learn football from the ground up. They see the big games from the side lines and, knowing the signals, have a peculiar advantage over any other spectator. With a knowledge of the signals one may criticise the handling of the big team in the big game—may more readily understand the strategy of coach and quarterback.

It is this opportunity to analyze the big games, coupled with the chance to get practically as good coaching as the varsity, that makes excellent coaches out of many scrub players. Some of these scrubs have gone back to college and turned out freshman teams that have been able to fight the varsity to a standstill and so have astonished the very coaches who taught them. There have been instances of this at nearly every big institution in the east. Sometimes the services of these ex-scrubs have been eagerly sought by the [illegible] varsity coaches, and many a man without a field reputation has proved to be no mean strategist.

It is really these ex-scrub men who keep up the high average of interest in the game. They are turned out yearly at the rate of five or more to every varsity player. The varsity man may lose interest in the game in after years, but the scrub practically never. It is they who are the backbone of the pilgrimages to West Point, and it is they who talk football far into the night in the club and chop house.

The scrubs, in a word, all unhonored and unsung as they are, are the backbone of the game in the colleges and out of them. They play the game and they [illegible] it for the game's sake.—New York Post.

Fire From Friction.

The Australian bushman uses a method of his own to procure a light. First he selects two pieces of light wood, each about a foot long, from the cork tree or black fig tree. One, a flat piece, he lays on the ground amid a pile of dry leaves. Upon this strip of wood he kneels in order to hold down the ends. Then he rolls the other pointed stick between the palms of his hands so that it bores a hole into the flat strip of wood. This makes fine wood dust, which catches on fire, sending its sparks among the dry leaves. By blowing upon the tiny light the bushman soon has a fire, which he feeds with more leaves.

Second Cousin Raymond Happy as Long as Graft Is Easy.

"Acting as a reception committee of one," grimly said the old codger in reply to the inquiry of a neighbor who had encountered the veteran humped up and shuddering in the frigid waiting room of the railway station at 6:30 a. m., "I'm here to meet my second cousin Raymond and his retinue and not expecting them to arrive this morning for the reason that, as Cousin Raymond wrote that he would positively be on this train, my long acquaintance with Raymond and his peculiarities leads me to believe that he will not come until later.

"Second Cousin Raymond is one of those jocund souls who subsist on borrowed money and shed sunshine as the other sheds otter of roses.

"He believes that whatever happens is for the best and eats you out of house and home with a cheering indifference to earthly care. He always brings all his folks, including his wife, who came of a fine old southern family and never in her life did anything else, and their children, all of whom, even the harelipped one, are as many and hungry as their parents, and generally another relative or two whom Cousin Raymond has generously invited to come along. This time Raymond writes that, though he has had a (ha, ha!) mortgage foreclosed on him lately and his (tee, hee!) Mexican rubber plantation stock didn't turn out quite as well as he expected and a few other little (haw, haw!) things like that have slipped a cog, the Lord is still with him. So possibly that's who he's bringing along upon this occasion.

"But, be that as it may, I've come down here to meet Raymond whenever he arrives and slip him a ten dollar bill and a hint and slide him and his gang back on to the train before it starts and shove them along to Puxico and on to Third Cousin Lester, who has but lately been visiting us. That's one nice thing about Raymond—his disposition is so sunny that he doesn't give a darn who he sponges on just so's he gets plenty."—Tom P. Morgan in Puck.

Danced in Court.

An unusual scene was once witnessed in a French law court, the civil tribunal at Nantes. The proprietor of a local theater had engaged a young lady dancer, whose performances at rehearsals did not come up to his expectations. He therefore would not let her appear, and the fair dancer took action against him for breach of contract. The defendant alleged that she had not even learned the first steps of her art, and, here being a plain issue, the judge determined to judge for himself. A space was accordingly forthwith cleared on the floor of the court, and in these unusual surroundings the young lady duly went through her steps and pirouettings. In the result the judge felt justified in certifying that she was quite an expert dancer and decided the case in her favor. Henceforth she advertised herself as the only dancer in the country with a legal certificate of proficiency.—London Tit-Bits.

The Parrots of Mexico.

What the wild pigeon once was in point of numbers to the United States the parrot, of varying shades of color and all sizes, is to old Mexico. Flocks of these birds frequently darken the midday sun in the hot country, and they become so tame around the camps of engineers that the birds are given individual names and soon become regular pets. Whenever the parrots desert the forest and alight on the ground in the open spaces of the jungle the natives recognize their actions as sure warning of an impending earthquake. American engineers indorse this belief and assert that [illegible] which might have been averted have resulted when the warning of the birds was [illegible].

The smart street newspaper-seller usually earns more money than the average clerk or mechanic. This surprising statement was made recently by the head of the publishing department of a well-known London newspaper, who furnished some remarkable figures concerning the profits made by street newsboys, and incidentally revealed a curious feature of the newspaper-selling business.

While there are hundreds of youths who obtain copies of the morning and evening papers direct from the offices and secure the full profits, there are hundreds of others who are supplied by middlemen. That is to say, one man will go down to the office, buy enough papers to supply, say, a dozen youths, jump on his bicycle, and take them to the particular locality in which he has taken a stand or worked up a connection.

A short distance from a certain railway station every morning will be seen a man with piles of the various London newspapers busily engaged in supplying over a dozen boys who stand outside the station to sell the papers. These boys are actually employed by the news vendor, who pays them salaries ranging from $2.50 to $5 a week, and after all expenses are paid he makes a profit of over $15 a week for himself.

"Is it surprising," the publisher remarked, "that youths avoid shop and factory life when, by working from 5 a.m. until 9 p.m., and again, say, from 4 or 5 p.m. until 8 or 9 p.m., they can earn between $10 and $15 a week. I am referring now more particularly to the boys who are lucky enough to get pitches outside stations. Of course, there are hundreds of other boys who do not make anything like that amount, but even the youngest reckons on making $2.50 to $3 a week.

"Pitches outside stations are exceedingly valuable, and it is no uncommon thing for a man to pay anything from $100 to $500 for the privilege of selling his papers there. Many of these middlemen scarcely do any work at all. They secure a good pitch, employ an assistant for about $5 a week, and leave the running of the concern to him, and a very profitable business it is, too."

Whittier's Safeguard.

When an overtimid visitor from the city once commented to the poet Whittier upon the insecurity that seemed inseparable from so many doors opening out from all sides of the large old country house the master of the house strove gently to restore confidence by pleading that most of them were locked at night.

Are You Drowsy, Tired, Worn Out?

Here is Good Advice to All Who Feel as If Their Vigor and Life Has all Oozed Away.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon; "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, sick feeling which tells you, 'No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar and getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they have rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright, to enjoy your meals, to sleep sound and look your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1.00 at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Local Cigar Sellers Break Law.

Yesterday morning as a Times reporter stood at a desk leaning over the hotel arrivals, he saw the law broken. The proprietor put on the desk two cigar boxes of identically the same brand. One contained [illegible] while [illegible] only about 5 or 6 remained in the other. The smaller number was transferred to the box containing the greater. He advised the hostler that he was breaking the law. The host replied, "No, I'm not. These cigars are of the same brand and I'm allowed to fill from one box to another." Our scribe, out of curiosity went to the office of the Inland Revenue Department, and, without mentioning names told his story. He was assured that the act described was strictly illegal and punishable by a fine of $50. Our scribe remembered that, some years ago, a George street cigar store had been heavily fined for unwillingly fracturing the same law.

TORONTO SAVINGS AND LOAN COMPANY

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company was held at the Head Office of the Company, No. 437 George street, Peterborough, on Friday, the 23rd day of January, 1914, at 2 o'clock p.m.

DIRECTOR'S REPORT

The Directors submit herewith their Twenty-Ninth Annual Report, showing the result of the business for the past year accompanied by the Balance Sheet to the 31st December, 1913.

The Gross Earnings for the year were $286,422.83, and after the payment of Interest on Deposits and Debentures and all expenses of management, there remained a Net Profit of $157,102.01. To this amount has been added $53,232.54, the balance carried forward from last year, which makes a total sum for distribution of $210,334.55.

This amount has been disposed of in the following manner:

(1) By payment of Four Quarterly Dividends at the rate of 10 p.c. for the year, amounting to $100,000.00
(2) By addition to Reserve Fund 50,000.00
(3) By amount carried forward to Profit and Loss Account 60,334.55

The above addition to the Reserve Fund increases it to $650,000.00 or 65 p.c. of the Present Paid-Up Capital.

All payments maturing during the year on the Company's investments have been satisfactorily met, and the rentals from the property owned by the Company have also been promptly paid. The books, accounts and securities of the Company have been carefully examined by the auditors, and their Report is attached to the Financial Statement.

It is with a feeling of deep regret that we have to record the death of Senator Geo. A. Cox, who was President of the Company since its inception and to whom in a very large degree, the present strong position of the Company is due.

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Constipated, Bilious, stomach sour, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled.

THE C. P. R. STOCK IS WIDELY DISTRIBUTED

The new issue of note certificates by the C.P.R., from which it purposes raising $42,000,000, draws attention to the wide diffusion of the stock of the company—a diffusion which has given it the remarkable stability it discloses and which at the same time guards it from predatory attack by reckless speculators or unscrupulous syndicates.

The C.P.R., in fact, is the third in 100 companies in point of numbers of its stockholders, Pennsylvania and Telephone head the list. The number grows every year. For instance, in 1912 the number was 41,390, whereas this year it was 46,000. The Atchison has 12,000 fewer stockholders than the C. P. R.

There is probably not a country in the civilized world in which the stockholders of the C.P.R. are not found. In India, the Hindu merchant has shares of C. P. R.; in China, Japan, even Persia, the fame of the company has spread; and thirty people have put their surplus money into C.P.R. stock.

The C.P.R. stockholders are found in the South American republics. The latter are not always fighting. They take time to study the markets and have a shy at C.P.R. Even in Mexico, which is topsy turveydom at present, there are many shareholders of the company.

The record shows that: Atchison has 36,451 shareholders; C. P. R. 48,111; Central of New Jersey, 790; C. B. & Q. 333; C. S. P. M. and O. M., 1,123; Delaware and Hudson, 6,613; Kansas City Southern 2,873; Louisville and Nashville 4,366; Missouri Pacific 5,030; C. R. I. & P. railway, 485; Rock Island Co., 4,166; Pere Marquette, 1,663; Southern Railway, 11,388; T exas and Pacific 1,242. Altogether, these aggregate properties have 124,096 owners at present, with aggregate share capitalization of $1,484,892,079. Each holder has an average of 119.0 shares. The increase all over the properties during the year was 15,120 stockholders. Three of the companies made additions to share capitalization during the year. Atchison by the conversion of bonds, had $31,000,000 more stock outstanding on June 30 last year than on the same date the previous year. The C.P.R. added nearly $23,000,000 to the amount of publicly owned stock, but by direct issue of its own shares.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY STILL IMPROVING VERY STEADILY

Physicians' Bulletins Say He Is Better Than Conservative Bulletins Indicate

"Sir James Whitney is much the same as yesterday. He is greatly improved over his condition of a week ago."

(Signed) Dr. C. K. Clarke.
Dr. R. A. Pyne.
Dr. Alex. McPhedran.

Toronto, Jan. 27.—Latest news from the bedside of Ontario's Premier indicate that he is holding his own. The rally which began several days ago has not yet met with the customary setback. Perhaps one of the hardest features facing the doctors who are fighting to save Sir James Whitney from disease is the fact that several times before he has shown rallies, which have always been followed by a sudden relapse. The present rally has lasted the longest of any since the sickness overtook him.

The fact that there is no change in his condition since yesterday, the doctors say, does not indicate that he has not made the improvement which was hoped for. Rather than be too optimistic, the physicians simply state that his condition is unchanged. Owing to the peculiar nature of the disease and the extremely weakened state of the patient, there is very little change which can be noticed in one day, once the improvement has set in.

Still Delirious at Times.

In treatment, there is practically no change since yesterday. The doctors still find it necessary to administer hypnotics in small quantities, and at odd times the premier falls back into his periods of delirium. These periods are growing less frequent and shorter each day, and when he comes out of them he begins to show interest in things in general. Conversation is limited by the doctors to the briefest exchange of comments on topics which are calculated to cause the Premier the least worry. The one thing which is strictly forbidden is all reference to his political activities. The members of Cabinet are not allowed to see their chief, even for a short time.

New Public Buildings For Peterborough

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—The Times is in receipt of a despatch from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., stating that he has been advised by the Department that fifty thousand dollars is placed in the main estimates as first instalment for public building at Peterborough. This means that the new Custom House will be built during the present year, and will give employment to a considerable number of mechanics. Mr. Burnham is certainly looking after the interests of Peterborough in a way that deserves special commendation.

SINGLE TAXERS IN BRITAIN WIN OVER LLOYD GEORGE

This is the Boast of Scottish Liberal Federation, Which is Strong Body

London, Jan. 27.—For some days speculation has been growing concerning the real postponement of Lloyd George's Glasgow meeting. It was first announced for Wednesday and now stands until February 4. The reason officially given that Lloyd George must attend a Cabinet meeting to be held to-morrow is recognized as a diplomatic excuse.

Single Taxer's Boast.

The single taxers who are enormously strong among Scottish Liberals and have been bringing great pressure to bear on the Government to adopt their views, at least to the extent of imposing a tax of one penny in the pound on the capital value of sites in urban areas, declare they have won Lloyd George's support, and the meeting was postponed in order that he could win the assent of the Cabinet to such a proposal and announce it as a part of the Government policy at the meeting.

Reduce Local Rates.

They declare such taxation would reduce local rating at least one quarter, by providing funds for the maintenance of the cost of education and relief of the poor from the local rates to Imperial charges. It is understood that the executive council of the Scottish Liberal Federation last week privately passed a resolution favoring some such reform, and transmitted it to the party leaders.

SON, IN FRENZY, KILLS FATHER, THEN SHOOTS DOWN MOTHER

Is Now in Possession of the House, and Authorities Are Now Making Effort to Effect His Arrest

Toronto, Jan. 27.—A long distance phone message from J. A. Macy, of Hillsborough, [illegible] states that Edward Simpson, the son of Hugh Simpson, a farmer of concession 10, lot 4, East Garafraxa, Dufferin County, while demented, shot his father dead and mortally wounded his mother in their family farm house at noon to-day. The son is now in full possession of the house, armed with a powerful rifle, and a constable and posse are on their way from Orangeville to the scene of the tragedy. Neighbors are surrounding the farm to prevent the young man's escape.

Sister Escaped.

His sister, who escaped out of the house notified the neighbors of the shooting, and when some of them approached the house young Simpson, who has been ill for two weeks, and who is believed to be insane, [illegible] warned them away, and threatened them with the rifle.

Mother Shot First.

The mother was shot first, according to the girl's story, [illegible]. The father was then [illegible] instantly killed. The sister was pursued, but escaped.

Green is the nearest town to the scene of the tragedy, and one of the neighbors drove from that town to Orangeville, where the county constable was notified. He and a heavily armed band of [illegible] are now on their way to the lonely Simpson farm.

Board and Rooming House.
Scavengers.
Dog.

That the Health Department disinfect at the expense of the department all premises where infection has occurred or where it is thought necessary.

That the Board of Health recommend to the city council that they consider at an early date the necessity of having a [illegible].

That the Health Department publish a short bulletin in the daily papers once a month.

That milk be delivered to private houses in bottles.

That a smallpox hospital be built.

LONDON'S LABOR WAR IS WAXING FIERCER

New York, Jan. 27.—A cable to the Tribune from London says:

A large extension of the labor struggle in London occurred last night. The following trades and industries are now undergoing or are threatened with a strike:

Coal, building, electric light, shipping, and transport.

The executive committee of the London building industries federation decided yesterday to call out all its members working on the jobs from which some 37,000 carpenters, joiners, plasterers, bricklayers, masons, and laborers were discharged on Saturday. This recommendation is addressed particularly to plumbers, smiths, fitters, crane men, electricians and painters who have not been required to sign the penalty agreement.

ENDORSED WOMEN COUNCIL REQUEST FOR POLICE WOMAN

Quite a representative gathering of the Men's Bible Classes of the city, gathered at Charlotte street Methodist church last night and quite an interesting evening was spent.

The speakers were: Mrs. Kendry, who strongly condemned the "Let alone policy," and advocated a police woman. Magistrate Dumble and Judge Huycke's utterances on the day when the Women's Council went to the Police Commissioners, came in for quite a bit of adverse criticism.

Adjutant McElheney said that while conditions were not by any means what we would like them to be, yet asked, that this city be not branded as one of the worst of its size in the Dominion. He told of some very sad happenings that had and were going on in the city, but to his own personal knowledge were being dealt with and very effectively at that. He advocated increased police protection with a morality inspector to whom all the city could look and hold responsible for the morals of the city. Also a vigilance committee composed of the best men and women in the city to co-operate with the powers that be.

Mr. Cowan followed and dealt with the economic side of the affair very satisfactorily indeed, and advocated the summary punishment of the men in immoral affairs. Then opened a general discussion which was lively and interesting, which culminated in a resolution endorsing the Women's Council's plan for a police woman, and appointed a committee to present the plan to the Police Commissioners at a very early date.

The first resolution was presented by Rev. Mr. Webb, and the second by Rev. Mr. Rawling.

BASKET SOCIAL IN W.O.W. HALL WAS HUGE SUCCESS

A basket social was held last night under the auspices of the Woodmen of the World, in their hall on George St. to aid the poor of the City. Despite a most wretched night there was a splendid attendance. Mr. Hicks took the chair at 8.30 p.m. with Mr. Clair Jarvis, Head Clerk of the Order on his right.

After a short speech by the chairman a programme of vocal and instrumental music was rendered in a delightful manner.

At the close of the programme Mr. Hancock auctioneered the baskets of which there was about 62, the prices ranged from 50cts to $2.75. After all baskets were sold everybody found their partner and enjoyed a good supper.

Dancing was started and kept up till the wee sma hours.

The proceeds amounted to $65.00.

BATTLESHIPS TO BE RUBBER-PLATED

Sheets of Rubber Between Layers of Steel to Nullify Effect of Cannon Shells

London, Jan. 27.—An invention for rubber plating battleships is being experimented with by the British Admiralty according to the Globe, usually well informed on naval matters.

The process consists of sandwiching sheets of rubber between layers of toughened steel, and the inventors declare that a wall of rubber will have the same effect on cannon shells as sand bags have on rifle bullets.

GUNMEN QUARTETTE HAVE LOST "NERVE"

New York, Jan. 27.—According to their guards at Sing Sing prison, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, "Whitie" Lewis, "Gyp the Blood" and "Dago Frank," the four gunmen convicted with former Police Lieutenant Becker of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, have broken down under the strain of waiting for the decision on their appeal, which they expect will be delivered within a few days.

Whenever the door of the death house opens they spring up from their cots, expecting a man has come with the announcement. Disappointed, they throw themselves back and rail at the guards. Becker on one hand is bearing up well under the ordeal it is said.

There is a superstition among Sing Sing prisoners that some telepathic influence tells the fate of every man in the death house before the Court of Appeals has passed on his case. In Becker's case the "message" is that he will get a new trial.

PETERBOROUGH COUNTY COUNCIL ELECTS R. SHAW AS WARDEN

At the inaugural meeting of the County Council yesterday afternoon in the County Council Chambers, Mr. Robt. Shaw, reeve of Harvey, was elected Warden for 1914, by a majority of one vote over Mr. A. A. Wilde, of Belmont. After the election the new Warden was duly sworn by the County Clerk, Mr. Elliott. In an appropriate address, Warden Shaw thanked the Council for the honor bestowed upon him. He also referred to the successful regime of his predecessor, ex-Warden J. H. Garbutt.

The entire Council was appointed to strike the standing committees for the year. Dr. Kindred, of Havelock, was elected chairman of this committee.

The members in session are:

M. Brown, Asphodel; A. A. Wilde, Belmont; N. Lean, Burleigh and Anstruther; D. Campbell, Chandos; N. Walsh, Douro; S. J. Darling, Dummer; W. G. Howden, North Monaghan; W. A. Anderson, Otonabee; D. Dugall, Otonabee; J. H. Garbutt, Smith; J. McKee, Smith; B. Squire, Norwood; Dr. Kindred, Havelock; H. Fitzgerald, Lakefield.

COBOURG INTERMEDIATES AND LOCALS STRUGGLE FOR THE DISTRICT HONORS

Cobourg again went down to defeat before a large crowd last night at the Brock street rink, in one of the hottest contests in the history of O.H.A. annals in Peterborough. Considerable rough checking was noticeable throughout the game. Park got away with the first goal for the Petes, while Lavis of Cobourg commenced the scoring for the visitors. Giroux landed the second counter for the Petes. Half-time score 2—1 for the locals.

In the second half, the boys got down to business, and some pretty combination work was pulled off, [illegible] Kelly scored the first goal, then came Park, following the puck in a lively style, making another score for the Petes. Freeman did one in part Jones. Bradshaw again scored for the locals, and Denison had a turn. Cunningham made the last score for the visitors amid a scene which reminded one of the old-time game of shinney, in which Giroux, Lavis, Denison and the referee were interested. A battle royal ensued for a considerable time, several blows being struck. Denison and Giroux were ruled off for the balance of the game. The full time score was 6—3.

Referee—Lawson Whitehouse.

FIRE CHIEFS' ESTIMATES FOR HIS DEPARTMENT WAS $23,829

This Was Pared Down by Committee to $21,587, With Adjournment for Enquiry as to Additional Reduction

The City's Fire, Water and Light Committee met in business session last night, chairman Ald. G. Walter Green presiding. There were also present Mayor Buller, Aldermen Anderson, Stratton, Saunders, and Duffus and Fire Chief Howard.

Fire Chief Howard estimated his requirements for the fire hall this year at $23,829. This amount, however, was reduced to $21,587, with further reductions in sight.

The estimates for wages amounts to $12,500; this provides for a supply man for the men when on their vacations, and four additional firemen.

The estimate of $510 for winter uniforms was accepted.

Summer uniforms for the Brigade at a cost of $315 was left in abeyance on economic principles.

$30 for an overcoat for the Chief was passed.

An estimate of $50 for shirts for the fire brigade was approved of.

The estimate of $40 for uniform caps passed the committee.

Rubber coats and boots for the brigade at a cost of $50 will be purchased.

The Chief estimates $50 for linen for the fire hall; this was cut down to $35.

The estimate of $400 for fuel was shaved to $375.

Horse feed is estimated at $780. In this connection two horses of Board of Works has hitherto been stabled at the fire hall, and always been available for drawing the engine. And the Board of Works department has always paid one-half the cost of the hay and oats consumed in the fire hall as the share of the feed for those two horses, as against the hay and oats consumed by the six actual fire fighting horses. The Board of Works is going to insist on a more equable adjustment of this feed account.

$700 is the accepted estimate for fire hose.

Light and gas will cost $125.

Telephones will cost $65.

For Lumber $40 is allowed.

$15 is allowed for brooms.

Fire alarm power is estimated at $150.

Fire alarm supplies is estimated at $125.

The Chief asked $750 for fire alarm boxes. This was pared down to $375 and allows for the addition of three new boxes.

For setting three alarm boxes $30 was allowed.

$20 allowed for lunches for the firemen.

Extra help was estimated at $85.

Accounts left over from last year amounted to $50.

Hardware supplies figured at $100.

Veterinary services were figured at $15.

Painting of No. 1 hose wagon was estimated at $75 and left in abeyance.

Cartage, freight and express will cost $25.

The Chief asked for $50 for varnishing the fire hall. This was shaved down to $25 for only absolutely imperative work.

Chief Howard asked $200 for expenses in attending the convention of Fire Chiefs at New Orleans. As the convention is to be held at so distant a city and entailing so much expenditure for attendance, this item will probably be cut out.

$10 for livery for committee was cut out.

$85 for laundry was allowed to stand.

$362 for linoleum was erased.

Horse shoeing and blacksmithing was allowed to stand at $75.00.

$100 was allowed for general repairs.

The Chief asked $300 for an exercise wagon. This was cut down to $100 for repairing old wagon.

$60 for fire extinguisher supplies and $30 for grocery supplies, passed committee.

Chief Howard asked for a new horse at a cost of $300 to establish another hose company.

A palmotor at $200 will be supplied.

The Chief's recommendation for two smoke helmets, costing $250 was rejected.

$45 for a new departure bell was left in abeyance.

$35 for office supplies stood.

Incidentals at $100, passed muster.

$20 for newspapers stood.

$25 asked for electric lamps and supplies was cut down to $15.

$7 for insurance was allowed.

$21 for three department lanterns was cut out.

$25 for repairing chairs was considered needed.

The paring of the above estimates reduced the appropriation asked by Chief Howard from $23,829 to $21,587.

From the expressions of the Committee as a whole, it is almost certain that the four additional men and another horse asked for by the Chief will not be allowed this year.

The whole schedule of estimates was left in abeyance pending enquiry and report by his worship and chairman Ald. G. Walter Green.

Chief Howard is also advocating adjustment in and increase of salaries for firemen, which there is considerable doubt as to endorsation by the committee this year.

INDICTED MONTREAL NEWSPAPER MEN BEFORE BAR IN QUEBEC

Messrs McNab and Nicholls are in Quebec--More Evidence Given

Quebec, Que., Jan. 27.—Messrs. E. A. McNab and Edward Nicholls, of the Daily Mail are in the city to-day having arrived here to answer the summons to appear before the bar of the Legislature this afternoon as a consequence of their bribery charges against three members of the House.

The Mail proprietors will reiterate their charges before the House, and in a written statement express their ability and willingness to prove each and every allegation made in the case.

The procedure thenceforward will be in the hands of the Committee of the Legislature.

Mail Recounts the Incident.

In the meantime the Daily Mail continues to recount the circumstances and incidents in regard to the payments of money to the legislators to rush the legislation through. To-morrow's story tells of a week of great activity on the part of a lawyer at Quebec. He was so busy, that he was able to announce to Hyland, figuring as a promoter, but in reality a Burns' detective, that the Fair bill was five days ahead of schedule. When Hyland wanted to pay $1,000 to one man for his aid, this lawyer stepped in and fixed it at $150. He was very zealous in the interests of his friend, Hyland, and insisted that the legislators should not get a cent until the bill was through.

This lawyer is persona grata, according to his own statement, with Sir Lomer Gouin, the Prime Minister, and equally so with Mr. Tellier, the leader of the Opposition. As for Mr. Mousseau, the chairman of the Private Bills Committee, the lawyer [illegible] perfectly [illegible] with him, and all he says he has to do is request, and Mr. Mousseau does as requested.

STORM PUTS SMUGGLERS BOAT INTO LAW'S HANDS

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 27.—The smuggling launch Calypso from Ensenada, Mexico, was driven ashore in Monterey Bay in a storm last night and three white men manning her were captured by United States customs officers, but fifteen contraband Chinese brought from Mexico escaped to the interior. These Chinese are said to have been loaded into two automobiles which sped northward. They are believed to have with them $60,000 worth of contraband opium brought from Ensenada.

CLINTON, ONTARIO

MISS HALLOWAY OF CHICAGO

And the Way She Became Mrs. Parker of New York.

By MARY WOOD.

She was so decidedly petite that even when she drew her figure to its greatest height the assumption of dignity was laughable. But her eyes sparkled dangerously as she faced the bellboy.

The bellboy was impressed. He eyed the door as if meditating escape before she proceeded to stronger methods.

"Now, see here," she exclaimed belligerently, "this is the third note I have written to the office, and I want a reply this time."

"If you would go down to the desk," the bellboy insinuated apologetically. "Mr. Parker"—

"No; I will not go down to the desk," Miss Halloway interrupted decidedly. "That head clerk Parker, or whatever name he answers to, shall come up here or I will know the reason why."

The bellboy departed promptly. "And, by the way," she called after him, "just hustle along some telegraph blanks on your way back. I have a few things to say to my father and some of his friends concerning the lack of accommodations at the Great Eastern."

"Oh, Belle, Belle," wailed Mrs. Halloway, whose ample form had collapsed in one corner of a red plush sofa, "how can you make such a disturbance? Now, if your father was only here. But the two of us alone, without a protector!" And she rolled her eyes distressfully.

"Protector [illegible]!" said the energetic Miss Halloway. "Have you no spirit, mother?" She began to pace the floor excitedly. "Would you be treated as a nobody—you, the wife of Thomas P. Halloway? Consider your position."

Mrs. Halloway doubtless considered her position. She was absolutely at the mercy of her daughter's scathing tongue; therefore she maintained a discreet silence.

"They must be taught the deference due to us, the Halloways of Chicago," said the girl. She was very young and possessed of the follies as well as the graces of youth.

The bellboy now reappeared, holding out a handful of telegraph blanks like a yellow flag of truce. "Mr. Parker," he averred, "he says—he's coming."

Miss Halloway seized upon the blanks and flung herself into a chair beside the writing table. "There will probably be ample time to get off the telegrams before he comes. Things don't [illegible] at the Great Eastern."

"But, Belle," Mrs. Halloway protested after the bellboy had closed the door in reverential fashion, "had you not better slip on another waist, Mr. Parker"—

"Mr. Parker," her daughter interrupted superciliously, "is a hotel clerk, a servant. This dressing sack is good enough for him."

She dashed off a telegram and read it aloud reflectively:

> Dear Dad—We are being shamefully treated at the Great Eastern. If things are not remedied we will change to the Grand tonight. But don't worry. I am running this affair, and you can bet on me. ARABELLA HALLOWAY.

"I think that will make things hot for the Great Eastern," she said triumphantly. She did not hear the knock at the door nor its noiseless opening. Her mother's voice startled her. "Belle, here is Mr. Parker, but remember"—

Mrs. Halloway's voice trailed off into a deprecating silence. Miss Halloway straightened up in her chair with the [illegible] pride of a judge about to confer sentence.

"Mr. Parker," she said impressively, "I have called you here to complain of the treatment to which we have been subjected by this hotel." She began [illegible] enough, but the words soon tumbled over each other in her vehemence. "How dare you," she added—"how dare you put us into this stuffy back room, an eight dollar a day room, when we have always been accustomed to an eighteen dollar suite? Do you know who we are—the Halloways of Chicago? Is not our money as good as or better than other people's?"

The clerk remained silent. And now for the first time Miss Halloway looked up—far up—and encountered the serene gaze of his brown eyes.

Mr. Parker, the clerk, was tall—unusually tall. But it was not merely his inches which gave authority of bearing; it was his self confidence, his mental poise. Intuitively Miss Halloway of Chicago realized that here was a man who would always be the master of circumstances, no matter how adverse the contrivings of fate. Her judicial complacency vanished, and shame, but cheeked and defiant, stood as a culprit at the bar, for a twinkle lurked in the cool depths of the brown eyes as he said easily:

"I can agree with you, Miss Halloway of Chicago, but only in part. [illegible]

[illegible] first come must be first served, had [illegible]," with a [illegible] bow. "So why we have been forced to give this room to Miss Halloway of Chicago."

His tone was courteous, but the girl felt the sting of underlying reproof. It was a new experience for her. All her twenty years had not discovered a person who should dare to cross her. The great T. P. Halloway himself lacked the necessary courage, or, rather, he openly encouraged her willfulness as a reincarnation of his own indomitable spirit. As for Mrs. Halloway, she was always a [illegible] quantity [illegible] as Concealed Grumbler. She preferred to be comfortably seated and wring her hands gently. Tears came easily and in nowise interfered with her heart action or gradual increase of avoirdupois.

Now she looked entreatingly at her daughter and murmured. "Oh, Belle, don't, don't!"

Miss Halloway did not hear. Her world seemed falling about her ears. For the first time the shameful helplessness of her sex overcame her. But woman's wit came to her aid. Her lips trembled piteously, and two large tears ran down her cheeks.

This was a new method of warfare. The redoubtable Mr. Parker stood aghast, then, as became a prudent general, threw out scout lines.

"Really, Miss Halloway," he said soothingly, "the whole thing is a trifle which we have foolishly exaggerated. In the morning you will laugh at your fancied grievances."

But still the girl's head was hidden in her folded arms, and her shoulders heaved. Mrs. Halloway sobbed, swaying comfortably back and forth. "If your father were only here!" she wailed.

Mr. Parker looked from one to the other despairingly. He was a young man. A woman's tears are [illegible] to the chivalry of youth. He cast discretion to the winds and capitulated.

"Don't cry, Miss Halloway," he implored; "please don't. I think that perhaps I can arrange the matter. A personal friend of mine has one of the suites. Perhaps for you—yes, I am sure I can arrange it."

"On your word and honor?" asked Miss Halloway of Chicago.

"On my word of honor," he promised recklessly.

The girl lifted her head and laughed. She had not been crying at all. "You can stop your crying, mother," she said cheerfully; "it is all over with." She turned to the astonished Mr. Parker and extended her hand frankly. "And since you have acceded to my request," she said sweetly, "let me apologize for having asked it—well, in rather peremptory fashion. It is a way I have, unfortunately. Of course your promise holds good?"

"Of course," replied Mr. Parker a trifle stiffly. He could not avoid taking her outstretched hand. "Of course," he repeated more heartily as some mesmeric influence radiated from her finger tips to his. There was added respect as well as admiration in the brown eyes. He recognized her powers as a strategist.

Miss Halloway laughed. "I won, but I would not have if you had not been a gentleman. Mamma and I are very pleased to meet you, even in this informal fashion."

Mrs. Halloway beamed upon them. Peace and harmony were essential to her scheme of things.

And peace and harmony—and Mr. Parker—attended her and her daughter for the next few weeks. Mrs. Halloway beamed. Miss Halloway was radiant. Mr. Parker was assiduous—so assiduous, in fact, that Thomas P. Halloway on his advent on the scene felt called upon to interfere.

He did not hesitate, but Mr. Parker spoke first. It is a way youth has. And he did not mince matters. He struck straight from the shoulder.

"Mr. Halloway, I love your daughter; she loves me. We are going to be married. Have we your approval?"

"The mischief!" ejaculated the astounded T. P. Halloway. "Why, you're nothing but a hotel clerk. My daughter"— Words failed him.

Mr. Parker was quite unmoved. "She does not object," he said easily. "Some day I shall own this hotel; then you will not object."

T. P. Halloway glared at him. "I will," he snorted. "And the sooner you take yourself off the better."

"There is Belle to be considered," Mr. Parker insinuated gently. "She usually has her own way."

T. P. Halloway weakened visibly. "Yes; she usually does," he repeated more calmly.

And the matter of her marriage Mr. Parker insinuated gently. She did. And that is how Miss Halloway of Chicago became Mrs. Parker of New York.

Cradles Unfashionable.

Cradles are going out; children are not wearing them any more. People tell us that rocking is unhygienic. Babies, according to modern ideas, should go to sleep naturally in a stationary germ proof bed with antiseptic pillows and a sanitized rattle. Sentiment may save the cradle for a little while, but sooner or later it will go to the dusty attic along with the haircloth sofa. Maybe the infant of tomorrow will bear up somehow under these newfangled [illegible], will struggle along somehow to maturity, but [illegible] the cretons, the poets, the [illegible]. What a world of sentiment and [illegible] has been woven around the [illegible] of the mother and the gently rocking cradle! What kind of song will the poor poet of the future be able to make about an enameled iron crib with brass trimmings?—Success Magazine.

Telephoning With Light.

Photo-telephony has reached a commercial basis in Germany. Ernst Ruhmer of Berlin has contrived an apparatus by which intelligible speech may be transmitted over a distance of [illegible] miles with the aid of a beam of light. The principle of the machine is based upon the sensitiveness of an arc light to sound, combined with the property of selenium, of varying its electrical resistance with the slightest variations in the intensity of a ray of light falling upon it. A searchlight projector at the transmitting end and a selenium cell in a telephonic circuit at the receiving end are the essential features of the apparatus. For use in misty weather, when speech would be impossible, the inventor has contrived a method of transmitting Morse signals by periodic pulsations of the light.—St. Louis [illegible].

The Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. held their first meeting for the new year in the Lyceum, when a very interesting lecture was given on the "Hedge Schools of Ireland," by Rev. Dean McColl. A very good musical programme was rendered.

Don't Go Too Far When Asking a Father For His Girl.

"I don't suppose," the timid young man said as he tremblingly approached her father, "that you will be inclined to grant the request I have to make, Mr. Boodlenon, but"—

"Stop!" the millionaire commanded. "I know what you're here for. My daughter told me this morning that you would call on me today. She made a strong plea for you, and I promised her that I'd listen to you patiently, but you have just about convinced me that you're not the kind of chap I want for a son-in-law."

"Wh-why, what have I done—what have I said to c-cause you to fe-feel that way?"

"I'll tell you. You came in here saying you didn't expect me to consent to let you have my daughter. That's no way to begin. If you expect to get along in the world you'll have to get over that way of approaching people. You should have come to me with a feeling of confidence in your breast and with words on your lips that would have indicated that you didn't doubt for a moment that you'd carry your point. Why, when I asked my wife's father for her I went up to him with all the confidence in the world, slapped him on the back and let him understand that I hadn't a doubt of my ability to win his consent."

"All right, old man. Seeing that there's no reason why Genevieve and I shouldn't get married, you'll of course give your consent, and remember that I expect you to do something handsome in the way of handing out a check as a wedding present. No bluff, you understand—no $10,000 check that is to be torn up after the guests leave or"—

Five minutes later the young man woke up on the sidewalk and began wondering how one was to be able to tell how to go far enough without going too far.—Chicago Record-Herald.

"I have here," says the inventor to the capitalists, "two plans for radical changes in sleeping cars."

"Yes?" murmur the capitalists.

Croesus was complaining of the high cost of living.

"The worst of it, though," he grumbled, "is that I don't know whether it's caused by the tariff or an oversupply of gold."

The Rod Not Spared.

John Wesley's mother believed in birching children at the earliest possible age. Each one of her family was compelled to celebrate his fifth birthday by learning the alphabet by heart. In order that this task might be accomplished Mrs. Wesley, after issuing strict orders that no one should disturb her, shut herself up for six hours with the child and drove the letters into his brain with the aid of a rod. Mme. Quinet, a French contemporary of Mrs. Wesley, was an equally firm believer in the virtues of corporal punishment, but was not sufficiently strong to administer what she considered a satisfactory flogging. She therefore engaged a constable to call twice a week and flog her three children. If by chance they had not been naughty then the punishment was referred to the account of future transgressions.—London Chronicle.

Barrett Wendell's Pun.

When Professor Wendell of Harvard entered upon his Sabbatical year he remained in Cambridge some weeks after his leave of absence began and persisted in taking part in the departmental meeting. The head of the department protested.

"Sir," said he, "you are officially absent. You are non est."

"Oh, very well," replied Professor Wendell; "a non est man is the noblest work of God."—Success Magazine.

Marks of Social Distinction.

"The Hugginses," said Sherlock Holmes, "are very popular with the wealthy classes."

"How do you know?" I queried, confident of a brilliant answer.

"Because there are so many grease spots on the pavement in front of their house."

"I don't see the point," said I.

"You auto," said Sherlock.—Newark News.

NECK FRILLS CONTINUE POPULAR—HIGH AND FULL IN THE BACK

The low collar is youthful and becoming to nearly every one; however the woman with the long slender throat and even her well rounded sister favors the upstanding, fluffy frill that gives such a softening effect to the face. These have been mostly of white or cream colored chiffon or net but the newest idea from Paris is to have your neck and sleeve frill match your gown or suit. This idea was carried out very attractively in a navy blue suit; the frills were of chiffon in a slightly lighter shade of blue, edged with a narrow line of dull gold. It was most pleasing in effect.

Another idea which has "caught on" is the blouse or coat of a rather vivid color worn with a dark velours skirt.

Number 8121 is an attractive example of this. The blouse is of Chartreuse crêpe de Chine worn with a skirt of duvetyn in a dark harmonizing green.

To copy this design in size 36 it requires for the blouse (8121) 2⅛ yards of 36-inch material; for the skirt (7969) 4 yards of 36-inch material.

In number [illegible] the touch of bright color so necessary for these dull days is brought out in the border on the material. The costume shows a smart little bolero, a graceful skirt and a chic little frilled guimpe.

The material in which this costume is developed is a bordered crêpe with the border showing a Chinese design. This Chinese influence promises to be very strong for the coming season.

This costume may be made in size 36 with 4⅝ yards of 36-inch material.

Number 8121—sizes 32 to 42.
Number 7969—sizes 22 to 30.
Number [illegible]—sizes 34 to 44.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvenny Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 6 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claims one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, [illegible] The price is $1.00. To occasionally ride home in a crowded street car with his mouth full of green hat feathers is one of the trials of life that the average man has to endure.

HINDU IMMIGRATION

The Japanese government is still asking for a settlement satisfactory to it of the California land law issue, and no doubt will continue to do so under the pressure of home politics. Our government has gone to the length it can, unless ratification of a new treaty by the senate can be obtained, which is distinctly improbable. The federal authority may say who shall enter the country, but the individual states have large reserved powers for the regulation of aliens within their jurisdiction. A serious affair now is represented to be the influx of Hindus who are swarming to the Pacific coast and making their way inland. Although these are British subjects Canada has passed stringent laws for minimizing their immigration, and much opposition to their entry is exhibited in the British possessions in South Africa and Australasia.

Secretary Wilson of the department of labor has advised Speaker Clark that the problem of Asiatic immigration should be taken up by Congress, and he suggests that it could be solved by raising the standard of admission so as to exclude Asiatic laborers unable to pass the physical tests required of United States army recruits. This ingenious scheme apparently would so serve that very few of the oriental folks could come in, as the army standard of physical condition is very high—every Hindu would have to be physically perfect, and of prescribed height and weight limitations. It is explained that fresh trouble with Japan would be averted and the Japanese excepted from the law by wording it so that it would not apply to countries with which we have "existing agreements as to passports." The whole subject of immigration restriction is difficult on account of conflicting views on the social and economic quesyions involved, and the general desire to avoid offense to other nations.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

NO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK AND ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwen You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve indigestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Etta McEwen, of Haliburton, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed.

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hanging over my head.

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

A WINTER CARNIVAL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in a Lindsay paper a few days ago that that town is going to hold a winter carnival next month. I happened to be there during their last winter carnival. Judging by its success and the crowds in the streets there must have been many strangers in town. Why cannot Peterborough have a similar attraction this winter. We have better railroad facilities, a bigger population and fully as progressive spirit as Lindsay. Let us bring the stranger and his money to Peterborough, instead of sending our hard earned dollars out of the city.

FRENCH COLD BRINGS MANY WOLVES OUT OF FORESTS

Paris, Jan. 27.—The long continued cold, especially in the central districts of France, is bringing numbers of wolves frantic with hunger out of the woods. A little girl returning from school at LaCoquille, near Perigueux, was devoured by wild animals, the searching party finding only a torn pinafore and a few bones. Hunting parties are being organized everywhere.

The temperature in Paris has shown a slight improvement in the last day or two,, owing to the brilliant sunshine, mercury today standing above the freezing point for the first time in many days. In the country districts the cold is growing more intense, and the weather bureau sees no immediate probability of higher temperatures.

The thermometer registered six below zero today at Puy-de-Dom. The cold is likely to prove disastrous, as many farmers have sown late wheat, trusting to a repetition of the mild autumn and winter of the past few years, and it is feared that crops in many places will be destroyed.

"CASCARETS" ALWAYS STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

If Costive, Headachy, Bilious, Stomach Sour, Breath Bad—Clean your Liver and Bowels.

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach or have backache and feel worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

Ancient Oath Taking.

A method of taking the oath far more hygienic than kissing the book was that observed at the Forest of Dean Mine court for about 500 years, beginning in the thirteenth century. It was not for any hygienic reasons, but to prevent soiling the book that the miners before giving evidence touched the four gospels with a stick of holly. The witnesses wore their hats to show that they were free miners.—London Chronicle.

IMPORTANT FACTS FROM THE SIXTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CANADA LIFE
ASSURANCE COMPANY

A Splendid Year.	In important respects the Company in 1913 excelled its record for any previous year in its history.
Greatest Surplus Earnings.	1—THE SURPLUS EARNED in 1913 was $1,709,959.66, exceeding by over $179,000 the earnings of 1912, and by a much larger amount the earnings of any previous year. The present net surplus is $6,183,278.39.
Interest Rate Increasing.	2—THE INCOME of $8,094,885.70 was greater than that of the previous year by $698,125.96, and the greatest in the Company's history. The rate of interest earned, which had been steadily advancing since 1899, was further improved in 1913. This is an important factor in producing surplus.
Assets Over $52,000,000.	3—THE ASSETS were increased by $3,860,271.32, and now stand at $52,161,794.81.
Assurances Now Over $153,121,000.	4—THE TOTAL ASSURANCES now in force are for $153,121,363.94, an increase of over $6,273,000 in the year.
Payments To Policyholders.	5—THE PAYMENTS TO POLICYHOLDERS in 1913 totalled $2,878,016.11, an increase of $415,051.31 over those of 1912. In addition to this, LOANS TO POLICYHOLDERS on security of their policy contracts were made for $1,692,348.71.
All Factors Favorable.	6—THE MORTALITY of the year was again more favorable than the expectation, and this, with a continued LOW EXPENSE RATIO, contributed to the earning of a record surplus.

The Financial Statement and Report of Directors, together with proceedings at the annual meeting, held 22nd January, 1914, are in the printer's hands and in a few days will be mailed on request.

DRINK TONIC; PRISONERS DIE

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—Hair tonic, which prison officials say the two convicts drank to satisfy a craving for alcohol, caused the death tonight of Charles Harris and Charles Reitas, each twenty-four years old, and serving sentences in the Eastern penitentiary for burglary.

The men are said to have obtained the liquid from one of the prison barbers this afternoon on the plea that they wished to "fix up" for some visitors.

AVIATOR BEATS PRINCE TO GIRL

Newport, R.I., Jan. 27.—Society received a surprise tonight in learning the engagement had been announced here of Miss Florence Tobin, niece of Mrs. James J. Brown of Newport and Denver,, to William Harper of New York, an aviator and president of an engineering company.

It had been expected Miss Tobin and Prince Gaetano Caracciolo would some day be engaged, for it was Miss Tobin who taught the prince English and he in turn taught her Italian.

Miss Tobin was recently decorated by the German kaiser for giving her dance before him in Potsdam.

DRASTIC LIQUOR BILL FINDS FOES

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 27.—Leaders of the Anti-Saloon League and other forces behind the May-Mott-Lewis anti-liquor bill, are somewhat worried over prospects for the defeat of their measure in the Senate. While unwilling to admit that they fear the bill will not get through, nevertheless the lively lobbying they have engaged in during the past few days clearly reveals their anxiety.

The bill seeks to limit liquor shipments to one gallon, and then only on physician's certificate for medicinal purposes. It is extremely doubtful whether the bill can get a favorable report from the committee on temperance.

It was reported to-day apparently on good authority, that Capt. Frank Burkitt, recognized leader in the Senate, will oppose the bill because he believes it unconstitutional. If his influence is thrown against the measure, defeat is almost inevitable. In any event should it get through it will be so emasculated with amendments that the original authors will not be able to recognize it.

KILLS GIRL'S FATHER GOES TO POLICE

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 27. — "I have killed her father," said C. King Moore, an automobile supply man, as he walked into police headquarters here last midnight with Miss Elenora Freedhoff and handed the desk sergeant a revolver, one chamber of which contained an empty shell.

Miss Freedhoff corroborated the story which her lover told the police, that her father, Charles Freedhoff, had suddenly appeared before them with a revolver when they were walking near the girl's home about 11 o'clock, and that Moore had shot in self-defense.

Miss Freedhoff was sent home, and Moore was docketed on a charge of murder. Freedhoff was found by neighbors crawling near his gate, his hand clutching a revolver. He died shortly after.

The police learned that Freedhoff had ordered Moore away from his home, and told him to quit keeping companywith his daughter.

Mercen Underskirts Were Surely Never Priced Cheaper Than Now, at 39c

ONE COULD HARDLY EXPECT to get the material alone for this price, to say nothing of the trouble there is in making a skirt to fit with the degree of accuracy that these will. They are in colors of brown, navy, tan and black, in a good assortment of sizes, and are cut upon the straight narrow lines, that are necessary to good appearance. While the material, being mercen, it has the recommendation of scores of women, who have proved the service and appropriateness of this fabric for underskirts. Every garment is finished with a deep pleated flounce, is well put together and is without a doubt one of the best values the Annex has ever offered for 39c

These Skirts will be displayed in the Window.

Telephoning With Light.

Photoscolophony has reached a commercial basis in Germany. Ernst Ruhmer of Berlin has contrived an apparatus by which intelligible speech can be transmitted over a distance of nine miles with the aid of a beam of light. The principle of the machine is based upon the sensitiveness of an arc light to sound, combined with the property of selenium of varying its electrical resistance with the slightest variations in the intensity of a ray of light falling upon it. A searchlight projector [illegible] and a selenium cell [illegible] telephonic circuit at the receiving end are the essential features of the apparatus. For use in misty weather, when speech would be impossible, the inventor has contrived a method of transmitting Morse sound signals by [illegible] pulsations of the light.—St. Louis Republic.

VANILLA BEANS.

They Are Not Beans at All, but Pods Filled With Tiny Seed.

The vanilla plant is the only orchid of any industrial value. As orchids go, the plant is not unattractive, for the foliage is much greener and more enduring than in the case of most of the species. It is a climber, and when the leaves are fresh it brightens a small tree trunk wonderfully. The Vanilla planifolia, to give it its full name, is a terrestrial parasite. It climbs from the ground, but once established has feeding stations on the bark all along the line. The leaves—long, very smooth and light green—are alternate, and at the axil of each is a sucker a few inches in length that fastens itself securely to the tree, lying flat against the bark.

The blossoms are inconspicuous. It is the resultant pods that are the vanilla of the industrial world. They are slim pods six to eight inches long and when dried for the market are of a rich, deep reddish brown. These are called vanilla beans, but without warrant. They contain no bean; the seed in them is as fine as dust. These seeds are the black specks that are usually found in the finest grade of vanilla ice cream, the best chefs the world over preferring to grind the "bean" rather than use the extract. Vanilla is found growing wild in the Bahamas, West Indies and Central America. In Madagascar and some of the neighboring islands it has been introduced and now forms an important article of export. But American vanilla is the best.—Harper's Weekly.

THE YELLOWSTONE WONDERS

Dr. Arnold Hague shows that there is a strong contrast between the geological conditions connected with the geysers of Iceland and those of the Yellowstone park. Volcanic eruptions may be said geologically to be still going on in Iceland, while in the Yellowstone such action ceased many thousands of years ago. The Yellowstone phenomena as seen today represent a phase in the evolution of thermal springs. The tendency of a geyser is to develop a hot surface pool, after which explosive action may cease and the geyser, as such, become extinct, but this is a very slow process. Dr. Hague rejects the idea that the cessation of activity in a geyser indicates the dissipation of the original source of heat and ascribes it simply to a shifting of the channel of the ascending waters.

Money in the Laundry.

Those little heaps of silver and copper coin lay on the laundryman's counter.

"That is money that I have just found tied in the corners of customers' handkerchiefs," he said. "It is strange that with all the purses and hand bags manufactured for the accommodation of women so many of them will still tie their money up in a handkerchief. Sending it to the laundry is familiar still. Every day we dig out a little pile of unsuspected wealth, and many a careless customer gets her laundry back with nearly enough money in the package to pay the bill."—New York Sun.

BIG CARGO, LITTLE SHIP

An old official of the navy tells the following story of a conversation he heard between two old sailors:

"It was a rat ship I was sailin' in that trip," said one of the shellbacks, "one of the dingdest rat ships I ever knew. They was rats in it from bow to stern, rats in the hold, in the galley, in the steerage, in the fo'castle, in the old man's room—everywhere rats, nothin' but.

"Simply it got so bad we had to put in an' get them off. So we hauled up to a dock an' fumigated. I was on deck, an' I saw them rats leavin'. I counted 'em. They was 15,000,000 of 'em."

"Fifteen million?" asked the other. "Ain't that a lot o' rats? Are you sure?"

"Sure! Yes, I'm sure. They was 15,000,000 rats, and I counted 'em. More than that, every rat weighed half a pound. They was big, fat, sassy ones, I'm tellin'."

"Fifteen million rats, and every one weighed half a pound, and they all came off your ship. That's 7,500,000 pounds of rats. Say, Jim, what was the tonnage of that ship?"

An Alien Gang.

London, Jan. 6.—According to the latest report, the burglar killed in the Houndsditch affray and the two men killed in the Stepney battle were members of a gang of at least 20 aliens of the same type and character, some of them being women.

Owing to the bewildering number of aliases they have adopted the police are finding an almost insurmountable difficulty in tracing them. "Peter the Painter" is still at large, it having been established that the second victim of the Stepney siege was a Russian terrorist, who fled to England eleven months ago under the name of Jacob Fogel. He was 22 years of age, and a native of Kelvno, Lithuania.

Throttled in the tempest's grip.
And the booming conch is sounding in the temples of Lahore.
And the land
Bloody red
Stretches desert bandits dead.
And the slender palms are sighing by a sea of rippled gold
Where guitars
Lift the bars
Of a love song to the stars.
Out—oh, you yet are hale!
Out—to battle with the gale!
Out—to parry foeman's thrust!
Waken!" sings the wanderlust.

See where scarlet sinks the sun.
Slave of poisoned city dust?
Far beyond is where there's life,
Where the reckless deeds are done,
Stolen kiss and gleaming knife—
(Would you rot?
Would you rust?)
Ho, the glint along the gun!
"Waken!" growls the wanderlust.
—Thomas R. Ybarra in New York Times.

A Society View.

Kreme de Kreme—What reason have you for marrying that actress? You are rich, and she has to work for a living.

Kreme de Kreme—That is an excuse, but no good reason for it.

Trials For Husbands.

To tell yellow from green in matching silk. To wash the dishes without breaking more than two. To keep quiet when he's spoken to. To face the cook when she's angry. To find out what ails the gas range. To stand in line an hour for two trading stamps. To set up his wife's brother in business. To get up winter nights to investigate "robbers." To smile when his old sweethearts' pictures are burned up. To prefer halma at home to billiards at the club. To drop his old friends because they are "vulgar." To give up coffee because it disagrees with his wife.—Puck.

Frightened Off.

A Washington car conductor born in London and still a cockney has succeeded in extracting thrills from the alphabet—imparting excitement to the names of the national capital's streets. On a recent Sunday morning he was calling the streets thus:

"Haitch!"
"High!"
"Jay!"
"Kay!"
"Hell!"

At this point three prim ladies picked up their prayer books and left the car.—Lippincott's.

Thursday. He—Haven't I told you we cannot afford it? What is the use of talking about a thing that is already settled? Of course I would like to please you, but it is simply out of the question.

Friday. He—How much did you say that thing would cost?

On the Installment Plan.

Accosted by a beggar while coming out of a theater on Chestnut street a few evenings ago, a prominent member of the bar was asked for a nickel.

"That's all I want, boss, just a nickel," said the beggar in a whining tone of voice.

"No!" answered the lawyer, rather sharply. "I am saving up my nickels to give away a million dollars at one time. I'm not a philanthropist on the installment plan."—Philadelphia Times.

One Turn of the Hand.

Hobbs—Who says women have no heads for business? There's a woman made $20,000 by simply turning her hand over.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Pile Wharf and Approaches at Gananoque, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, February 23, 1914, for the construction of a Pile Wharf and Approaches at the Town of Gananoque, County of Leeds, Ont.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the District Engineer's Office, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster at Gananoque, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex had just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 28 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 22,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 5,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

One Pastor Locates It in the Moon, Another in the Sun.

Two Washington pastors hold widely differing opinions as to the location of hades. The Rev. Zed Copp, pastor of Bethany chapel, has boosted the sphere of eternal torment from the bottom of creation all the way up to the sun. The Rev. Dr. Baker of the Theosophical society puts it in the moon.

Dr. Baker's discovery is brand new. He let it out to his parishioners the other night. He told them that after a thorough and painstaking investigation he had become firmly convinced that all other theories concerning the real location of the future address of transgressors were false and that in reality the man in the moon is his satanic majesty.

There are many little dogs in the moon, according to Dr. Baker. They are there to torment vivisectors. As the breath leaves the body of the vivisected animal his soul is rushed through space until he finds himself in the moon, where he patiently awaits the coming of his murderer, and thereafter through all eternity he amuses himself by tormenting the late learned M. D.

Dr. Baker did not say whether the presence of dogs in the moon had anything to do with the aversion cats have to the beautiful orb.—New York World.

PERFECT HEROISM.

Rare Courage of Dr. Franz Mueller In His Tragic Death.

Heroism has been defined as "the brilliant triumph of the soul over the flesh"—that is to say, over fear—fear of suffering, of sickness, of isolation and of death. An instance of this dazzling and glorious concentration of courage is given in Mr. Frederick Rowland Marvin's book, "The Excursions of a Book Lover."

Dr. Franz Mueller of Vienna, who fell a victim to the bubonic plague when that disease was first under bacteriological investigation in that city in 1897, contracted the malady from bacilli in culture tubes. When he became certain that he was infected, he immediately locked himself in an isolated room and posted a message on a window pane:

"I am suffering from the plague. Please do not send a doctor to me, as in any event my end will come in four or five days."

At once a number of his associates, all of them young physicians, with much to live for and with full knowledge of the dangers to which they would expose themselves, stepped forward and not only offered their services, but in some cases begged to be sent to Dr. Mueller. The patient refused to permit it and died alone within the time predicted.

At the end he wrote a farewell letter to his parents and placed it against the window so it could be copied from the outside and then burned the original with his own hands, fearful that it might be preserved and carry out the mysterious and deadly germ.

Not In Her Class.

While delivering an address at a woman's club an actress told the story of a young woman prominent in New York society who desired to achieve histrionic honors.

The manager to whom she confided her desire pointed out the inadvisability of the step she contemplated and added that even were he disposed to give her the chance she coveted he would still be in doubt whether her talents were such as to justify such action on his part.

"What is particularly desired by us at the present time," he said, "is the service of people who know the mechanics of the stage."

"Merciful heavens!" exclaimed the young woman, throwing up her hands. "You don't mean to tell me that it is necessary I should be on terms of intimacy with those dreadful stage hands?"—Lippincott's.

Proud of His Prospects.

Louis Pierre was one of a number of Canadian immigrants who settled at Fitzgerald, Ga. As he spoke both French and English he rapidly became a man of importance and was successively elected to the offices of city marshal, coroner and justice of the peace. A dispute arose between the French and English settlers as to the superiority of the United States over the Canadian provinces. They finally agreed to leave the decision to Judge Pierre, who handed down this decision:

"Yoost tage a loog at me. Ferst dey mage me constabul, den coroner, und now joostis of de pees. Soon I be te governair, den senator, den president. I would be so long time in Canadaire 'fore dey mage me queen."—Circle Magazine.

A Diet of Wild Honey.

Wild honey as a change is an agreeable sweetmeat, but after a few days constantly partaking of it the European palate rejects it as nauseous and almost disgusting. Our experience extended over a fortnight, during which period our food consisted solely of it and maize. It has escaped the Biblical commentators that one of the principal hardships that John the Baptist must have undergone was his diet of wild honey.—Geographic Magazine.

Prayer Meeting In the Commons.

For many years a prayer meeting has been held in the house of commons once a week during every parliamentary session. No one knows who originated the idea, but the records of the proceedings, which are faithfully noted each week, show that in the year [illegible] the well known Quaker Mr. T. Fowell Buxton and the evangelicals Sir George Grey and Mr. Zachary Macaulay were in constant attendance. The prayer meeting is held in a room granted for the purpose by the sergeant-at-arms and is restricted to twenty minutes. The proceedings are very simple. At each weekly meeting a president for the following week is chosen. On the day of assembling—Tuesday, at 5 o'clock—the president for the day opens the meeting, reads a portion of the Scriptures and either offers an extempore prayer or calls on one of the members to pray. Two or three others offer short prayers, and the meeting closes with the benediction.—London News.

He Begs Pardon No More.

Jones had just trod on the toe of an old gentleman while getting into the tram car.

"I beg your pardon," he said.

"Hey? Speak louder. I'm a trifle deaf."

"I beg your pardon," repeated Jones.

"H'm! Peggy starving? Well, I'm sorry. Who's Peggy?"

Jones was red in the face now.

"You misunderstand, sir!" he shouted.

"Hey?"

"You misunderstood!"

"Miss Underwood, is she? Peggy, who is starving, is Miss Underwood? Well?"

"I didn't say anything about Miss Underwood!" screamed Jones. "I begged your pardon, and you misunderstood."

"Oh, now I see!" said the old man sympathetically. "It is your Aunt Peggy who is starving, Miss Underwood. Well, why don't you report the case to the police?"—Pearson's.

Played No Favorites.

John Addison Porter, once secretary to the president, overdrew his account on one occasion, when he went off on a vacation, and Comptroller Tracewell disallowed it. When Secretary Porter returned to Washington he told the president about it, and President McKinley telephoned to Tracewell to come to the White House. On his arrival there Tracewell was asked why he had disallowed that account, and he replied:

"I disallowed it, Mr. President, because it is my duty as comptroller of the treasury to protect the money of the people from every kind of misconstruction of the law. If you should draw one month's salary in advance I should certainly disallow it."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Into the Next State.

A disheveled citizen rushed into the police station and shouted for vengeance.

"The motorcar that hit me five minutes ago was No. 41144," he sputtered. "I can prove that he was exceeding the speed limit, and I want—I want"—

"You want a warrant for his arrest?"

"Warrant, nothing! What good would a warrant do me at the rate he was going? I want extradition papers."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Ready Romancer.

"Clumsy of you to fall overboard," said the critical friend.

"I didn't fall overboard," replied the man who never confesses to a mistake. "The biggest fish I ever saw swam alongside, and I couldn't resist the temptation to dive for him."—Washington Star.

Reprehensible Absentmindedness.

"Why are you so very angry with Walter?"

"He proposed to me last night."

"What of that?"

"Nothing. Only I accepted him the night before."—London Stray Stories.

"IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING."

"It goes without saying," the spellbinder said
As he launched on his great peroration.
The people who listened, already most dead
With fatigue, felt a thrill of elation.
If it went "without saying" they saw a faint ray
Of hope that he'd soon cease his braying.
But it took him just sixty more minutes to say
What at first he said went without saying.

Petulant Darling—You know I am five feet eight.

"Ah, but you are more than divine."

Her Correction.

Two young women were talking over their restaurant luncheon the other day about the quality of a certain prima donna's voice.

"Oh, she can sing," cried one of them enthusiastically. "She certainly can sing. Music like that would coax Apollo from his lyre."

The other girl flushed and looked troubled. After a slight pause she spoke in gentle reproof.

"I don't want to correct you, dear," she said. "But don't you think that word is usually pronounced 'lair'? It is spelled l-y-r-e, you know."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Catarrh or Colds Never Quickly Cured By Swallowing Drugs

Cough Syrup, Tablets, etc., go to the Stomach, Perhaps Soothe It, But Don't Kill the Germs of Catarrh

The Direct Breathing Cure is the Best

To cure an ailment in the throat or chest, to root out Catarrh or Asthma, it is essential that the medicine be conveyed direct to the affected parts. This is why no other remedy has achieved such world-wide success as Catarrhozone, which alone can be breathed in one second to every air cell in the breathing organs. The healing vapors of Catarrhozone mix with the breath and descend through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, to the deepest air cells in the lungs—all parts are saturated with the rich piney essences that ease, heal and cure.

"No one ever contracted a more obstinate attack of nasal catarrh than I suffered a month ago," writes Mr. G. F. Boot, a well-known resident of Bridgetown, W.I. "My head ached terrifically, I sneezed about every three minutes, but still my nostrils were entirely closed and I couldn't breathe through them. The soothing, healing Catarrhozone gave me a little relief, so I continued to use Catarrhozone every hour, and before the day was out I had improved. Catarrhozone quickly cured me. I am well ever since."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone, lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. At all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Good Work By the Shelter.

Last night a Times reporter, in conversation with Mr. Henry, superintendent of the Children's Shelter, asked the latter how many children there are in that commendable charitable institution. In reply, Mr. Henry said: "On Monday we had nine. To-night we have only seven. One of the two who left was placed in a good and comfortable position with a professional gentleman of this city."

Lost Lindsay Child Returns.

Little Hannah Phillips, the child reported missing since Saturday, returned safely to her home late Sunday morning. On Sunday morning, congregations at the different churches in town were startled, when it was announced from the pulpits that the little 12-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Phillips, 84 St. Paul street, had been missing since early Saturday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips tramped through the wet snow until early on Sunday morning in a vain effort to find a trace. However, about eleven o'clock Hannah returned home, saying that she had been at a neighbor's house during her absence.

Cover the Whole Field

An advertisement in The Times is guaranteed to reach regularly 98 per cent. of the homes of Peterborough. Sworn statement furnished of proof of this if required.

Business men are also reminded that The Times is the only paper that reaches those served by the Rural Mail Routes on the day of issue. As a result it gets the call.

Thus advertisers will therefore know that by using The Times for their business announcements, they not only reach the WHOLE population of this city of 21,000 people, but a large proportion of those residing within a twenty-mile radius of the city. These are the people who have the money to pay for what they want.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair Gets Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant At Once — No More Falling Hair.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it — no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair — you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

CONGRESSMAN'S FIST BLACKS LAWYER'S EYE

Johnson, of Kentucky, Resents Statement of Attorney.

Washington, Jan. 27.—A fist fight between Representative Johnson, of Kentucky, and John R. Shields, a Washington attorney, broke up a meeting to-day of the house committee on the District of Columbia. After the two men had clashed and several blows had been struck, Representative Johnson broke away, shouting:

"Get me my pistol; I'll kill him."

Mr. Shields was knocked down before clerks of the committee, with several spectators, could quiet the two combatants. Fred Allen and Samuel Eskew, two clerks, tried to hold the Kentuckian, but he got the better of them, and, breaking away, dashed off for his private room, shouting for his revolver.

A dozen men were in the room when Johnson started away, but his demand for firearms soon emptied the office.

The clash between the two men followed a hearing on a bill to increase the salaries of evening policemen, whom Shields represented.

Representative Johnson declared "he heard Mr. Shields had collected a large lobbyist's fee," during the last congress.

Shields demanded an opportunity to "reply to false statements," and at that John struck the lawyer a blow straight from the shoulder that caught the attorney under the eye and sent him to the floor.

MUST WORK HOUR MORE IN GOTHAM

New York, Jan. 27.—Every one on Father Knickerbocker's payroll will get a notice tomorrow to work at least an hour longer every day. Mayor Mitchel today notified each department of his discovery that city employes work from 9 o'clock to 4 o'clock, except Saturday, when they quit at noon.

"I think," wrote the mayor, "these hours should be extended until five in the afternoon, and then, if pressure of business demands, they might well remain until the daily routine has been disposed."

Canada Life Has Record Year

Another Splendid Statement Submitted

The Canada Life Assurance Company had a splendid year in 1913, and in a number of important departments established new records. The new policies actually paid for totalled $15,249,000, which brings the business in force up to $153,121,364.

The income for the year reached the enormous total of $8,894,886, an increase of about $700,000 over that of the previous year.

The assets were increased in the year by over $2,900,000, and now stand at $25,161,795.

It was estimated at the beginning of the present five-year period that at its end the surplus would reach $6,000,000. Only four years have passed, and it has already exceeded that amount, being now $6,183,278. The surplus earnings of 1913 surpassed those of any previous year.

An important announcement made by the President, Mr. E. S. Cox, was that all bonds and debentures will in future be valued on the Amortization system. Market values, with their fluctuations, will be disregarded, and the actual value of the security, on the assumption that it will be held till maturity, will in future be used by the Canada Life in its accounts.

This step is in accordance with the strong recommendation of the Life Presidents' Association, and makes the Company's Statement a much more accurate presentation than would otherwise be possible.

The Canada Life has always been fortunate in its official heads, and while the recent death of Senator Cox must be deplored by all connected with it, yet he has left behind him such an organization that the work of the Company will undoubtedly go on to greater success than it has yet known. Mr. E. W. Cox, the President, and his associates are devoted to the welfare of their Company, and, with them in charge, the policyholders may rest assured that their interests will be conserved to the very best advantage.

EX-PRESIDENT TAFT GREETED AT DEPOT BY MANY CITIZENS

Train Stopped at Wrong Point and They Splashed Through the Mud

Toronto, Jan. 28.—Mr. William H. Taft, ex-President of the United States, and now Professor of Law at Yale University, arrived at the Union Station at 10.53 o'clock to-day. On the platform to meet him were Major Caldwell, A.D.C. to the Lieutenant-Governor, President Falconer of the University of Toronto, Mr. J. P. Dreever, the American Consul in Toronto, Mr. Leslie Wilson, Mr. A. E. Dean, President of the American Club of Toronto, Mr. F. B. Fetherstonhaugh, Mr. Frank Beer, Mr. John R. Bone, chairman of the Canadian Club, and Mr. Hindmarsh, of the Literary and Scientific Society of University College.

With callous lack of consideration, the train drew up at the wrong spot, so a long procession of important personages and others, some in rubbers and some in new boots, some in small silk hats balanced precariously on large heads, and some in less imposing millinery, splashed hurriedly along the muddy platform to receive the distinguished visitor as he alighted.

Old Friends and New.

Mr. Taft left his car and shook hands with all who had come to meet him. Some he knew of old and for the others he had a few pleasant words, showing that he had heard of them and that their fame had spread to the United States.

Station hands and people waiting for trains rushed to catch a glimpse of Mr. Taft as the little procession walked slowly along the stately corridor of the Union Station, ornamented here by a decomposed cabbage leaf and there by a soiled newspaper or a broken coil of wire, till it emerges on the yard of confusion, where cars and carriages and cabs have to wait.

Accompanied by President Falconer and Mr. Dreever, Mr. Taft entered the motor sent for him and was driven to Government House.

Mr. Taft, who travelled alone, looked brisk and full of life in spite of his long journey. He [illegible] no signs of [illegible], although despatches from the States have recently given lugubrious accounts of a fading figure to fit which tailors have been employed [illegible] the "chest" measurement of his nether garments. LEGISLATURE OPENS ON THE EIGHTEENTH

Toronto, Jan. 28.—The Provincial Legislature will be opened on Wednesday, February 18th. This announcement was made this morning from the offices of the Attorney-General and the Provincial Secretary.

C.G.E. MAY BUILD LOCOMOTIVES

The City Council Received a proposition from the Canadian General Electric Co. last year to take up the manufacture of electric locomotives at their works here, and expend $150,000 for that purpose, provided they could obtain a right of way upon which they could lay a track for testing these locomotives. This would be an important addition to the factory, and give considerable employment. Steps were taken to secure such a right of way in North Monaghan, but some of the property owners whose land would be required have placed such a high price upon the land required that those having the matter in hand have had to drop that plan, and at a suggestion from the company, are giving their attention to another solution of the matter.

YOUTH CRAZED BY FALL ON ICE, DOUBLE SLAYER

Dufferin County Family Almost Wiped Out by Deadly Rifle --Shot Mother Fifth Time; Girl Looks on

Orton, Dufferin County, Jan. 28.—A fall while skating on the rink at Bellwoods, about three miles from his home near here, is thought to-day to have caused the condition of insanity in which Edgar Simpson murdered his father and mother and killed himself yesterday, for as far as can be learned, the young man was of normal, healthy mind until nearly the time of the triple tragedy, and there appears, from diligent inquiry, to be no insanity in the history of the family, which is one of the oldest, in fact, if not the oldest, in this community.

The father and son were both born on the farm where they met death yesterday, and the mother, who was Miss Elizabeth Johnston, was born on a farm near Bellwoods, two miles away.

Married Thirty Years.

Hugh Simpson and Elizabeth Johnston were married at Bethel Presbyterian church, Bellwoods, nearly 30 years ago, when Simpson was 23 years of age and his bride was a year younger.

The scene of the awful events which transpired but a few hours later is a cosy farm house, with generous barns and sheds. It is a farm of some 150 acres in extent, and it is all well cultivated, well stocked and paid for long ago.

Envied as a Happy Family.

Its occupants were among the most highly respected people of the district. They had been envied as one of the happiest families, being considered devoid of care. They were good living people and regular attendants at the Presbyterian church at Bellwoods. The son was apparently a good-living young man, and paid attentions to a young lady in the neighborhood, but this had nothing to do with yesterday's events. No word of a quarrel at any time in the Simpson household is known of in the neighborhood.

SIR JAMES MAKING STEADY PROGRESS

Has Now Been Placed on Ordinary Diet by His Doctors.

Toronto, Jan. 28.—The decided improvement in the condition of Sir James Whitney, which set in toward the end of last week, is being maintained. Not once has there been an unfavorable bulletin since; and there can be no doubt now that Sir James is making sure—although slow—progress towards recovery. At eleven this morning the following bulletin was issued.

"Sir James Whitney had very fair night. Doing well."
(Signed) A. McPhedran.
C. K. Clarke.
R. A. Pyne.

Dr. Clarke supplemented this announcement by saying that Sir James was steadily improving. His condition was such that he was now on ordinary diet and could have anything he fancied. It was impossible to say when he would be sufficiently recovered to leave the hospital.

A Plain Business Proposition

Can you afford to go on suffering from biliousness, sleeplessness, heart flutter and various other troubles so often brought on by tea or coffee drinking, just because you like it?

Thousands have quit tea and coffee and are using Postum, and to their joy find that the annoying troubles have quickly disappeared. Not only that, but they find Postum a delightful beverage with a rich, snappy flavour, distinctively its own.

Postum, unlike tea and coffee, contains no caffeine nor other drug. Made only from clean hard wheat, with a small per cent of New Orleans molasses, it is a pure, wholesome food-drink which can be freely enjoyed with benefit by all the family.

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled 15 or 20 minutes.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A scant teaspoonful to each cup of hot water dissolves instantly.

The convenience of Instant Postum is apparent. But when prepared according to directions both kinds are exactly the same. The cost per cup is about the same.

—Grocers everywhere sell both kinds.

If coffee don't agree, try POSTUM

MILITANTS TRIED TO BREAK INTO BRITISH CABINET COUNCIL

London, Jan 28.—Militant suffragettes to-day made a bold attempt to break into a meeting of the British Cabinet Council sitting at the official residence of Premier Asquith in Downing street.

An automobile belonging to the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization, with a woman driver at the wheel and filled with suffragettes, dashed from Whitehall into Downing street before the line of police could bring the car to a stop.

When the driver refused to obey the orders of the police inspector on duty to retire from the street the entire party of women were placed under arrest and taken across Whitehall, still in their car, to police headquarters at Scotland yard.

The woman's automobile was decorated with placards protesting against the forcible feeding of suffragette prisoners and demanding that the Cabinet cease the torture of women in English jails.

The unexpected raid caused great excitement and huge crowd soon gathered about Downing street.

The women were later arraigned at Bow street, where three of them refused to give their names, and were entered in the charge book under numbers. The other who had acted as driver, said she was Miss Virtue, and was the private secretary of "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond, a prominent suffragette. Miss Virtue is said to be engaged to marry a Montana rancher as soon as women have secured the vote in Great Britain.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The campaign of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage is to be carried into every Southern State, according to Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, its president, who has returned here from South Carolina, where the fight has just been started.

CITY'S BOARD OF WORKS MET IN REGULAR WEEKLY SESSION

Romaine Street Sewer Has Not Been on Strike Since Opened Up and Fixed by City Labor Last Year--Snow Plough Contractors Again Come in for Criticism

The City's Board of Works met in regular weekly session last night, chairman Ald. Geo. Duncan presiding. There were also present his worship Mayor Buller, Alderman Green, Saunders, Johnston, McIntyre, Duffus, Finance Minister Anderson, and City Engineer Parsons.

The plans of the Dickson Co. for the subdivision of their property lying south of Hunter street east, between the old raceway just across the bridge and Burnham street, was referred to the Mayor, the Chairman and the City Engineer, to report back as to its approval or disapproval by Council.

STREET SIGNS.

The Board intends recommending to Council that enamel street signs be procured this year. It is suggested that these signs be erected on poles, two for each cut of cross streets, one say on the northwest corner and one on the south east corner, with, perhaps, in some localities the signs attached to the buildings instead of on poles.

On motion of Ald. Duffus and McIntyre, the City Engineer was instructed to report on the number of signs required to serve the city and cost of poles on which to erect them.

ASKED $200 DAMAGE.

John R. Scott wrote, asking $200 for alleged damages to Mrs. Scott's property at the north corner of Mark and Maria street, by reason of the construction of the C.P.R's siding into the Vermont Marble Company's premises. It is cla med that the concrete sidewalks has been laid at such a height at the south and west of the property as to interfere with proper ingress and egress, while the siding obstructs the approach thereto.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and Duffus, the Mayor, the Chairman and City Engineer were authorized to interview Mrs. Scott and C. E. Adams regarding this matter, without legal prejudice to the city's position, and report back.

REQUEST GRANTED.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company's request for permission to lay a gas main across King street to lane behind Margaret avenue, was on the Engineer's recommendation, granted.

MUST GIVE NOTICE RE LAYING MAINS.

On motion of Ald. Duffus and Anderson, the Peterborough Light and Power Co. and the Water Commissioners will be instructed that the City Engineer must be notified by April 1st, of all the street work they intend undertaking during the year. This resolution also to apply to any other party or parties interested.

STREET WATERING.

A petition that Walton street be watered this year was left in abeyance until the board takes up the street watering question in general.

FRENZIED MAN SLASHED THE THROAT OF HIS WIFE AND THEN TURNED THE RAZOR ON HIMSELF

Robert McCutcheon Inflicted Probably Fatal Wounds on His Victim and Then Attempted to Commit Suicide--Both Now in the Hospital

Toronto, Jan. 28.—In a fit of homicidal mania, the outcome of a nervous breakdown of five weeks' duration, Robt. McCutcheon, a Scotsman, 44 Laughton avenue, to-day attempted to murder his wife and then commit suicide. Both are now in the Western Hospital, with terrible gashes in their throats inflicted by a razor wielded by McCutcheon. While it is expected that the man may recover, the doctors are of the opinion that his wife may succumb to her terrible wounds.

The gruesome affair occurred early to-day. Mrs. Christina Henderson, mother of Mrs. McCutcheon, who is living with the latter, was awakened by the shrieks of her daughter from the front room on the ground floor of the house. She rushed to ascertain the cause of the cries, and on entering the bedroom of the couple, saw a horrifying spectacle. On the bed were Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon. The woman was prostrate, blood gushing from a gaping wound in her throat. Kneeling on top of her body was her husband. One of his hands was clutching the woman's hair while the other grasped a blood-stained razor, which had inflicted the gash in the woman's throat.

Made Another Attempt.

For a few moments Mrs. Henderson was too horrified to move. She saw her son-in-law attempt to again slash his wife's throat, the woman vainly attempting to stop him. Meanwhile Mrs. McCutcheon was moaning piteously. She emitted a last despairing shriek, which awakened the mother to the awful reality.

The latter rushed to her daughter's rescue, grasping her son-in-law by the hand which held the razor.

"Keep off!" he shouted madly.

"I won't!" screamed Mrs. Henderson, "not until I get my daughter away from you!"

And then despite the threats and struggles of McCutcheon, Mrs. Henderson, despite the handicap of her 60 odd years, tore her daughter from his grasp and carried her bodily out of the room.

Cut His Own Throat.

The old lady had hardly proceeded with her burden more than a couple of steps when she heard a piercing shriek from the room which she had just left. Quickly depositing her daughter, who was by now unconscious, on a couch, she rushed back to the front room and there upon the floor, in a pool of blood, was her son-in-law. There was a horrible gash in his throat.

The old lady raised the alarm, and neighbors came rushing into the house. The police were notified and Dr. C. Mooney, 100 Cooper avenue, was summoned.

URGENT MEETING OF CITY DISTRICT L. O. L.

H. STINSON,
District Master.

No Contribution.

"Sir," said the trembling young man to the girl's father, "I love your daughter and she loves me, and I have come to ask you for her. I am sober and industrious, but poor. Will you give assent?"

"Not a durn cent!" growled the old man.

RIDING THE AIR.

The First Sensation That Comes in an Aeroplane Trip.

"All who have had the good fortune to ride in an aeroplane," said one of 'em the other day, "unite in their description of their first sensation. There is no jerk in the starting, though the machine may leap forward with a powerful swoop. Then comes—with some—a brief sense of nausea, a feeling as if the ground were dropping away from beneath.

"A slight thrust of the lever lifts the flying machine's head; the ground drops away still faster. Then, as the aeroplane soars higher, its occupant's eyes adjust themselves to the proper focus, and the surface of the earth below seems to be ripping past at railway speed.

"By this time you have forgotten the clack of the noisy motor, the flap and whir of the propellers, the grinding of the chain and sprocket gear that drives them. All vibration has practically ceased, and you float along with a sense of springy ease and buoyancy such as you can gain from no other means of locomotion. That you are flying fast you know only from the roar of the wind in your ears and the slight difficulty you have in filling your lungs with air—the same sensation one gets in racing against the wind in an automobile on a good highway.

"Then comes the first turn. The machine rises to it, taking its own angle sideways, just as an automobile leans on the banked curve of a racing track. You have no sense of leaning sideways, though—no feeling that you must tilt yourself as you do when an automobile turns a corner, for you sit upright, the aeroplane [illegible] of its own volition to the necessary angle and [illegible] you with it.

"A glass of water set on the floor of the flier could be carried round curve after curve and still not lose a drop."—New York Telegraph.

"A Band of Forgers."

Aids to Conversation.

"Books help a man's conversation."

"Undoubtedly. But the man who buys them seldom gets to be as good a talker as the man who sold them to him."—Washington Star.

Reliance on the right is engendered by [illegible] of the wrong.

A Boomerang.

"What's the matter with your head?" asked the first bunko man.

"A farmer I met today just banged me there with his carpetbag," replied the other.

"It must have been a pretty hard carpetbag."

"Yes; it had a gold brick in it that I sold him yesterday." — Catholic Standard and Times.

The New Martian Canals.

In a recent bulletin issued by his observatory Percival Lowell describes his newly discovered Martian canals. These new canals are two in number and were discovered Sept. 29, 1909, to the east of the Syrtis Major, where no canal had ever previously been seen. They were most conspicuous. Not a trace of them could be found in the records of previous years. He regards the evidence as strong that the canals are not simply new to astronomers, but new to Mars. Measurement of their dimensions show each of them to be 1,000 miles long and some twenty miles wide. The Canyon of the Colorado would be a secondary affair in comparison.

King Solomon's Treasure.

In an effort to find King Solomon's treasure and the crown of David, a syndicate of Englishmen, led by the Earl of Morley's heir presumptive and a near relative of the Duke of Fife, are excavating at the pool of Siloam on the eastern slope of Zion. Two members of the Turkish parliament are continually present, this being one of the conditions laid down by the authorities before permission to begin the excavation was given. Large sums of money were spent in obtaining the permit, in purchasing land and in carrying on the work. More than sixty men are engaged at a weekly expense of more than $4,000.

Commission Plan at Home.

Here is an explanation of the famous initiative, referendum and recall about which we are hearing so much these days. Mr. Man goes home and announces that he is going downtown after supper to meet a man. That's the initiative. The lady of the house says, "Are you?" in that searching voice which seems to walk over the tops of his nerves. That's the referendum. Then Mr. Man sits down and reads his paper. That's the recall.—Richmond (Ill.) Sun.

TALES OF RAZORBACKS.

How Hogs of This Breed Got Down a Steep Hill.

The group on the porch was talking about razorback hogs, and the storekeeper was telling a story.

"There was a feller travelin' through here," he said. "He was a stranger in these parts. One day he come across a bunch o' hawgs that had big slits in their ears. He figgered at them slits. They was too big for brands. What else could they be? After a bit a native come down the trail. 'Jess lookin' at their hawgs,' said the stranger. 'You was,' says the native. 'D'ye mind tellin' me what them big slits in their ears is for?' said the stranger. 'Not at all,' says the native. 'Have you noticed these hills?' 'What d'ye mean?' 'Noticed how steep they is?' 'Yes, I have.' 'Waal,' says the native, 'that's it. We have to put them slits in the hawgs' ears so they kin stick their hind legs through 'em an' rough lock themselves down these hills to keep from killin' themselves.'"

There was a salvo of very hearty outdoor laughter at this, and Mr. Andwine stirred behind his newspaper.

"That remin's me of one they use to tell down on the Arkansas line," he said. "There was a feller goin' through there too. He saw a drove o' razorbacks carryin' on mighty queer. There was about twenty o' 'em, an' they acted like they was crazy. They would run fust to one tree an' then to another, tryin' to climb it. Then they would spin aroun' on their noses, crack their tails an' squeal in the most plaintive way you ever heard. The traveler watched them hawgs for fifteen minutes, an' the more he saw o' 'em the more they jumbled him. Finally he went on through the woods till he come to a house. There was a man out in front. He was lookin' in the sun. 'Is those your hawgs up there in the hills?' the stranger asked. 'Yep,' says the native. At that the traveler stepped up an' looked his man in the eye. 'Say,' he said, 'what in the Sam Hill's the matter with them hawgs?' The native kin' o' half smiled. 'They does act queer, don't they?' he says. 'I should say they does.' 'Waal, it's this a-way,' said the native. 'We had a hard winter in here this time, an' there was no food in the hills for them hawgs. I had to let 'em have corn. Along late in the winter I tuk sich a bad cof' I couldn't holler pig-oooey any more. I had to call 'em up by knockin' the corncrib with a ax handle, an' now,' he says, lookin' back up the hill, 'them dern woodpeckers is drivin' 'em crazy.'"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

German Acuteness.

The egg cups imported into India at one time all came from Great Britain. The Indian eggs are, however, very small, and the egg cups did not fit. A German traveler noticed this small [illegible] and got his firm to make smaller egg cups and export them there. All the trade is now in German hands. In Africa the scissors imported from Sheffield were found to be rather dangerous weapons to place in the hands of the natives, owing to their sharp points. The Solingen Steel works sent a lot of round pointed scissors out, which found favor, and now Germany has captured the whole market.—From "Germany of the Germans."

Saving the Edelweiss.

The edelweiss, responsible for so many deaths, is becoming rare. The plant when it is culled is not of particular beauty, but the fascination of picking it is in an inverse ratio. Natives of the poorer class gather the flower, and tourists buy it for the same reason as certain anglers buy trout. The Bavarian government is so alarmed at the threatened destruction of the mountain "orchid" that a law has been passed to penalize the gathering without a permit. The measure is somewhat drastic, for even a proprietor who wishes to gather the flower must first obtain a permit.—London Globe.

John Was Stung!

Some time ago John Burns, M.P., who is nothing if not precise in his methods, had an amusing experience with a policeman whom he suspected of breaking the law. While out walking one day "Honest John" observed a constable in deep conversation with a man in civilian dress. Just as Mr. Burns was nearing the two the civilian suddenly drew something out of his pocket and handed it to the policeman. Scenting a disregard of the law against tipping in the force, Mr. Burns was quickly at the policeman's side. "Open your hand!" he demanded in stentorian accent. For a moment the constable hesitated and looked very confused. "Open your hand!" repeated the now furious Mr. Burns. Slowly the policeman obeyed and extended his open palm, revealing to the M.P.'s puzzled gaze neither a piece of silver nor even a penny, but—a large cough drop! The next moment "Honest John" had disappeared.—London Ideas.

Origin of Kilts.

It will doubtless surprise many Scotchmen to learn that the kilt as at present worn is only a modern fancy costume and is not of Scottish origin at all. The honor of its invention is due to two Englishmen—an army tailor who accompanied Gen. Wade's troops to Scotland in 1720 and Thomas Rawlinson, overseer of some iron works in Glengarry's country. For more than a century previously, indeed, the tartan plaid had been the common garb of the highlanders, but it was all in one piece, [illegible] the body, leaving the knees bare. Prior to the adoption of the tartan, which probably took place about the close of the fifteenth century, the long, loose saffron colored shirt, the real "garb of old Gaul," was the highland dress.—London Mail.

Meanest Traders in the World.

There is a colony of merchants in Kingston, the capital of Jamaica, who can give cards and spades even to the bland Chinaman "for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." They take one match out of every box they sell until they have enough matches to fill another box and so make an extra cent. They shave the flakes off cakes of soap and boil them down to make other cakes. They put a thin layer of molasses on the bottom of the scoop with which they serve rice so that a few grains stick to the bottom. These are only a few of their thousand tricks to turn a dishonest penny. Without doubt they are the meanest traders in the world.

NECK FRILLS CONTINUE POPULAR—HIGH AND FULL IN THE BACK

The low collar is youthful and becoming to nearly every one; however the woman with the long slender throat and even her well rounded sister favors the upstanding, fluffy frill that gives such a softening effect to the face. These have been mostly of white or cream colored chiffon or net but the newest idea from Paris is to have your neck and sleeve frill match your gown or suit. This idea was carried out very attractively in a navy blue suit; the frills were of chiffon in a slightly lighter shade of blue, edged with a narrow line of dull gold. It was most pleasing in effect.

Another idea which has "caught on" is the blouse or coat of a rather vivid color worn with a dark velours skirt.

Number [illegible] is an attractive example of this. The blouse is of Chartreuse crêpe de Chine worn with a skirt of Duvetyn in a dark harmonizing green.

To copy this design in size 36 it requires for the blouse ([illegible]) 3⅜ yards of 36-inch material; for the skirt ([illegible]) 4 yards of 36-inch material.

In number [illegible] the touch of bright color so necessary for these dull days is brought out in the border on the material. The costume shows a smart little bolero, a graceful skirt and a cute little frilled guimpe.

The material in which this costume is developed is a bordered crêpe with the border showing a Chinese design. This Chinese influence promises to be very strong for the coming season.

This costume may be made in size 36 with 4⅝ yards of 36-inch material.

Number [illegible]—sizes 32 to 42.
Number [illegible]—sizes 22 to 30.
Number [illegible]—sizes 34 to 44.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

"CATCH MY PAL" UNION.

A Temperance Movement That is Sweeping Great Britain.

Great Britain and Ireland are now being swept by a strong temperance movement which is being directed by the Irish Protestant Total Abstinence Union, or, as it is better known, the Catch My Pal Society. Its origin was singular.

July 13, 1909, Rev. R. J. Patterson, LL.B., a Presbyterian clergyman in the city of Armagh, happened to pass a lamp post around which stood six men, some of whom were recovering from the effects of a drinking bout the day before. One of the men suggested half in jest to Mr. Patterson that he should try and induce his companions to take the pledge. A conversation followed, and the six men promised to go the manse three days later as the curfew rang and take the pledge. The men carried out their undertaking, signed the pledge, and the union became an accomplished fact and grew rapidly.

From Ulster the organization spread to other parts of Ireland, and now branches are to be found south, east and west. Then the channel was crossed, and several of the large industrial centres in Scotland came under the influence of the movement, branches being formed in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Paisley and other towns.

The churches have taken a very laudable part in this organization and have worked tirelessly in promoting the cause.

The wonderful effect of the movement has surprised even those who hoped most from it. In many cases hardened drunkards have become the best pledge keepers and the anxiety of the quondam inebriate to reform his boon companion has stirred the emotion of the most phlegmatic onlooker. The result is that in every town there are at least a score of members who, in the past deemed to be hopeless slaves of drink, are now living as respectable citizens. Moreover, trade has revived. Men are now paying their debts. Children are being better fed and clothed and a higher standard of living prevails among the people.

"Pin Money."

In days long ago pins were so expensive that husbands gave their wives certain allowances just for the purpose of the costly luxury; hence we call the money given to a woman for her own special use "pin money." Five centuries after pins were invented the peddlers sung the following rhyme as they went through the streets in London:

Ten rows a penny, O!
Isn't that a many, O!
Silver heads, golden points,
Ten rows a penny, O!

A Deep Pennsylvania Shaft.

The deepest shaft in the bituminous coal field in Pennsylvania, according to the report of Colonel Henry C. Demming, consulting geologist, mineralogist and chemist, is operated by the Maryland Coal company at St. Michael, about two and one-half miles south of South Fork, on the Dunlo branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. At the Maryland company's operation the hoist shaft is 607 feet deep and the air shaft is 671 feet. Within ten miles east of this point is the highest mountain peak in the state, Blue Knob.—Philadelphia Record.

Subway Travel.

American Medicine thinks that "the reported effect of subway travel is another instance of hasty and ignorant assumption." It says that it "is extremely doubtful, moreover, if the difference between the subway air pressure and that of the surface atmosphere is ever sufficient to affect the ear drum to any appreciable extent. The fear that there is to be any increase of deafness as a result of the development of subways in our large cities may be dismissed as quite groundless."

Plucky Bank Manager.

An exciting attempt at bank robbery is reported from Box Hill, near Melbourne, Australia, where an armed bandit broke into the Australian Bank, the manager of which, who lives on the premises, is Mr. Robert Sutton. After midnight he was awakened from his sleep and confronted by a masked robber holding a revolver close to his face. Mrs. Sutton adroitly disconcerted the robber by ringing an electric bell, and Mr. Sutton procuring his revolver from under the pillow of the bed, fired at the thief, who fled. In retreating the marauder fired through the door, but no damage was done. Trails of blood showed that Mr. Sutton's shot had taken effect.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken on for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits, destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as D'Will is most suitable for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. D'Will is a splendid bitter, also a worm killer; eliminates and destroys all kinds of disease. D'Will kills the worms, also kills their poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulvenay. Write for booklet [illegible]

"I Sleep Soundly, Feel Like New"

ALL WHO LACK VIGOR, THOSE WHO ARE DISPIRITED AND WORN OUT SHOULD READ THIS CAREFULLY.

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and the perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

NO LITTLE NAVY

Lord Haldane and Mr. Samuel, speaking doubtless with the approval of Mr. Asquith have come out flat-footed against Lloyd George's advocacy of the cause of the "little navyites." Winston Churchill stands committed to a programme of increased armaments. What will Lloyd George do under the circumstances? If his declared sympathy with the cause of the little navy men was a pronouncement of principle, it is difficult to see how he can retain his seat in the cabinet and maintain his self-respect. If he was simply playing politics he has made a sorry mess of it, for with a majority of the cabinet opposed to him, and the Unionist party committed to the maintenance of British supremacy on the seas, he cannot hope to make serious headway with his retrograde policy in the country.

In view of representations that are made by a partizan press in this country, that Great Britain is in no way menaced by other powers, the pronouncement of Lord Haldane will bear repetition. His Lordship emphasizes the face, which everybody knows, that Great Britain's naval policy is not one of her own initiative, but is a policy of compulsion. "We have increased and strengthened the navy," said he. "The reason of this is that other powers are building up and increasing their navies with great rapidity." Great Britain's policy is one of self-prevation against aggressive armament campaigns in Europe. She is not building for war, but for peace. That the burden is heavy is undeniable. But with European forces increasing their sea armaments, the heavy expenditures are inescapable. This is no time for "heroic" action. The moment Great Britain ceases to be supreme upon the seas, the whole fabric of Empire is threatened. Have Canadian no concern in such a menace? Is it just, or in keeping with our sense of manhood that we should continue to share in the protection which the Empire navy affords, and refuse to lend a helping hand to ease the burden?

PUR SNOW PLOUGHERS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in your paper of a few days ago a well put letter about the scandalous way in which the snow ploughing is done in this city. I hope you will follow that letter up editorially. It is a disgrace that people paying 25 mills on an excessive assessment should have to walk through four or five inches of snow, especially in the south and west wards.

THE MEAT WE EAT.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—A few days ago a farmer came to the market with a load of beef covered only with some very malodorous horse blankets. In moving one of the quarters from the sleigh, it fell to the road over which many horses and rigs passed. There was nothing to prevent the meat from contamination. There is evidently plenty of work for our Board of Health in order to protect the people from impure food.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON ON THE BEECH.

By. F. A. Conners, Pastor of Park Street Baptist Church.

"Do you wish to go to Church to-night?
My papa is going to preach,"
Said a maiden fair of eighteen years,
To her sweetheart on the Beech.

The young man smiled, then gently said,
"I fear it is a scheme,
He preached from I. John 3, last time
And Love it was his theme."

"I'd rather hear you talk tonight,
And take your text in John,
Just preach the same good topic dear
I'd gladly help you on."

"Your father said last Sunday night,
"Just practice what I preach,"
So if you wish his will to do,
Just stay here on the beech."

"I'm not afraid of what you'll preach,
Nor would I stay away,
And if you'll take that text in John,
I'll practice all you say."

They there agreed the text would be,
"Love ye one another,"
"You be my sister now," said he,
"And I will be your brother."

"And then," said he, "another text,
I think it goes with this,
Wherein the great Apostle said,
"Greet the brethren with a kiss."

Just here the scene came to an end,
And left John in the lurch,
For Parson Brown came to the beech,
And took his girl to church.

Moral,—"He who is greedy and grasps at too much, is apt to loose what he has."

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

Verses written by Rev. F. A. Conners, Pastor Park St. Church.

(Before.)

Grant us Thy presence Lord we pray,
As we commemorate today
Thy broken body on the tree,
And Thy shed blood on Calvary.

As we around this table meet,
The Holy morsel then to eat,
May we again reminded be,
Of Him who died to set us free.

As we the sacred draught partake,
May it in us now zeal awake,
And strengthen us for tasks of thine,
And fit us for that life Divine.

The Lord's Table.

(After.)

Lord bless us now e'er we depart,
Create anew in every heart,
The Holy flame of Love Divine,
That we as lights for Thee may shine.

Protect and keep us day by day,
As we pursue our Heavenward way,
And when our toils on earth shall cease,
Receive us to Thyself in peace.

CITY BOARD OF WORKS IN REGULAR SESSION

gineer Willis Chipman of Toronto, amounting to $723 again drew attention to the vexed question of the Romaine street sewer against the construction of which this balance of account stands. Ald. Johnston congratulated Mayor Buller upon the apparently good job the city made of putting this sewer in working condition last year, under the direction of Mayor Buller, then Alderman and Chairman of the Board of Works. The sewer was then opened up and repaired, and manholes put into such shape that no further complaints have since been lodged of obstruction in this sewer.

SNOW PLOUGHING AGAIN.

Ald. Johnston was anxious that the snow ploughing problem should be adjusted. He thought that most of the men are doing the best they can. Still the situation could be relieved, he thought, were the city officials, in cases of big storms, to see that the snow plough men get out and go over the worst of their territory a second time—not necessarily the whole districts, but the bad spots. Then, the people might also, be asked to shovel off their walks after the snow plough has passed. This would help considerably.

Ald. Green contended that the snow plough contractors do not get out often enough and early enough. They wait invariably until the storm is over, and then go over the ground but once. Consequently the work cannot be done thoroughly. In cases of big snow storms, but very few so far this year, the men should get to work early and go over the ground a second time if needed.

The chairman remarked that the inspector had informed him that after the last fall of snow, he had to go and pull the contractor for the northwest territory out of bed at about eight o'clock a.m. to get to work.

On that morning also Charlotte street, from Park to the G.T.R. station was awaiting the snow plough at ten minutes to eight.

The Board generally regretted that in some cases the men are very negligent, and the work might be done much better than it has been. To say the least, fines will be imposed should the walks not be cleaned by 9 o'clock according to contract

MY AEROPLANE.

I would not be a butterfly;
I envy not the bird.
The wings that lift him to the sky—
I hope to have some by and by,
But that may be deferred.

Mere wings, for all the poets say,
Would be more toil than gain,
But when the thing has "come to stay,"
When it's quite safe, I hope I may Possess an aeroplane.

The stranger knocking at my door
Whom I have cause to shun
Would not annoy me as before,
I should not shiver at the bore
Or tremble at the dun,

But lightly to my rooftree spring
And on mine airy craft
Serenely from his presence wing,
Leaving him there to knock and ring
Till he were dead or daft.

And then to sally far and wide,
To see as from a cloud
The haunts of privacy or pride,
Places one wants to see inside
Because it's not allowed;

The grounds about the ducal hall,
The parvenu's abode,
The park, the palace, most of all
The nunnery behind the wall,
So baffling from the road—

In truth, 'twould be a dear delight
These hidden realms to see;
But, oh, it is the secret night
When the advantages of flight
Mostly appeal to me!

There is a certain man I hate.
With divers plot and plan
I have schemed early and schemed late,
Seeking a just and adequate
Revenge upon that man.

Yet one by one they came to naught.
Some were too gentle; some
Involved the risk of being caught,
Which wouldn't do at all. I thought
My chance would never come.

But now—some night I hope to go
In one of these machines,
Armed with a good stout bomb, and, oh,
Rapture! With any luck I'll blow
That man to smithereens!

Strange Death of Rival Stags.

Many records exist of the way in which rival stags have met their death when fighting for supremacy. Probably none is more strange than that described by Herr O. Denthmore of Charlottenburg in the Deutsche Jager-Zeitung. In 1908 the keepers on the Gelbensand shooting in Mecklenburg-Schwerin found a fine twelve pointer lying dead, apparently from [illegible] and with both horns close together. Not far off was a smaller stag, a ten pointer, still living, but as its back was broken it was put out of its misery. On examination it was found that the antlers of the larger stag were torn out of the skull and the frontal bone was broken. The back of the smaller stag must have been broken in the struggle.

One of Mark Twain's Jokes.

Mark Twain played a practical joke on the first audience he addressed in England. This was in 1872, when his reputation was already high in that country, and the announcement of his lecture filled St. George's hall, London, to overflowing. Few if any of those present had ever seen the humorist. He came on the platform in evening dress, with the crestfallen air of a manager announcing a disappointment. "Mr. Clemens had landed at Liverpool and had fully hoped to reach London in time, but unfortunately missed his train." The audience started hissing, but the hoot changed into cheers and laughter when he added that, fortunately, Mark Twain was present and would do his best to fill the place of the defaulting Clemens.

A COLD STORAGE ROMANCE.

Bill Bailey was a bachelor, forsaken and forlorn.
He used to eat a single egg for breakfast every morn.

He bought his egg one morning from the shop across the way.
The sign above them read, "These Eggs Are Strictly Fresh Today."

Bill Bailey's wonder and surprise were more than we can tell
When he discovered some one had been writing on the shell.

In fact, it seemed a woman had inscribed upon the egg
Her autograph. The name he found was Clementina Clegg.

He wrote to the address she gave and registered a vow:
"This is the woman of my choice. I'll find a partner now."

For weary weeks he waited, though the maiden had forgot,
And then his hopes were shattered by the answer that he got:

"Dear sir, your letter is at hand, and in reply would beg
To state that there is no one here named Clementina Clegg.

"Some of the oldest people here admit they used to know
A bunch of Cleggs who padded eggs, but that was years ago.

"They tried to run a poultry ranch, but couldn't make it pay,
So sold to a cold storage plant, and then they went away."

A [illegible] Story.

Joseph Alexander is a pickaninny of many virtues, but sadly given to exaggeration. One day when I had him pulling weeds in the front yard he ran into the house with eyes big as moons and cried:

"Law, Miss Minnie, what you think! I dun kill three big rattlesnakes out in the yard."

"Now, Joseph," I replied, "you know that is not so."

"Well, now, Miss Minnie," he insisted unflinchingly, "it was two terrible big snakes, an' I killed 'em fo' sho'!"

Determined to convict him, I insisted, "You know you did not kill two snakes, Joseph."

He thought a moment, then said impressively, "Well, now, I did kill one powerful big snake in dat very front yard."

"Go away, boy! You are an outrageous story teller!" I cried indignantly. He was not one whit abashed by my vehemence, but cheerfully replied:

"Well, 'clare for goodness, Miss Minnie, hit was a powerful big worm!"—Delineator.

His Sarcastic Apology.

A well known New Yorker figured in a quaint encounter with a "panhandler" not long ago The fellow had asked him for a dime, when the following conversation took place:

"You're a positive nuisance! Tuesday you struck me for a dime, Thursday I gave you another, and now you have the nerve to ask for a third!"

"Excuse me, but are you the gent that gave me a dime on this corner the day before yesterday?"

"Yes."

"And now I've tackled you for the third dime?"

"Yes."

"Waal," said the hobo contritely, "I sincerely beg your pardon, old man. That's too much gall even for me. The only excuse I have to offer is that you have improved so much in your personal appearance that I didn't recognize you."—Cleveland Leader.

Philip's Reminder.

Philip, father of Alexander, had a servant whose sole business it was to remind him that he was human. It is said accordingly that he never went from the house and, having returned, never gave audience to any one without first this servant would say to him three times in a loud voice, "Philip, thou art but a man!"

Awfully Agonizing.

"He told me my operation would be absolutely painless."

"And wasn't it?"

"Naw, it cost me a hundred dollars!"—Houston Post.

DAILY SHORT STORY

LISA

A Story of the Russian Revolution

By Allen W. Thompson

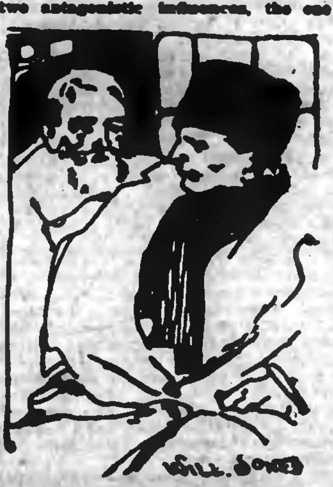
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I lived on my father's estate in the department of Tula, in Russia. Several of us living in close proximity were very intimate. Nicholas Dziwinki was a sort of leader among us—a serious, intellectual fellow, who never spoke without weighing his words. Then there was Anna Alexandrovna, a young woman calculated to shine either in court society or among those women who band themselves together in England or America to accomplish some great good for their sex. Next came Lisa Saranin, not over eighteen, as gentle and retiring as the other two were full of vigor.

I suspected that Nicholas was tinctured with the revolutionary doctrines at that time spreading all over Russia. This I regretted, for with his talents he might win the favor of the government, and this would in turn enable him to occupy some high office.

From a few words I overheard spoken between him and Anna it seemed to me that she encouraged him in taking a position antagonistic to the czar. Nicholas was influenced in a contrary direction by Lisa, whose nature was fitted for a quiet, peaceful life.

I suspected that both these girls loved Nicholas and that they were two antagonistic influences, the one pulling him toward a dangerous career, the other endeavoring to keep him out of the strife that we all saw coming. He was fired by Anna's ideas, while Lisa's restraining influence was not in accordance with his ardent nature.



"SHE CAN SEND ME TO SIBERIA."

That there was a strife of another kind between these two girls I did not doubt. It seemed to me that on the one hand the resolute Anna would possess Nicholas if she was obliged to wreck her life in order to get him, and it seemed that if the gentle Lisa did not get him she would herself be wrecked. Not one word concerning these things was spoken. There was underneath our intercourse a current running deep and swift that was scarcely noticeable on the surface. I think I was the only one cognizant of it, and even I did not realize its strength.

Finally our little group was broken up by Nicholas and I going to the capital, I to practice law, Nicholas ostensibly to do the same, but since he was possessed of a good income there was no necessity for him to labor. Great was my surprise when he told me on our way to St. Petersburg that he was engaged to Lisa. I was pleased to hear the news, for, as I have said, I sympathized with Lisa in this struggle between the two girls. But somehow I did not think Anna a girl to give up a lover to one who, considering her own dominating nature, must have seemed greatly her inferior. Now that the subject was an open one between us I intimated this to Nicholas. His reply was characteristic of him:

"I know nothing of the rivalries among women and care less. A man's heart is independent of his relations with any woman. I love Lisa. Anna is companionable with me in an intellectual way."

"But does not Lisa fear her influence over you?"

"She does. She distrusts Anna. But one cannot expect that either of two rivals will do the other justice."

These few words furnished me with food for thought during the rest of the journey. I have noticed that the good women of the world are apt to be correct in their judgment of the bad ones. It struck me that Lisa was endeavoring to protect the man she loved against an evil influence. But with a man's logical mind I asked why should an influence drawing him to take up the cause of a downtrodden people be bad? And here is where a man's judgment is often mistaken when a woman's is right. He attacks a question with logic which is fallible. She attacks it with instinct which is infallible.

We hadn't been long in St. Petersburg when I learned that Anna was there. What she had come for I did not know, but I believed she had come because Nicholas was there. I saw her soon among those present on several occasions at court balls and heard that she was quite prominent among the beauties of the capital. I often met Nicholas and without directly questioning him gave him every opportunity to tell me if he saw her often and what was going on between them, yet he never vouchsafed aught about her.

But one day he sent for me. I went to him at once and found him very much agitated.

"What's the matter?" I asked anx-

"You have heard the adage, 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned?'"

"Well?"

"I have persistently refused to make love to Anna. It is one of those singular cases that I cannot understand. Her love has turned to hate."

"How can she harm you?"

"She can send me to Siberia."

"Surely she will not do that!"

"I think not. I fear not for myself, but for some one else."

"Who?"

"Lisa."

"Great heavens!"

"It is a question which a woman scorned hates the more—the man or the rival who has taken him from her."

"But how can Anna harm Lisa?"

"That I don't know. I only hope that if she harms her at all it will be through me. It would be some satisfaction for me to suffer for my own fault in not listening to Lisa's warnings. If one hair of Lisa's head should be harmed directly I should go mad."

I said all I could to comfort him, but in the situation there was no comfort. There had been a great revolution in his mind with reference to Anna. I could see that while before he had had confidence in her and had admired her he now stood in terror of her.

I went often to see him during the next few weeks and always found him much worried. One day, after not having called on him for a longer period than usual, I went to his rooms and found them empty. I asked the concierge what had become of him, and was told that he had gone out two days before and had not returned.

I knew the blow had fallen. I made every effort to find where Nicholas had been taken, but never succeeded in getting the slightest clew either as to the time or manner of his arrest. I did not doubt that he had been arrested for revolutionary doings.

It occurred to me to go and see Anna, whom I had known intimately, and question her. What use? Would she admit that she knew anything about Nicholas? No. I would have written Lisa sympathetically, but knew not what to say to her. I might say just the wrong thing. There was nothing to do but let the horrible episode take its course, or, rather, wear out the lives of those who were involved in it as countless similar ones had done with others.

I went home not long after this and as soon as I arrived went to see Lisa. I was informed by the butler that she was not at home. I asked where she was, but he could not tell me. He only knew that she had gone away some time before. She did not return during my stay at Tula, and I could not find out anything about her. All that concerned her must have been very secret, for no one seemed to be aware that anything unusual had happened.

But while I was at home news came that startled the community. It was that Anna had been found in her carriage after coming from a ball at the Winter palace with a dagger driven up to the hilt in her heart.

All that was known as to whom the assassin might have been was that the coachman heard the door of the carriage close. Presently he heard it close again. But whether any one got in for the purpose of committing the deed he did not know. He had not seen any one enter or leave the carriage. The deed was the mystery of its time at the capital. Upon my return to St. Petersburg I asked an officer of police with whom I was acquainted about it, and he told me in confidence that Anna was a paid spy in the service of the government, and it was supposed that she had been assassinated by a relative or friend of some one she had betrayed. The assassin was never discovered.

The next time I went home I called upon Lisa. She had known through Nicholas that I sympathized with him and with her, and she showed her appreciation of my interest in them. But I found her very much changed. She was not twenty yet she looked thirty, with an oldish look at that. I refrained as much as I could from speaking of the unpleasant features of her love and neither of us spoke of the death of Anna Alexandrovna. Lisa seemed buoyed up by a hope that she would before long be reunited with her lover, but she gave me no reason for her expectation.

Two years after this I received a letter from Nicholas postmarked the United States of America. It told me that Lisa by the death of a relative had come into possession of a valuable estate. She had turned it into cash, gone to Siberia, bribed his jailers and effected his escape. They had gone around northward by sea and shipped from England for America. They were living happily on a farm in North Dakota raising wheat.

The closing paragraph of the letter interested me greatly. It referred to the punishment that had been meted out to Anna Alexandrovna. In my heart I could not but admit that in Anna's death I had seen Lisa's hand, revenging her lover. The epistle closed with these words:

While in prison word was passed one day that a government spy had been assassinated by order of a revolutionary circle and that her name was Anna Alexandrovna. A young man killed her in her carriage.

I breathed a sigh of relief.

His Specialty.

"Bury, you ought to git a good job in a firearms factory," growled the country storekeeper as the chief loafer reached into the barrel for another choice apple.

"What doin'?" lazily asked the post office bum.

"Ridin' barrels!" snapped the long suffering storekeeper.—[illegible] Sunday Magazine.

A Gruesome Proposition.

Speaking For Himself.

Lovers of Sports.

The Anglo-Saxons love sport. No matter in what part of the world they are found the spirit is strong among them. Wherever the restless Anglo-Saxon dominates the love of sport is dominant. The Americans are—at least the most of them—descendants of this virile race, and nowhere is the love of sport so much exhibited as in this country. Our people are patrons of horse racing, of baseball, of golf, of football, of all out of door sports as no other people. The English are great sportsmen, but not to the extent that Americans are, for the reason that the opportunities are greater here.—Nashville American.

Bad Advice.

Friend—What's worrying you? Manager—The prima donna of my company refuses to sing oftener than twice a week. I am making only hundreds where I ought to be making thousands. Friend—I'll settle that. If I were you I'd marry her. (A year passes.) Friend—My gracious, you look seedy! What's happened? Manager—I took your advice and married the prima donna, and now she won't sing at all.

Reciprocity.

There is one word which may serve as a rule of practice for one's life. That word is "reciprocity." What you do not wish done to yourself do not do to others.

Wise Father.

Father has to wear his whiskers just as mother tells him to.
Father can't buy clothes, while mother thinks his last year's suit will do.
Not till she consents can father have a necktie that is new.

Mother never thinks of asking father how to wear her hair.
She gets dresses when she wants them and decides what kind to wear.

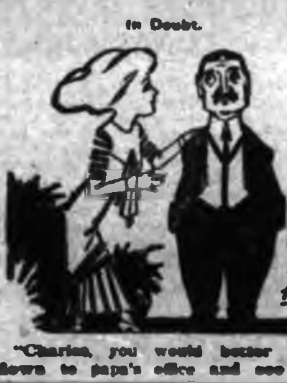
In Doubt.



"Charles, you would better walk down to papa's office and see him about our engagement."

"Clara, I can walk to your papa's office, but I may need some help to get back."

His Money.

A poor beggar received a monthly allowance of $5 from a rich man. The money used to be paid to him regularly by the bookkeeper. On one occasion when the poor man came around the bookkeeper handed him only $3. The poor man remained standing quietly until the bookkeeper asked whether there was anything else he wished.

"You must have made a mistake," he said. "I always get $5."

"Yes," replied the bookkeeper; "that has now been changed."

"Changed? Why?"

"You see, the boss recently married off his eldest daughter, and he had a great deal of expense, as you may imagine—the dowry and so forth. You can easily understand"—

"Yes, yes!" grumbled the beggar. "Give your employer my best wishes and tell him that if he ever marries off another daughter he may do it with his own money, not with mine."—[illegible]

Stewed Apples.

To stew apples so each quarter is unbroken and so clear one can almost see through it is an art, and yet it is a simple thing to do if one only knows how. Peel tart apples very thin, cut them in quarters and remove the cores and seeds. As fast as you can peel and quarter them drop the apples in a saucepan in which you have already placed cold water to the depth of two inches. When the apples are all in, put the saucepan over a slow fire, cover it till the water reaches the boiling point, then remove the cover and let the apples simmer almost imperceptibly till you can pierce them easily with a broom splint; then sprinkle the sugar over them and let them just simmer until it is all melted. Remove the saucepan from the fire and let it stand where the apples will get cold before turning them into a dish for the table.

Egyptian Smokers and Madness.

An Egyptian smoker of hasheesh is even a more helpless slave than the Chinese opium fiend. He knows that in the end he will become a madman, yet he rushes toward the awful goal with unrelaxed speed. With the strange exaltation which first comes to the smoker he feels himself floating from cloud to cloud or alighting in the gardens of palaces all his own. Most of the hasheesh which Egypt consumes comes from Greece. From the husks of the hemp seeds and the tender tops of the hemp plant the Greeks manufacture a greenish powder whose fumes bring the ecstasy its victims desire.

Shapely Swedes.

The Swedes are probably the tallest people in Europe and have on the whole erect, handsome figures. To some extent this advantage is due to physical exercise, for Swedish gymnastics are compulsory in the elementary schools, and the system is much used in other schools and colleges.—London Telegraph.

BASEBALL PITCHING.

Mordecai Brown's Hook Curve and How It Is Delivered.

Hugh S. Fullerton, writing in the American Magazine about the "Wonders of Pitching," says of "Three Fingered" Brown, the star twirler of the Cubs:

"Beyond doubt Mordecai Brown's hook curve is the highest development of the fast overhead ball which curves down and out, as all good curves do. Brown has but two entire fingers on his right hand and only fractions of the others. His first finger is cut off short, and the middle finger is wrenched so that the first joint turns almost at right angles toward his thumb. Perhaps this mutilated hand is the secret of his marvelous curves. Brown pitches the hook overhand, releasing the ball at graduated points after the hand passes the line of the center of the body in swinging. Upon the point at which the ball is released by the fingers the place of the 'break' depends, and Brown can by regulating the point of release make it either describe a wide, fast arc or, after traveling fifty feet, break suddenly at a sharp angle from its original course. If the batter retires to the back of the batter's box Brown, by releasing the ball a flash sooner, can make it break in front of the batter, almost over the plate. If the batter moves to the front of the box to meet the curve before it breaks a sudden jerk of the pitcher's wrist makes the ball break several feet in front of the plate. He controls the point of the break or curve at will, except when the ball slips, as it sometimes will do even with the greatest of pitchers. Most players who faced him in duels between batter and pitcher concede Brown's curve to be the greatest of all, but no member of the Detroit team who batted against Overall in the world's championship series of 1908 will acknowledge that Brown is better. In the game that Overall pitched, the final one of the series, his curve broke in such an astonishing manner as to surprise even himself. Overall pitches his curve with a wide, sweeping, overhand swing, releasing the ball over the side of his index finger just as his hand turns downward."

Blacks Oppose Change.

Lord Gladstone held his first native Indaba at Gaberones recently when he received several native chiefs. The chiefs said they wished to remain as they were, and did not desire the change that would be involved by the inclusion of Bechuanaland in the Union. The Governor-General intimated that it was his keen desire to safeguard the rights granted by Queen Victoria. If any change came, they would have no reason to fear for the continuance of just administration, and he, therefore, counselled them to enjoy their rights without agitation.

A Seditious Poet.

One of the editors of the Nationalist newspaper El Alam has published at Cairo a book of poems said to contain seditious matter, eulogizing the two assassins Dhingra and Wardani, vilifying the murdered Premier Boutros Pasha, denouncing the British occupation, and threatening the Khedive. Farid Bey, leader of the Nationalist party, wrote a preface recommending the book. The book has been confiscated, and the author of the poems has suddenly disappeared from the ken of the authorities.

Her Baby Boy.

"If you have any doubt as to the healthfulness of Bulgaria and the sturdiness of its people, look at this picture." This message was inscribed on a picture postcard received a few days ago from Pavelsko, a little village in that country. The picture shows a peasant woman standing at a rustic bench, spinning flax by the most ancient method, with the fiber held over her shoulder by a forked branch. Behind the woman stands a stout man of more than the average height, wearing a full gray beard. Under this picture is the legend: "Baba Vasilka, 126 years old, and her baby boy, Todor, who is now [illegible] years old. They have always lived in Pavelsko."—New York Tribune.

Forbidden Tinder Boxes.

Six large factories and three smaller workshops in Austria are working at high pressure, writes our Vienna correspondent, to meet the orders for the tiny pocket tinder box which many smokers are now using instead of matches. The production is between 8,000 and 10,000 daily. In Spain, Portugal, France and Roumania the import of the tinder boxes is forbidden. Italy puts a tax of 1s. 3d. on each box in order to make the price of the tinder box equal to that of the number of matches, estimated at 3,000, that would be needed to replace the new apparatus. The minister of finance in Austria is considering the question of taxing the boxes.—London Mail.

The Right Way to Water a Lawn.

Lawns are frequently damaged by the droughts of summer, and they are also badly injured by the pernicious watering they too frequently receive. There is only one way to water a lawn. That is to soak it so that the soil will be "moistened" for a foot or more deep and watering will not be needed for a week. Most people water a lawn every day whether the ground needs it or not, but they give only enough water to wet the surface. This practice results in the plants producing their working roots near the surface, and when the family goes away for the customary two weeks' vacation in the summer the lawn burns up brown.—Suburban Life.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Pile Wharf and Approaches at Gananoque, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, February 23, 1914, for the construction of a Pile Wharf and Approaches at the Town of Gananoque, County of Leeds, Ont.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the District Engineer's Office, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster at Gananoque, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,180,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 28,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 6,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

A MILD COMPLAINT.

Say, Belshazzar's my name,
And I'm here with a kick.
I arise to proclaim
That I'm utterly sick
Of the way in which I'm Getting grumped about.
It's a cowardly crime,
And I want it cut out!
Every time that a bunch
Of cheap loafers get tight
At a twenty course lunch
And stay up half the night
And go howling about
Till the sun's in the east
The reformers all shout,
"Bad as Belshazzar's feast!"
And when crooks get the hook
Some one's certain to howl,
"At the handwriting look
Which appears on the wall!"
Shades of Babylon great!
It has sure got my goat.
For I'm willing to state
That my feast of much note
Could in no ways compare—
Not in one single sense—
With that [illegible] affair.
I dined ladies and gents—
Nobody got gay
And flung bottles about,
And the papers next day
Didn't set up a shout,
And that scrawl on the wall
Which we happened to see
Was no scandal at all.
So I say, let it be!
And next time when a crowd
Of plain rowdies and thugs
Get to cutting up loud
And fall round on the rugs
Leave me out of it, please,
And don't shout in the least
In such measures as these
"Twas a Belshazzar feast!"
—Paul West in New York World.

"Isn't that asking a lot, dearie?" asked Dick.

"I wouldn't care for myself," answered the girl, "but you know it makes mamma deathly sick."

"Well, then," he promised cheerfully, "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll never smoke when your mamma is with us."

She threw her arms around him. "Dickie," she murmured, "that's so good of you! I was afraid you'd be shy on smoking once in a while after we were [illegible]."—[illegible]

THE PRESENT INSTANT.

Science Defines It as the Hundredth Part of a Second.

A congress of European astronomers decided that the present time—that is, the present moment at any particular instant—consists of the hundredth part of a second. This has been settled on because these men of science have thought that it represented the tiniest fraction of time which could be appreciated by the human brain. Yet the thousandth part of a second is actually used in physical science, especially in certain important uses of electricity.

For scientific purposes, however, the official present moment flashes from the future to the past in the hundredth part of a second. This cannot seem so remarkable when it is recalled that speed records for both horses and men runners are officially calculated in fractions as small as one-fifth of a second.

But in astronomy it is needed to have the hundredth part of a second, for in that moment light can travel 2,000 miles. So time, which is, after all, only a figure of speech and is a mystery that no human brain can understand or fathom, must be considered relatively to one's sensations. The time to pull an aching tooth is really much longer to the sufferer than a whole night spent in sound sleep. It is more of the person's actual life. It demands more fuel to stand the nervous strain and the pain than hours of quiet rest.

Time, then, for all men is relative to their personal sensations. Yet time is real enough. It takes actual time for starlight to travel, in some cases thousands of years. It takes time for sound to travel and time for the electric wave to work actual results over long distances.

So that time is not only theoretically it is as real as coal and wood. Yet this reality stretches over a human lifetime back to ages before the existence of the sun and the stars. For purposes of ordinary human work the second is small enough to use as a standard of value, but scientific men have progressed so far in knowledge that the second is too long a period for them to consider as the scientific instant. Therefore they have chosen the hundredth of a second as the standard for the length of time that they will consider as the actual moment at any one instant.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A remarkable career has been that of Captain Pentecost, commander of the Cunard liner Saxonia, who has retired from the company's service. He was born in Sydney, N.S.W., joined the Cunard in 1880, being appointed commander in 1904. While in Burma he was attached to the Irrawaddi flotilla. He holds the Brazilian captain's certificate, also a first master's certificate for the inland waters of Bermuda. Captain Pentecost's escapes from death have been as varied as his nautical career. On three occasions he fell from aloft while at sea, was washed overboard twice during gales, and once, off the Cape of Good Hope, he had a narrow escape from drowning. The damage to his body in these accidents included the breaking of all the lower ribs on his left side and the fracture of one of his arms three times. Notwithstanding these experiences, the captain, who is now in the prime of life, looks robust and fit for many more strenuous years.

DECAY AND DIRT.

These Seem to Be the Prevailing Conditions in China.

"Along the road—and this is characteristic—nothing is being repaired," writes the Peking correspondent of the London Times. "It is the national failing to spend nothing on repairs, to build and then leave the building to fall gradually into decay and ruin. Nor is anything cleaned, and the squalor that is a feature even of the imperial palace in Peking is most extraordinary. A few miles out of Honanfu there is a fine stone bridge of five arches, but the piers are falling away, the parapet has disappeared, and the flagstones with which it is paved have great gaps and hollows, so that the cart rumbles and crashes and bumps across it in a way that would break any but a Chinese springless cart. To repair is no one's business."

"At another stage in his journey he remarks: "Perhaps to some extent the anticipated coming of a railway, which will kill the present cart traffic, may account for the shocking condition of the native inns. With railway extension in the air there is no inducement for the innkeeper to spend money on the upkeep of his hovel. Nothing is repaired. Their filth and squalor are amazing. In the inn yard the well has its mouth below the level of the soil, so that water which is spilled may flow back into the well and carry with it the surface drainage.

"A doctor must notice the prevalence of consumption. To the universal habit of expectoration on the floor, the exclusion of air and the absence of drainage this prevalence must be due."

OILING THE ATLANTIC.

Proposed Plan to Smooth the Passage to Europe.

Pouring oil on the troubled waters will be much more than a metaphor if a plan offered by the United States hydrographic office is carried out. Its serious proposal is to keep the path between New York and the northern European ports well oiled so that the waves may be kept down and passengers may cross in perfect comfort.

The hydrographic office knows a lot about waves and claims that nothing is so bad for 'em as oil. Moreover, oil spreads quickly and thinly over the water, and hence the calming can be done at small expense. A quart of cheap petroleum an hour for each ship would, they say, do the work in decent weather, and $25 per trip ought to cover it easily. With the big liners constantly passing the part carried away by the ocean currents would be restored without delay.

Maybe some day we shall have a wrecking crew to repair midocean washouts in the oil track. Meanwhile the hydrographic office will need more than crude oil to calm the storm of ridicule which this plan of theirs has awakened. Veteran sea captains claim that they have never yet seen an ocean that would hold still long enough to be oiled.—Success Magazine.

Spoiled His Act.

A musical artist announced to his friends that he had a feature for his act that was calculated to make the whole profession sit up and take notice. Several days later he was asked to divulge his plans.

"Oh, that's all off," was the answer.

"Well, if it was such a wonderful thing what was it?" was the general inquiry.

"I had planned to have a real skeleton," the musical man replied, "with its ribs tuned up so that I could play music on it like a xylophone."

"Great! Why aren't you going to do it?"

The musician heaved a sigh of disappointment.

"I tried it," he answered, "but somebody sold me the skeleton of a ticklish man and I couldn't hit the ribs."—Youngstown Telegram.

A Closed Discussion.

They had argued long and furiously over the question, "Can a man marry his widow's niece?" and the highly talented lawyer in the corner had waxed eloquent over the marriage laws of every state in the Union, every country in the world, civilized and uncivilized, and had cited the affinity tables of every church and even the legislation of Lycurgus down to that of Brigham Young, when a young man quietly announced his intense desire to be informed where the deuce a man was when his wife was a widow?

Then the discussion closed down and fourteen excited controversialists ordered iced water.—New York Times.

A Strauss Story.

A French contemporary tells a piquant story of the composer of "Salome." He was dining one night with a party of musical friends when the conversation turned on the compositions of the kaiser. Some of the guests had expressed their opinions pretty freely when Herr Strauss put his finger to his lips and said: "Sh-sh! You should never run down the compositions of crowned heads in company. There is no telling who wrote them."

Forest Fires.

Contrary to popular belief, forest fires seldom travel more than two or three miles an hour. Even in extreme cases it is questionable whether they burn at a rate of more than six to ten miles an hour.

A Great Science.

The greatest science we can study is the science of living with other men. There is no other thing that requires so much attention, so much wisdom, so much practice, as how to live together.

Scene—A drawing room. He and she.

He (a shy youth)—Are you interested in mental suggestion, Miss Arethusa?

She (demure and desirable)—Tell me about it, Mr. Summers.

He—It's rather odd, you know, but I'm afraid you—you are not interested.

She—Oh, yes, I am, Mr. Summers, so much.

He (encouraged)—Well, you think of something that you want another person to know, and you look at that person a long time. Seems foolish, doesn't it?

She—Not at all, Mr. Summers.

He—You look at the person until your thought passes into the other person's mind, and then the other person says something that shows she understands your thought.

(He draws his chair a little nearer.)

She—Isn't that lovely? Let's try it.

(He looks at her adoringly. She endures the scrutiny with remarkable patience. Nothing happens.)

She (after a long pause)—Yes.

He (amazed)—Why, that's wonderful! I—I was asking you in my mind if you would marry me, and you answered, "Yes." Oh, Arethusa!

She—Oh, William!

(A pause.)

She (presently)—Isn't science grand?
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Good Time to Turn Farmer.

In theory there never was a better time than right now for a sensible man to move from city to country. The movement has been away from the farm until prices of all kinds of food and fiber are high. There is nothing in sight to indicate that prices will be greatly reduced by increased production. A crop well grown and handled with good business judgment will be reasonably sure of sale at a fair price. There never was a time when it was so easy to learn new methods and the principles of scientific farming. A man starting now may receive at once the benefit of thirty years of the experience and study of good farmers and scientific experts.—H. W. Collingwood in Metropolitan Magazine.

Iceland.

"Iceland is perhaps the only country in the world with a strongly developed literary history which remains in the same unchanged state of nature today as it did 1,000 years ago, when the characters of the great sagas roamed the rocky slopes of the picturesque island or when Leif Ericson and his hardy seamen sailed the seas, even to America, several centuries before Columbus was born. Professor W. H. Schofield of Harvard university will head an expedition to Iceland this year and hopes to find much of interest connected with the ancient myths and legends.

Still Wondering.

The deaf man got out of the tram-car on to the other line of rails.

"Look out! There's a car coming!" cried the conductor.

"What?" said the deaf man.

"There's a car coming."

"What?"

Just then the car caught and knocked down the deaf man, and as he picked himself up he said:

"I wonder what that fool kept me there talking about!"—London Mail.

The Face of the Bill, Not the Back, Indicates Its Value.

Despite the careful scrutiny given every bill that leaves the bureau of engraving and printing, a number of "freak" notes find their way into circulation from time to time. Such a one was a note that once came to the subtreasury at New York. It had the imprint of a twenty dollar note on one side and of a ten on the other. But, inasmuch as the face showed the figures 20, $20 was the legal value of the bill.

In most cases the "freak" bills that have escaped the vigilance of the bureau's officers are national banknotes, which, like the regular treasury notes, are printed there. As intimated already, the face value is always recognized when the "freaks" come to be cashed at any branch of the treasury. The imprint on the back has no lawful status whatsoever.

The notes are printed in sheets. Usually there will be one twenty and two tens on a sheet. They are printed one side at a time, so it can readily be seen that the printer in turning over the sheet might get it upside down and thus put a ten dollar back on the twenty dollar note or a twenty on the back of one of the tens.

When errors are discovered the misprinted sheet is laid aside to be destroyed. It cannot be torn up at once, for every sheet has to be accounted for. After some formalities it is ground into pulp.

Almost all the "freak" bills that have been issued in the past have found their way back to the treasury, there to be destroyed. It is thought that very few of them are now scattered about, and these are for the most part in the hands of curio hunters.—Harper's Weekly.

The Talipot Palm of Ceylon.

The talipot palm of Ceylon has gigantic fanlike leaves, which when fully expanded form a nearly complete circle thirteen feet in diameter. Large fans made of them are carried before people of rank among the Cingalese. They are also commonly used as umbrellas, and tents are made by neatly joining them together. They are used as a substitute for paper, being written upon with a stylus. Some of the sacred books of the Cingalese are composed of strips of them.

A Synonym.

"Being a printer, Mr. Dash," said the hotel proprietor, "maybe you can advise me. I want to get a sign painted, 'Writing Room Free to Our Patrons,' or something like that."

"I don't like 'patrons,'" said Mr. Dash.

"No? Maybe that doesn't sound just right. What would you suggest?"

"'Victims.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Her Bad Habit.

"I don't like that woman."

"Why not?"

"She's the woman who is all the time teaching my wife a new way of carving up cold meat."—Detroit Free Press.

How to Ascertain If You Have Catarrh

Look for Symptoms of This Treacherous Disease in the Following List.

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice raspy?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose an itchy feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears roar and buzz?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now—stop it before it gets into the lungs or bronchial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catarrhozone," a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's tainted by catarrhal germs.

"No one can know better than I the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of Wakrah, P.Q. "I had for years a stubborn case of bronchial catarrh, ear noises, headache, sore eyes, stopped-up nose and throat. It affected my appetite and made my breath rank. Catarrhozone cured quickly."

The dollar outfit last two months, and is guaranteed; smaller size 50c., sample size, 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

CITY AND DISTRICT

GLEANED HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Insane at Lindsay.

Lindsay Warder: James Sproule, of the Township of Carden, was lodged in jail this morning. He is suffering from some mental trouble, and his case will be diagnosed by the jail physician.

A Chink Fined.

At yesterday's police court Yo You, a local Chinaman, owner of a Chinese restaurant, was charged with selling cigarettes to a minor. He pleaded guilty, the Magistrate fined him $5 and costs.

Local Children Share Bequest.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Todd of this city were all members of the Busy Bees, who contributed to the success of the First Church Christian Scientist at Boston in 1894. Mrs. Eddy left $4,000 towards the Busy Bees which these local children will share in.

Matinee Dancing Classes

Rev. G. W. Henderson, formerly of Lindsay, in a sermon delivered at St. Catharines said, in part, referring to Heredity: "What would you say of the modern twentieth century mother who exists her young and innocent daughter to a dancing class, or allows her to take part in the ordinary round dance of the average ballroom? Would you say she was an unnatural mother or merely a thoughtless one?"

Two Local Policemen Very Ill.

Yesterday afternoon a Times reporter who had pleasant recollections of two former members of the local police force, viz., Sergt. R. Adams and P.C. McGinty, enquired how these officers were progressing. As a result of his enquiries, he was distressed to learn that Sergt. Adams is very seriously ill, after his recent operation for cancer, in Toronto, and that P.C. McGinty is not expected to survive very long.

Should Have Come Here.

Eighty-five of Belleville's leading citizens visited Lindsay on Tuesday to investigate the magnetite lighting system of that town. They were given a supper in the town hall. The affair was held under the auspices of the Seymour Co. The Bellevilleites ought to have come here where a better and larger demonstration could have been made. The visitors would also have saved all danger of getting lost on Kent street.

Prominent Engineer Here and Gone.

Mr. Holden Blackwell who has been engaged as resident engineer of the C.N.R. near Sudbury, and who has been for the past two weeks visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Blackwell of this city yesterday for Toronto. The construction work in which Mr. Blackwell was engaged is now completed. In New York he will be the guest of his brother, Walter, a student of Columbia College.

AN OPERATIC STAR HERE.

Manager Clayton of the local moving picture house seems, to use an English expression, to "ave a haye like a beagle" for good vaudeville attractions. As may be seen in his advertisement in this issue, Mr. Clayton has secured for to-day for the Royal Theatre, a star, who for consideration has temporarily left the "Big Time" to entertain the movies. This refers to Mr. Vincent who has sung at "Dreamland" and is known all over the continent as a celebrated opera singer. The cast for today and the rest of the week also includes Babe Butler and Billy Ryan, both of whom are clever.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE

Most of our readers are rejoiced to hear the encouraging reports about Sir James Whitney's condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Holly Shepard have arrived in the city to assume the direction of the Belmont Minstrels.

The "wicked" of Peterborough and also the "just" yesterday "stood in slippery places."

Mr. A. J. Varcoe, of Mariposa, has been elected Warden of Victoria County for 1314.

Wor. Bro. C. W. Robinson has been elected District Master at the annual meeting of the District Orange Lodge of Mariposa.

Toronto Board of Trade has passed a resolution expressing their regret over the death of Senator Cox, formerly of this city.

Manager M. A. McKenzie, of the Penny Bank, Toronto, is to interview Lindsay Board of Education with a view of establishing a Penny Bank there.

The "talking pictures" shown at the Grand Opera House were well presented and display the well known spirit of Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, in promoting the latest attraction.

Our E. C. contemporary of last night, The Examiner, contains a well worded and convincing argument against the appointment of a woman police officer for Peterborough.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council will consider the feasibility of installing a new generating plant with which to operate the fire alarm system.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

CHARLES WHEELER.

Word was received here last night that Mr. Charles Wheeler, of Nelsons Corners, died yesterday morning. The deceased was 80 years of age. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Cover the Whole Field

An advertisement in The Times is guaranteed to reach regularly 85 per cent. of the homes of Peterborough. Sworn statement supplied of proof of this if required.

Business men are also reminded that The Times is the only paper that reaches those served by the Rural Mail Routes on the day of issue. As a result it gets the call.

Those advertisers will therefore know that by using The Times for their business announcements, they not only reach the WHOLE population of this city of 22,000 people, but a large proportion of those residing within a twenty-mile radius of the city. These are the people who have the money to pay for what they want.

Social and Personal

The public are invited to contribute details of At Homes, Receptions, Teas, Arrival and Departure of Visitors, and other social and personal events. Telephone 166 or write.

She Was Helpless For Two Years

WHY MRS. BALDWIN RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

She Could Find Nothing to Cure Her Rheumatism Till On a Neighbor's Advice She Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Walburg, Sask., Jan. 26.—(Special).—"I can truly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for any one suffering from Rheumatism." These are the words of Mrs. W. A. Baldwin, a highly respected resident of this place. And Mrs. Baldwin gives her reasons.

"I was nearly helpless with rheumatism for two years," she states. "I got medicine from the doctor, and I tried several other remedies, but nothing helped me. Then one of my neighbors advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought four boxes, and they helped almost from the first. I have used nearly two dozen boxes and am nearly cured."

That rheumatism is one of the results of diseased kidneys is again shown in Mrs. Baldwin's case. She had headaches, stiffness of the joints and backache, her sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and she was always tired and nervous. Her limbs swelled and she was always thirsty. These are all symptoms of diseased kidneys. When she cured her kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills the symptoms vanished—and so did the rheumatism.

THE ERNIE MARKS STOCK COMPANY

The Ernie Marks Stock Company will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House for two nights, Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 2nd and 3rd, with popular prices, 10, 20 and 30c. Their company is better than ever this season as they have six first class vaudeville acts that are put on between the acts of the show. The opening show, Monday night, will be that great play "Oliver Twist. Tuesday "Sweet Clover." Secure your seats at the Box Office.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

MR. TOM TERRISS

The Eminent English Actor and His Charles Dickens English Players to Again Appear at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, the 31st inst., Matinee and Evening.

Those who did not witness the wonderful achievements of this clever actor in his portrayal of Dicken's characters on the occasion of his recent visit should not fail to do so now as it is an exceptional opportunity to see real good and wholesome drama, presented in a manner never before attempted on any stage. It is owing to the numerous requests from the local patrons who were present on the last occasion, that the management has been able to arrange for a return engagement of this versatile actor, who will give a special matinee of "The Cricket on the Hearth," and for "A Christmas Charol," followed by the evening performance in addition to "A Christmas Carol," Mr. Terriss will present "Nicholas Nickleby." Judging from the unanimous opinions of the press in favour of Mr. Terriss' wonderful accomplishments, there should be a capacity house at each performance. We see too little of such good plays as are being provided by Mr. Terriss, and the engagement is far too short. Everyone should turn out and witness these adaptations from that immortal writer's beautiful works.

From here the company travel to Montreal for a whole week's engagement under the auspices of the Dicken's Society, which is a very strong organization in that City and where Mr. Terriss will be accorded a hearty welcome.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley and Hon. F. D. Monk are too ill to attend Parliament at present.

J. A. Lillie, financial secretary of the I. O. F. at Guelph for 25 years, has resigned and was given a clock.

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Peps is the discovery!

Peps are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air sacs in the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Peps are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Peps treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Peps, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.

NO FREE WHEAT, ROGERS HINTS REPLYING TO LIBERAL URGINGS

Final Pronouncement is Delayed However, Until Finance Minister Delivers Budget Speech

Ottawa, Jan. 29.—The entire sitting of the house today was devoted to discussing the amendment to the address moved by Dr. Neely, the Liberal member for Humboldt, urging the government to at once remove the duties upon wheat and flour imported from the United States, and thereby secure free access for Canadian wheat to the markets of the United States. Strong arguments in favor of free wheat were presented by Liberal members from the west, including Hon. Frank Oliver, Mr. McCraney, Levi Thompson, of Qu'Appelle, Sask., and Dr. Molloy, of Provencher.

It was a matter of comment that the Conservative members from the west took no part in the debate. Indeed so far as the government was concerned, it was undefended case. Hon. Robert Rogers contented himself with saying that tariff changes should only be announced and discussed in the budget debate, and clearly indicated that the wheat and tariff duties would not be removed, at least at the present session.

Higher Prices in United States.

Dr. Neely presented a strong case for the west. The western farmer, he said, had a poor crop in 1912, and a poor price in 1913. To make any money he said to have the American as well as the British market, and a [illegible] to which he could have access after the close of navigation. All the [illegible] who discussed the subject at [illegible] agreed with Dr. Neely in saying that prices were higher, and freight rates lower in the United States. The matter, they said had now simmered down to the question: Shall the western farmers be allowed to export their wheat or export themselves?

Mr. Thomson declared that the Canadian miller paid the farmer a lower price for his wheat, and yet sold his flour at a higher price than the American miller.

Ignore Signs of Times.

Dr. Neely, in opening, said that apparently, the ministers of the crown had spent their time during the parliamentary recess at some place where they had no access to the newspapers. They seemed to have no knowledge of the great fiscal revolution which had occurred in the United States. Instead of summoning parliament in extra session to deal with the problems presented by the passage of the Underwood tariff law, they had neglected to call parliament together at the usual date.

A Dry Dock for Peterboro

A despatch to The Times from Ottawa states that the Minister of Railways and Canals has given orders to expropriate eight acres or thereabouts of land, near the sight of the proposed drydock, in Ashburnham for warehouses and basin space. This means that the work of construction will be begun at an early date. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is certainly alive to the requirements of his constituency, as a drydock has long been badly needed.

Hebert Marriage Case Up.

Montreal, Jan. 29.—The famous Hebert marriage case will figure in the local courts to-morrow when the decision of the Review Courts is rendered on the appeal against Judge Charbonneau's right to hear the appeal from and to upset Judge Laurendeau's finding, giving civil effect to the church decree annulling by virtue of the Ne Temere decree the marriage by a Protestant clergyman of two Roman Catholics, Eugene Hebert and Emma Cleoutre.

PRIESTS OPPRESS IRISH

Rev. L. H. Shey Blames Them For Depopulation.

Toronto, Jan. 29.—That the methods of the Roman Catholic Church in Ireland are largely responsible for the depopulation of that country, was the chief point of a lecture delivered by Rev. L. H. Shey on "The Church of Rome in Ireland" before a meeting of the St. Anne's Men's Association. Mr. Shey said that the priests forced the peasants to poverty by imposing heavy taxes on them for the upkeep of magnificent cathedrals, and this was why these poor people leave the country. It was because of the subjection in which the priesthood kept their people that the Protestants of the country were afraid to entrust the Government to an Irish Parliament, knowing, as they did, that every Catholic elected to it would be under the control of the priests, and consequently of the Pope. He urged his hearers not to allow their opinion of the priesthood to interfere with their love and esteem for the Catholic people resident in Toronto, for many of whom he had a great admiration.

THE PARCEL POST AND EGG MARKED

Dealer Thinks the Farmer Will Not Bother With Small Customer

Montreal, Jan. 29.—Within a few weeks the parcel post system will probably be in operation in Canada, and its effect on the egg market is being eagerly discussed by produce importers all over the Dominion.

Major John Gunn, of Gunn, Langlois & Co. Ltd., stated that his firm were not worrying.

Major Gunn said that in the first place, the parcel post system will not be so likely to appeal to the farmer as it will give him a great dealmore trouble to deal with his customers individually, and their demand will not be steady. One day he will have orders for more eggs than he has the next; he will not be able to dispose of one-half of his eggs. The farmer is not so eager for the parcel post systems the consumer who expects to benefit by it. The question is, will the consumer benefit by it? as the farmer is likely to raise the price of his eggs to the ordinary retail price which are being charged in the city.

GERMAN WOMEN BEHEADED

Berlin, Jan. 29.—A double execution of women with axe and block occurred this afternoon at Ratibor Prison in Prussia. The executioner first chopped off the head of Franziska Zimmer, a young woman convicted of murdering her step-mother.

Then the headsman executed Josepha Kubecka, who killed her husband a miner. Both women died stoically, it was said.

The German newspapers devoted four lines to the story.

SIR HUGH MACDONALD SCORES THE POLICEMEN

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 29.—"I consider your offence exactly on a par with that of a sentry who deserts his post in the face of the enemy," said Sir John Hugh Macdonald, police magistrate, in sentencing to the maximum penalty of seven years in the penitentiary Robert G. Reid, who, as city police constable and guard of Jack Krafchenko, accused of murder and bank robbery, assisted Krafchenko to escape.

Reid stood at attention and said not a word during the proceedings, showing no emotion on his countenance except when [illegible] mentioned his aged parents, who he might never see again if given the maximum sentence.

"By your actions," said Magistrate Macdonald you have brought discredit upon the whole force with which you were connected. You have disgraced the uniform you wore and violated the oath you took. You perjured yourself before the police commission and before the Royal commission investigating this affair. You aided in turning loose upon society a most dangerous criminal and your deliberately furnished him with a deadly automatic revolver, knowing his desperate character and that the chances were that those most likely to fall victims to it were your fellow-members of the force. I will not say you had murder in your heart when you did this, but I will say that you were absolutely reckless of consequences."

The magistrate intimated he would have imposed a longer term is possible.

"VOCATIONAL EDUCATION" THE SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

Dr. G. W. Robertson Urges a Stronger Co-operation Along Vocational Training Lines

Last night before a large assemblage of the Canadian Club, at a banquet in Coleman's parlors, Dr. J. W. Robertson, Chairman of the Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education, Ottawa, gave a most eloquent address on the subject of "Vocational Development of Central Ontario."

Dr. Robertson commenced by saying "Too often, and too much, the eyes of the public men and the people generally are fixed exclusively upon some local political programme. The vocational training of all the people to be contributing earners, good citizens and worthy members of the race, is really the world's greatest movement at the present time. All the foremost nations feel the ardor of the sweep."

In the freshness and vigor of its youth, Canada turns readily to questions of material growth and development. Canadian feel that they are coming into their own. Yet their attention and imagination are captivated by wealth in things more than their hearts are stirred by the possession of power, with knowledge and desire to use it wisely. With all the fine attriqutes which belong to youth, the country has many of its handicaps and dangers. However, the urgency for educational experience by training which will be adequate not only for material progress, but for the enjoyment of its achievements, and for the real advancement of their intellectual, social and spiritual interests and outlook.

Dr. Robertson in continuing spoke of what there is to develop. The chief object of development is to secure the best use of things for the present and to leave them in the best condition for the future, to attain best characters in the people, and provide the best quality of life and opportunities for their successors. The query may be asked 'What has Central Ontario to develop' In what may be called material resources, it has farms, mines, forests, manufactures, commerce and transportation, and with the above the material and immaterial it has the making of homes and the carrying on of housekeeping.

The Dr. then spoke along the lines of intelligent and trained labor and educations for occupations. Vocational education, he said, is the oldest form of education and it is the highest form of education. It may be professional as for clergymen, lawyers, doctors, civil engineers, etc., or it may be agricultural marine, commercial, or for housekeeping occupations.

In a general sense the word education includes vocational training, but in the more specific meaning vocational training means the development of educational by additions, modifications and extensions.

Occupations have always played a large part in the drama of civilization. This refers to the occupation of plain people as well as the training of occupations of great personalities. The Royal Commission visited 100 places in Canada, during the past year, held 175 sessions to receive testimony and made transcripts of 1,471 men and women. Some of those occupy the foremost positions in industries, agriculture, housekeeping and educational work.

Dr. Robertson gave some eloquent facts as regards the success of vocational training in such countries as England, Scotland, Ireland, the United States, France and Germany. He said that the Commission recommends that a fund of $350,000 be provided by the Dominion Government and paid to the several provinces pro rata on the basis of population.

"The Commission believes," he said, "that the best course for Canada to follow is for the Dominion Government to assume definite responsibility for a proportion of the burden of expense for this new and important national movement. Then as the burden grows and the cost is correspondingly increased, the load will be carried easily by the broadest and strongest back. The policy does not involve the assumption of any control or any regulation of education by the Dominion authorities. No question is raised as to interference. Provisions are suggested by means of which hearty operation can be entered upon and friendly and mutually helpful continued. Only the provision is made of machinery for co-operation entered upon by mutual consent.

ACCUSED QUECEC MEMBERS HAND IN THEIR RESIGNATIONS

All Three of Them Decide That to be Their Best Course, Pending the Investigation of the Daily Mail's Bribery Charges

Quebec, Jan. 29.—The resignation of Hon. Messrs. L. P. Berard and A. Bergevin as members of the Legislative Council, and Mr. J. O. Mousseau as M.P.P. for Soulanges, were handed in this morning. All three were accused by the Daily Mail of having taken bribes.

Mr. Mousseau's resignation was announced this morning by Mr. Aime Geoffrion, counsel for Mr. Mousseau, before the investigating committee of the Legislative Assembly.

The news of the resignation of the Hon. Messrs. Berard and Bergevin will be announced officially to the Upper House this afternoon. Mr. T. K. Laflamme, K.C., of Montreal, will act as counsel for Mr. Mousseau, and for the Hon. Messrs. Berard and Bergevin with Aime Geoffrion.

KEEN CONTESTS ON IN 3 COUNTIES ON SCOTT ACT

An Anglican Rector in Welland Ordered Off Anti-Act Platform by Bishop

Welland, Ont., Jan. 29.—With each side confident of victory and the electors stuffed by a month of heated arguments for and against the issue, Welland county is testing the strength of temperance sentiment by a vote on the Canada Temperance Act. The election has stirred up unprecedented enthusiasm and nearly every voter is exercising his franchise. The temperance party relies strongly on their chances of success by reason of the fact that three large townships, Pelham, Wainfleet and Thorold, are dry. Pelham has been under the old Dunkin act for forty years and is considered a temperance stronghold.

Welland town, Thorold town, and Bridgeburg, will give a majority against the Act, but its extent is a matter of speculation. Many local option contests have been held in different municipalities, but none have caused the interest that the present county-wide measure has produced. As a result it is hard to predict the result with any degree of certainty or accuracy. Judging the situation impartially and from what unprejudiced opinion can be obtained from each municipality, however, it is probable that, while a larger temperance vote on the whole will be polled than ever before, the Act will be defeated by a small majority.

Preacher Had to Quit.

Rev. A. Ontonoio Mackintosh, Rector of the Episcopal Church at Fort Erie, made one appearance on the platform against the Act in the township of Wainfleet. He was there heckled and censured severely and although other dates were advertised he was ordered by the Bishop to stay at home.

Italians Fought Desperately.

New York, Jan. 29.—Wielding black jacks and fighting desperately with their fists, three Italians suspected of being the gunmen who terrorized Williamsburg shopkeepers for the past month, put up a desperate battle early to-day before they were overpowered by four detectives, headed by Captain O'Connor.

HOW CANADA HAS BEEN ADVERTISED IN THE U. S.

And Senate Lobby Committee in Washington Censures the Western Newspaper Union

Washington, Jan. 29.—Officials of the Western Newspaper Union were scathingly denounced by members of the Senate Lobby Committee today after Advertising Manager Washington had told that the Canadian Government had paid his firm $42,000 a year for the last twelve years for "patent inside" write-ups, supplied in the guise of news to small newspapers throughout the country.

"You were hired by a foreign government to do an act disloyal to your own country. Are you not ashamed of that?" thundered Senator Nelson.

Washington pleaded in extenuation that big Chicago papers especially the Tribune and Record-Herald, had published the same kind of articles.

4,800 PAPERS PRINTED IT.

The particular printed interview, to which the attention of the committee was called, supposedly from the Iowa farmer who had left poverty in the United States to find prosperity in Canada, was published, Washington said, in about 4,800 newspapers.

President G. A. Joslyn, of the union admitted that the Canadian Government had been paying the Western Newspaper Union for sixteen years to get articles boosting Canada inserted in the "patent insides" of small newspapers. He explained that the editors had only to print them on one side.

WALKING TO WORK.

BUSINESS IN CANADA CHECKED BY BIG CONTRACTION IN LOANS

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—The statement of to-day furnishes food for reflection upon the cause which led to the business depression from which Canada suffered. Compared with a year ago, there is a decrease of nearly fifty-nine millions in current loans in Canada. Such a tremendous withdrawal of money must have had a serious effect upon business conditions in this country and the opinion is quite freely expressed among conservative members of parliament that political reasons have been at the bottom of the situation. If it is so it may be expected that the matter will be discussed in parliament at an early date.

Compared with November the December statement shows decrease of upwards of twenty millions, both in total assets and liabilities, and a large decrease in paid up capital due to the liquidation of the Sovereign Bank.

APPLICATION TO PARLIAMENT

NOTICE is hereby given that the Corporation of the City of Peterborough will apply to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario at the next session thereof for an Act for the following purposes:

1. To amend the Acts relating to the City of Peterborough to change the name of the Peterborough Water Commissioners to that of the Peterborough Utilities Commission.

2. To amend Chapter 117 of the Acts of 1912 as amended by Chapter 114 of the Acts of 1913 so as to define more clearly what part of the property of the Peterborough Light & Power Company (Limited) it is necessary for the City to acquire, in order that the right of the company to the use of the streets of the City may be terminated, to provide the manner by which the City may ascertain what property and plant is owned by the Company and the means by which the City may take possession of the part expropriated and to extend the time within which the city has the right to acquire said property and generally to amend said acts so that the rights given thereunder may be effectively exercised by the city.

3. To authorize the Council of the City without the assent of the ratepayers to pass a by-law for the purpose of borrowing the sum of Ten thousand dollars to pay to The Peterborough Health Association to assist in the erection of a Tuberculosis Sanitorium for city purposes.

DATED at Peterborough this Twenty-eighth day of January, 1914.

GERMAN CITIES.

They Now Lead the Modern World in Artistic Splendor.

I know of no cities in the modern world which compare with those which have arisen in Germany during the past twenty years. There are none in Great Britain, from which country official delegations are constantly crossing the North sea to study the achievements of the German city. There are none in France, in which country the building of cities has made but little progress since the achievements of Baron Haussmann made Paris the beautiful city that it is.

There have been three great periods in which the building of cities inspired the thoughts and dreams of men. In the age of the Antonines the Roman people gave themselves with enthusiasm to the embellishment of their cities. The great public structures, the temples, amphitheaters and palaces then erected have withstood the ravages of time and still remain the wonder of subsequent centuries. During the middle ages the cities of Italy, France, Germany and the Netherlands erected similar monuments expressive of the love and pride awakened by their newly obtained freedom. Now again in the twentieth century the German people are expressing their pride in the fatherland and the imperial aspirations of Germany in monuments of the same permanent character and artistic splendor. Capital cities like Berlin, Munich and Dresden as well as more commercial cities like Dusseldorf, Mannheim, Frankfort, Cologne, Wiesbaden and Stuttgart are vying with one another in the beautiful, the orderly and the serviceable.

Important as are the honesty and the efficiency of the German city, it is the bigness of vision, boldness of execution and farsighted outlook on the future that are most amazing. Germany is building her cities as Bismarck perfected the army before Sadowa and Sedan, as the empire is building its warships and merchantmen, as she develops her waterways and educational systems.—Frederic C. Howe in Scribner's.

Catching On.

Young Mr. Scrachett-Rich was eating his first meal at a real restaurant.

"What are these?" he asked, pointing at the finger bowls the waiter had just brought to the table.

"These are to wash your fingers in, sir," said the waiter.

"Oh, I know that," rejoined young Scrachett-Rich, with remarkable possession. "I mean are they cut glass?"—Chicago Tribune.

PEERAGE INTRICACIES

THEY ARE A COMPLETE LIFE STUDY IN THEMSELVES.

The Lords Grey and Lords Howard Are a Numerous and Confusing Group and the Lords of Hamilton Are Legion—Extra and Supplementary Titles Are Common to Most Noble Houses.

If anyone is seeking a hobby which shall tax brain and memory to the utmost, and which shall elude and baffle and tantalize him to the verge of distraction, let him set to work to master the intricacies and perplexities of our peerage. I am inclined to think that after a few weeks of it he would turn to [illegible] IV. as a light recreation.

Who, for instance, even in the gilded circle of the peerage itself, can recall all of the various fellow-peers who answer to the description "Lord Grey"? And how should he know which of them was referred to under that designation—Earl Grey, Viscount Grey de Wilton, Baron Grey of Codnor, or Baron Grey de Ruthin, to say nothing of Earl de Grey? The Lords Howard are equally confusing; for we have a Lord Howard of Effingham, another of Glossop, and a third of Walden. And are there not Lords Howard of Morpeth and Charlton?

The Lords of Hamilton swarm like bees. We have a Hamilton Duke and a Marquis, Lord Hamilton of Dalzell, and two subsidiary titles of Lord Hamilton, in addition to a small crowd of courtesy lords who bear the name. Of Lords Stuart or Stewart there are four; and [illegible] Boyles, Bruces, Douglases, Hays, Herberts, Hills, and Montagus number three each.

If you wish to go further into the peerage maze, take a peep at the division lists of the House of Lords, which may well puzzle the King-at-Arms himself. Who, in the name of all that is reasonable, is the Earl Strange who figures there? Who are Barons [illegible], [illegible], Saltersford, and Fisherwick, Worlingham, Meldrum, and Botreaux? All, as a matter of fact, are well-known peers, who sit in the House of Lords under these unfamiliar imperial titles. The Earl of Aberdeen is known at Westminster only as Viscount Gordon; the Marquis of Headfort, as Baron Kenlis; the Earl of Limerick, as Baron Foxford; the Marquis of [illegible] Marquis of Waterford is Baron Tyrone—and so on through the long mysterious list.

The foreign titles borne by our peers, however familiar in a domestic connection, are just as effectual in concealing identity from us. We know Lord Reay well enough, but who knows him as the Dutch Baron Mackay of Ophemert? Lord Clarendon figures in the Prussian peerage roll as Baron Villiers; his grace of Richmond is hailed by the old French noblesse as Duc d'Aubigny; the Duke of Hamilton is Duc de Chatelherault across the Channel; and his brother Duke of Wellington is Duque de Ciudad Rodrigo, Marquess of Douro and Torres Vedras, Conde de Vimieira, Prince of Waterloo, and a grandee of the first class in Spain. His grace of Marlborough is the Suabian Prince of Mindelheim; the Earl of Clancarty is Marquess of Heusden when he takes a trip to Holland; and in far Brazil the Earl of Dundonald is greeted as Marquess of Maranham. In Italy, Charles Giustiniani-Bandini is Duc di Mondragone, Count of Carnicola, and Lord of Varano; in England he is the Earl of Newburgh, and the heir to all these strange dignities is just Viscount Kynnaird.

Even when the titles are familiar enough to us it is fatally easy to blunder. Thus, if we speak of Earl Lytton and the Earl of Beauchamp we convict ourselves of gross, unpardonable ignorance. It is the Earl of Lytton the Marquis of Cholmondeley, the Earl of Onslow; just as it is the Marquess Camden the Earl Beauchamp, and the Earl Cawdor — and so on through a long list of more than forty peers who repudiate the preposition "of."

If we descend to subsidiary titles we are hopelessly undone. Indeed, it is doubtful whether some of our peers themselves could reel off the list of their dignities offhand without error. His grace of Atholl has twenty-two of them, ranging from Baron to Duke; The Duke of Argyll boasts seventeen; the Duke of Hamilton sixteen, including a trio of dukedoms; and the Marquis of Bute and the Duke of Buccleugh counts their up to fifteen.

Who among us could recognize the Duke of Atholl under the guise of Lord Balquhidder; the Duke of Argyll in Earl Cowal; Lord Bute as Viscount Mountjoy; or His Grace of Buccleuch as Viscount of Thorthowald? Lord Rosebery as Viscount of Inverkeithing is a stranger to most of his intimates; Lord Lansdowne, as Earl of Wycombe; and the Duke of Portland would scarcely know himself as Baron Bolsover.

One must be very careful of one's orthography in writing to, or of, our peers if we are not to be branded as ignoramuses. Beware of writing Donegal, Guildford, Roseberry, Kinsale, or Argyle instead of Donegall, Rosebery, Kingsale, Guilford, and Argyll. And we must be equally careful to avoid confusing Lord Camden with Lord Campden, Lord Bandon with Bandon Bridge, Earl Landaff with Viscount Llandaff, or Baron Invercarny with Baron Inverurie—to mention but a few of these confusing personalities, who are really quite distinct, and who strongly object to being mixed up.

Courtesy titles are a sore puzzle to the uninitiated. It is, of course, usual for the eldest son and heir to a dukedom, marquisate, or earldom to be known by the family title next in rank to that borne by his father. But the rule is subject to perplexing variations. Thus the heir to the Marquisate of Lansdowne is known in alternate generations as Earl of Kerry and Earl of Shelburne; and the heir to the Marquisate of Lothian may be Lord Jedburgh as well as Earl of Ancrum.—Modern Society.

The King Edward Glass.

In a curio cabinet which occupies a corner in the drawing room of a handsomely furnished New York home there is a red and white Bohemian glass tumbler of odd shape. At first glance it looks as though it had been trodden upon and flattened out. On one flat side is a raised picture of the Sprudel at Marienbad and on the other a landscape. The curious drinking vessel when it was new fell one morning from the hands of a little girl at the German spa and broke into four pieces. She carried the pieces home and said that a "stout gentleman had picked them up and said they could be put together again." This a jeweler succeeded in doing by means of wire and carefully drilled holes. The vessel has always been known in the family as the "King Edward glass" because the late King Edward was "the stout gentleman" who rescued the pieces and soothed the child in her misfortune.

Shocking Shoes.

You will often run across a jolly looking individual who wears a button on which is a figure which looks like a little red devil. He belongs to the Order of the Rejuvenated Sons of Jove and must necessarily be an electrical man. The order is national in its scope and includes electrical salesmen, engineers, inventors, manufacturers and others engaged in electrical callings. Every once in awhile the order holds a "rejuvenation." It had one at the last electrical show in Chicago. It is told that they had a pair of "electrical shoes" there through which the [illegible], before his rejuvenation was [illegible] complete, received most startling shocks.—Popular Electricity.

Warring Against the White Plague.

New York City, Boston and London have already cut in half their death rates from [illegible]. Why should not the smaller cities and rural communities, where conditions are more favorable, do likewise? No tuberculosis in 1920 is put forth as a hope only. Yet some are optimistic enough to believe that it expresses a hope that will not be long deferred, and every effort is being made to come as near as may be possible to its realization. A roll of honor has been established, including those cities and counties which are making provision for the control of tuberculosis.—Review of Reviews.

A Class For Ailing Pupils.

Miss Katharine Nolan is in charge of a remarkable class in one of the public schools on the lower east side of New York. The class is composed of pupils of all ages. The one thing they have in common is that they are all ailing, not ill, but just not exactly well. All one side of the room set aside for this class is composed of windows, which are kept open all the time. Outside these windows is a broad balcony, where the desks are moved for the [illegible] season. It is said that a week or two in this room help all the children.

THE NEW SLEEVES ARE VARIED—RAGLAN, KIMONO, AND DROP SHOULDER ARE ALL FAVORED

The modified kimono, the raglan and the set-in sleeve are all smart this season. Nothing could be better suited to the loose bloucy effects that are now so modish, than the raglan or kimono sleeve. The full length model is perhaps a trifle in the lead but many attractive frocks show the three-quarter or elbow sleeve.

Number 8120 is a costume fashioned of black velveteen; the vest and [illegible] and girdle are of figured tapestry. A collar that flares away from the neck in back after the Japanese fashion is a new feature of this gown; the [illegible] is another.

This costume may be copied in size 36 with 3 yards of 36-inch material for the blouse 3½ yards of 36-inch material for the skirt.

Number 8128 is a model in dark blue striped ratine with a collar of silk in a soft color. The effectiveness of the raglan sleeve is well brought out; another attractive detail is the belt. A straight little skirt slightly full at the top completes the design.

For size 36 this design requires 4½ yards of 36-inch material.

COTTONSEED FLOUR.

The Wonderful Qualities Claimed For the New Product.

A Texas writer says cottonseed flour is to be added to the nation's dietary. It has been tried, and it is said to be an excellent food. It contains 54 per cent protein, 7.17 per cent starch and practically no fat. It is alleged it has a nutritive value more than five times that of wheat flour, nearly three times that of lean round of beef and from three to thirty times that of many of the best known and most commonly used articles of food.

By the addition of cottonseed flour to the national dietary millions of dollars will be added to the income of southern cotton growers and the tendency of some of the wheat operators to interfere with the price of bread will be checked. To the discovery of the nutritive values in cotton the country is indebted to Patten, whose attempt to monopolize "the staff of life" led many scientists to make inquiries and conduct experiments with a view to obtaining a food that might be a substitute for wheat or an auxiliary of the wheat supply. That it should have been found in cotton is somewhat surprising to those who thought the possibilities of this wonderful plant had been exhausted when cottonseed oil had been introduced. Great is King Cotton, that can both clothe and feed mankind.—Los Angeles Herald.

The Three Georges.

There are now three King Georges—George V. of Great Britain and Ireland, George I. of Greece and George II. of Tonga. The last named is now little more than a nominal sovereign, but he is still on the roll of reigning monarchs. Since the late Lord Salisbury's last international deal the Tongan archipelago in the Pacific has been a British protectorate. The Pacific King George is very fond of playing cricket.—Chicago News.

Vegetarian Boots and Shoes.

An enterprising manufacturer has discovered a process whereby a passable imitation of leather may be manufactured from a vegetable product. The novelty owes its introduction to London vegetarians, who protest at the number of animals killed annually to keep humanity in boots. The imitation leather is being used for the manufacture of boots, shoes, Bible covers and a hundred other articles usually found in the art leather department.—Jewish Chronicle.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been supposed to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvenny Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large one being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claims one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable, from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally left weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is [illegible] for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, never wasting off the bad convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is [illegible] better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nervy troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life-saver. B'Well is a [illegible] killer, also a worm killer, [illegible] and [illegible] all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulvenny. Write for further information free.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

It is said that few newspaper men can stand prosperity, but that may be because so few ever have a chance to enjoy even a speaking acquaintance with it.

◆

If the Conservative administration at Ottawa should ever find the treasury in need of funds we suggest that it draw upon the golden silence of the Hon, Dr. Pugsley.

◆

A citizen suggested to The Times that the public library should distribute player-piano music without cost. Such a proposal might not unreasonably be regarded as a wicked scheme to depopulate the city.

◆

We are told that Paderewski lives in continual terror of the "Black Hand." He ought to and probably will have the sympathy of hundreds of men in this country who are in constant fear of encountering the "full hand."

◆

The army of our old friend Vic Huerta, which is now in captivity in the United States is not much for fighting, but is a very efficient eating force. It is costing Uncle Sam $1,500 a day to feed the captive warriors.

◆

In some of the States of the American Union, washerwomen are required to register with city health departments, and their homes undergo regular inspection for traces of disease germs. It appears that the activity of the "bug hunter" in finding new fields of endeavor is equalled only by that of the bacilli themselves.

◆

Accidents will happen even in the best regulated infirmaries. A trained hospital nurse not one hundred miles from Peterborough, who had been instructed a few nights ago to apply a mustard plaster to a patient got into the wrong room and laid it gently on the breast of a drummer who was recovering from a case of the "jimmies" The next morning the victim of the mistake discovered that a hole had been burned in his manly bosom about the size of a porterhouse steak.

DIVIDING UP IN AFRICA.

By the arrangement which Great Britain and Germany are reported to have made with Portugal for taking over the latter's possessions in Africa, Anglo-German relations are said to be vastly improved, although it is explicitly denied that the deal has anything to do with the naval programme of either power. It is nominally nothing but a commercial proposition, and the territory acquired will be divided into "trading spheres." The so-called sovereignty of Portugal will not be interfered with.

Germany gets Angola, a Portugese possession on the west coast of Africa, a territory more than twice the size of Texas, and Portuguese East Africa will be divided about equally between Germany and Great Britain. The purchase money paid by the two powers to Portugal is said to be about $100,000,000.

The overseas possessions of Germany are nearly doubled by the transaction, which will enable her greatly to increase her colonial ventures and find an outlet for some of her surplus population and surplus products That outlet has for years been an imperative necessity, and that it was found without recourse to arms is certainly creditable to German statesmanship.

For three centuries or more Portugal has held enormous possessions in Africa, but they have never been a source of great profit, and of late years the expenditures have exceeded the revenues. So the tidy sum will come in handy for the finances of the little republic.

This great real estate transaction has at least the appearance of being a square deal, and not a land grab.

That Terrible Fatigue Can Be Overcome

A Simple Home Remedy Now Cures Lack of Energy, Loss of Ambition, and a Feeling of "Don't Care

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition is due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barcelona, Mr. Frederick G. Meyer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose and indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25c boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE FADDIST KEEPS BUSY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The faddist is always in evidence these days, especially in connection with our schools. Then the trustees wonder why so few men care to go into the "profession" of teaching. No man with a dignity beyond that that of a fussy hen would care to be actively interested in such grandmotherly undertakings. Truly, this is the golden age of the faddist and it seems as if another follower of freak pedagogy were born every moment. One year it is manual training and every small boy planes and saws and files away until he knows how to mend the latch on the woodshed door. Later domestic science comes along, and the maiden of tender years is impressed with the importance of knowing about proteids and other wild flours until she hates the very thought of housekeeping. Then our educational wiseacres suddenly perceive the glories of nature study and pupils are exhorted to learn about birds and beasts and to study the meanest flower that flowers, until they have thoughts that lie too deep for tears. No healthy child is going to be worried into a love of nature. But this bank account business ought to be the last straw which will break the Toronto teacher's back. Are our schools to be regarded as infirmaries and orphan asylums? It is possible that some of these pupils have parents, although that consideration is not regarded by the trustees who are so anxious to distinguish themselves while in office. A boy receives more information about birds in a holiday tramp with his father than he will get from a dozen "nature talks." There are too many subjects already on the Public school curriculum and the superficial nature of the instruction imparted is too palpable in many instances.

Nor are our schools the only schools the only sphere, in which our faddists exploit. We have glaring example of a new line of activity in their efforts to secure the appointment of a police woman, just as if we had not already more men on our police force, than there is the slightest necessity for.

Common Sense.

SPEED OF WAVES

Over Seventy-Eight Miles an Hour Has Been Recorded

Interesting facts about waves were given by Dr. Vaughan Cornish in one of his lectures. In the north Atlantic, he said, waves had been measured, the largest of which was somewhat more than forty feet high, with a length from crest to crest of 500 feet. It was in the southern Indian ocean that waves attained their fullest development, and they had been measured there with a length of 780 feet.

In the Atlantic it had been found that waves attained a speed of thirty-eight miles an hour in a wind of about forty-four miles an hour. Speaking of the swells in the waves that run freely on the surface of the sea after the wind has ceased, Dr. Cornish said that during a storm in December, 1898, he recorded breakers near Bournemouth which moved at sixty-seven miles an hour and had a length from crest to crest of 1,000 feet. In February, 1899, he observed breakers on the same shore which had a speed in deep water of not less than seventy-eight and a half miles an hour.—London Family Herald.

When Kissing Was Costly.

The case of the people against Murline, heard by the governor of New Haven colony in council on May day, 1660, indicates the attitude toward unlicensed kissing in those times. It appeared that Jacob Murline and Sarah Tuttle had been caught kissing each other. Jacob tried to throw the blame on Sarah, saying he thought she had "with intent let fall her gloves." Sarah denied the intent. Jacob then admitted that he "tooke her by the hand and they both sat down upon a chest, but whether he kyssed her or she kyssed him he knows not, for he never thought of it since until Mr. Raymond told him that he had not layde it to heart as he ought." The stern governor, after duly lecturing the guilty parties on the enormity of their offense, decreed that "the sentence therefore concerning them is that they shall pay either of them a fine of 20 shillings to the colony."

THE LIBERALS' CHIEF AGENT

At the Conservative Central Office, Westminster, sits the man, Mr. James Percival Hughes, who organizes and directs the Tory forces. Mr. Hughes became chief agent of the Tory party in 1907, and the arduousness of the work may be gathered from the fact that he once confessed that he rarely found time for a daily walk. Mr Hughes has had a varied career. In the first place, he was private secretary to the late Colonel Fred Burnaby, gallant soldier and pioneer aeronaut, and after the latter's death was left trustee of his estates in Ireland on behalf of the colonel's only son, who has distinguished himself as the inventor of the [illegible] mono-rail high-speed system. Then Mr. Hughes was called to the Bar, but his high reputation as an organizer and his fondness for political work led him to his present [illegible] position.

SECOND SIGHT

An Apparition That Was a Messenger of Death

The third Lord Templetown used to tell of an extraordinary and really authentic case of second sight. His brother, Henry Upton, the second viscount, was with his regiment abroad when he and several brother officers saw an old friend wearing trousers and shirt only pass through the mess room to another room from which there was no outlet. They followed and saw nobody, and the sentry perceived that no person had entered.

Henry Upton wrote to his brother, afterward third viscount, to request him to go to their friend's lodgings in London and find out what he was doing at such and such an hour on a certain day. The brother in London complied and found that their friend had died, but not on the day he had been seen abroad.

Later the landlady was asked on oath as to the date and hour of death and whether he had died in a white shirt with a blue check. After some demur she confessed that her lodger did not die when she first stated, but on the day when his friends had seen him pass through the mess room.

It seems the date of demise had been falsified on account of his pension, which was almost all his family had to depend upon. And he died in a white shirt with a blue check, his landlady having lent one of her husband's to him on the morning of his death.—London Court Journal.

SHE WANTED LIGHT.

And So She Had the Windows Fixed Exactly to Her Taste.

The architectural feature of the new house that caused a decided domestic rupture was the windows. The man was in favor of medium sized windows, with small panes to match the rest of the house, but his wife insisted upon enormous sheets of plate glass.

"You are away all day and do not know whether I can see my hand before me at noontime or not," she said, "but I am in the house most of the time and must have plenty of light and sunshine."

So they had big windows. Before the carpenter left she ordered inside shutters put up. The family's first night in their new home was celebrated by adjusting two sets of window shades, one white, the other dark green, which served as a background for two pairs of curtains, one of silk, the other of lace. On the third day the man helped his wife to hang additional sash curtains, and on the fourth day he found a man tinkering with the outside of the window ledge.

"He is just getting ready to put up the awnings," she explained.

Her husband looked at the shutters, the two shades, the two curtains and the sash curtains and the arrangements for the awnings at each window, and then he laughed, but she could not understand why.—New York Times.

RUB THE OTHER EYE.

And Let the One in Which the Bit of Cinder Lodges Alone.

Nine persons out of every ten with a cinder or any other foreign substance in the eye will instantly begin to rub it with one hand while hunting for a handkerchief with the other. This is all wrong. The right way is not to rub the eye with the cinder in it, but to rub the other as vigorously as you like.

A few months ago I was riding on the engine of a fast express. The engineer threw open the front window of the cab, and I caught a cinder in my eye, which gave me intense pain. I began to rub the eye desperately, when the engineer called to me:

"Let that eye alone and rub the other one."

Thinking he was chaffing me, I only rubbed the harder.

"I know the doctors think they know it all, but they don't, and if you will let that eye alone and work on the other one you will soon have the cinder out," shouted the engineer.

I did so to be obliging and soon felt the cinder down near the inner corner and made ready to take it out.

"Let it alone and keep at the well eye," again shouted the engineer.

I did so for a minute longer, and then, looking into a small glass the engineer handed me, I saw the cinder on my cheek. I [illegible] tried it many times since, always with success.—Chicago Record-Herald.

HOW IT HAPPENED

The Explanation of the Automobile Driver and a Climax

After the victim of the accident was carried to the sidewalk the automobile driver turned his machine and came back and explained how it happened with considerable warmth.

"This woman," he volubly remarked to the policeman, "was entirely to blame. She ran around from ahead of the street car and deliberately put herself in my way. After she had dodged the coal cart it was too late for me to stop. I couldn't tell which way she was going, and when I saw that she was dazed and foolish I jammed on the brakes and tried to pass to the left, but of course she had to run the same way, and the consequence was that in endeavoring to avoid a baby carriage with twins in it and an old man who was walking with a crutch I suppose I must have hit her. But I wasn't going more than two miles an hour, and any woman who would dodge around in that foolish way and lose her head shouldn't be permitted to go on the streets without a bunch of guardians."

The policeman nodded.

"Come over to the sidewalk," he said, "and take a look at her."

So the driver went to the curb with the officer and looked at the unfortunate creature who had so actively contributed to her own disaster.

THE WONDERFUL TOAD BONE

All early writers attribute wonderful qualities to toads and frogs and the various parts of their bodies. They believed, for instance, that if a toad was brought into the midst of a mob or other large and unruly concourse of people "silence would instantly prevail." A small bone found in the right side of toads "of the proper age" was also believed to have powers over the various elements. "By throwing this bone into a vessel of boiling water," says Pliny, "it will immediately cool it, the water refusing to boil again until the bone has been removed. To find this bone, expose the dead toad on an ant hill. When the ants have eaten her all away except the bones, take each bone separately and drop it into boiling water. Then may the wonderful toad bone be discovered."

COLORAD DESERT

Its Stunted Tree Forms and Its Petrified Forests.

In places in the Colorado desert are stream beds where perhaps once in several years heavy rains in distant mountains will cause water to flow for a short time. In these dry water courses several varieties of stunted tree forms are often found. The desert willow, which resembles the willow with which we are familiar, though smaller in size; the val verde, or green tree, a tree which is a bright green from trunk to tip of limb in every twig, and the ironwood, so dense in fiber that it turns an ax's edge, are the principal varieties. They are rarely above twenty feet high and, like all desert vegetation, have not a leaf.

They are apparently outcasts from the two great tree divisions, deciduous and citrus, for they have leaves neither to lose nor to keep. These may be called the living dogs of the tree family. We will find here also the dead lions.

Not far from the mountain range we will come upon the remains of what were once extensive forests of gigantic trees, now turned to stone and lying as they fell centuries ago. The great trunks, perfect in grain, knot and bark fiber, cumber the ground in tangled confusion in those places which have been protected from the drifting sand, giving evidence that what is now a desert was once upon a time a tropical wilderness.—Travel Magazine.

Khartum.

Khartum owes its existence to an oriental form of treachery. When Khedive Mohammed Ali invaded the Sudan in 1820 he marched triumphantly to Shendi, where his troops were entertained at a banquet by the submissive natives. But while the khedive's high officials were seated at the feast they shared the fate of the viands and were themselves reduced to funeral baked meats. Full of fury, the army fell on Shendi and demolished it. Marching south, the invaders reached the junction of the Blue Nile and White Nile. With the conqueror's instinct they recognized that the strip of land, with its few fishermen's huts of straw, formed ideal strategical headquarters, so Khartum finally grew into the most sensitive part of the Sudan organism.

To test his knowledge further the teacher asked:

"They can."

"How?"

"If one stand on the other's head."

HE WON THE CROWN

The Ancient Story of the "Bloody Hand of Ulster"

The emblem of the Ulster steamship line is a huge red hand, from the wrist of which is flowing drops of blood. An official of one of the vessels of the line gave this explanation of the queer device:

"It was in the early days of Ireland, when James I. was king and when Ireland was divided into four provinces, that the king of Ulster died. He had two sons, who were devoted to each other and who at the time of their father's death were on the isle of Arran, Scotland. In those days the eldest son did not always succeed the father on the throne.

"They were brave lads, these two sons of the old king, and upon learning of the death of their father each planned to race across the channel and be the first to place his hand upon the soil of Antrim and thus become king of all the north.

"With eight men each they started off from Mulkcantry. On nearing the shores of the isles the youngest prince, whose name was Neill, seeing that his brother was in a fair way to become king, drew his sword, placed his left hand on the side of the boat and cut it off at the wrist.

"Quickly seizing the dripping hand, he threw it on shore and thus won the crown. Since that time, it is told, the bloody hand of Ulster has led to victory on many a hard fought field as emblem on the shields of the young king and his followers. Ulster's arms, whether in trade or war or sport or on a steamship line, is known by this sign."—Philadelphia North American.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THOMASINE'S CHOICE

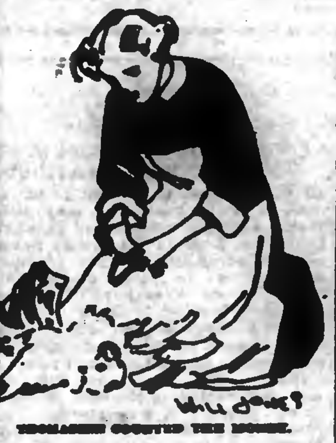
And How She Became Rich

By Clarissa Mackie

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

For twenty years Aunt Lucia Morgan had boarded with Mrs. Deacon Flint, and the two front rooms she occupied in that comfortable house comprised the only home she had known since she broke up housekeeping after her husband's death. She had saved the choicest of her furniture and personal belongings and either given away the remainder or sold them. She paid $8 a week for her rooms and board and, besides, several other expenses, for Aunt Lucia lived comfortably. She was known to have a snug sum of money in the bank, for the Morgans had been well to do and had lived on their interest money.

When Aunt Lucia died all her relatives, who were nieces and nephews, gathered to pay her the last respects. After the funeral they sat in the front room, which she had used as a parlor, and listened in silence to the reading of the brief will.



THOMASINE COUNTED THE MONEY.

The lawyer, Mr. Rhodes, polished his eyeglasses and adjusted them to his long nose. "Ahem!" he said loudly. "Of course you all participated in the generous distribution of Mrs. Morgan's household furniture some twenty odd years ago?

"All the furniture in these two rooms is bequeathed to Mrs. Deacon Flint in remembrance of her never failing kindness—all the furniture with the following exceptions: Bedstead and mattresses, mahogany bureau to match, night cherry stand, work table, morris chair and wicker rocker—to be divided among my four nieces—Jane Morris, Ann Squires, Fanny Ray and Thomasine Wells—and my two nephews—George Giles and Luke Howe—in whatever manner my esteemed friend Henry Rhodes may deem wise!" Once more the lawyer challenged them to dispute the justice of this will.

"Your aunt also wishes that several personal belongings shall be divided among you in the same way. There is a marble clock, a pair of vases, brass andirons, a china lamp, a looking glass and—her parrot—the stuffed parrot! You all recollect that this faithful bird was the companion of your aunt for many lonely years and that she esteemed it highly."

Thomasine was the only one who vouchsafed an acknowledgment of this tribute to the defunct bird. She never had liked parrots—she thought them noisy, screaming pests—but because poor Aunt Lucia was dead and had thought to mention her dead pet in the will Thomasine smiled and said they had all heard that the parrot was devoted to Aunt Lucia.

"The clothes and little personal belongings were distributed among her close friends before she died," went on the lawyer, referring to the will. "Your aunt has left a sum of money sufficient to cover all necessary expenses, and if there is a little surplus it is to go for the care of her burial plot. That's all."

"I thought there was some money," remarked George Giles, rubbing a sunburned hand over his head in a puzzled manner. He was a prosperous farmer, and he had promised himself a little pleasure trip with any legacy he might receive from Aunt Lucia.

"Here are copies of the will," said the lawyer tersely, handing around duplicates of the document. "You may keep these. You will note that Mrs. Morgan especially emphasizes the fact that each article and all it contains is to go to the one who takes it away. She also suggests that the distribution be made by choice, the eldest one having first choice. This, I think, would be very proper."

"Very well," said Ann Squires eagerly. She was the firstborn among them. The others signified assent with more or less [illegible] according to age. Thomasine Wells felt very helpless somehow. She would have liked to choose the mahogany work table. It was very pretty, with glass knobs on the drawers, but it was very likely that one of the others would want that.

Thomasine was quite poor. She had been apprenticed to a dressmaker when she was fifteen, and now she sewed at home in the few rooms she hired in a small town fifty miles from Little River. The other heirs were well to do farmer folk who had had many opportunities to visit Aunt Lucia and shower attentions upon her declining years. Poor Thomasine had had to struggle for a livelihood, and only her occasional letters and the carefully made Christmas gifts she made kept her in touch with her old aunt. When she had been a little girl she had spent much time with Aunt Lucia and loved her dearly, and now she was grateful that the old lady had even remembered her sufficiently to mention her name in so important a document as a will.

"As Miss Wells must return to her home early tomorrow morning," remarked the lawyer, "it would seem best for the heirs to make their choice now, and after the will has been probated the articles will be sent on to the owners. I have a list of the heirs compiled from the family Bible, and as Mrs. Ann Squires is the eldest she must have first choice of the furniture." He nodded to the lady in question.

"I'll take the bedstead and mattresses and all it contains," said Ann Squires hastily.

Fanny Ray smiled bitterly and bent her head to that of Jane Morris. "I knew she'd take that! I suppose she thinks the mattresses are stuffed with banknotes."

"Humph!" said Jane curtly. "It's my turn next, Fanny, because you always claimed you was the youngest, you know."

Mrs. Ray smiled sheepishly. "It's got to go according to the records," she said faintly.

"Now, Mrs. Ray," said the lawyer sharply.

"I'll take the bureau," said Fanny quickly. The bureau afforded much space for secreting treasure, and there might even be a hidden drawer.

George Giles looked at the work table, but he was a bachelor and shook his head. Then he chose the morris chair, and Luke Howe passed the work table and chose a patent rocker because the covering was red. Jane Morris fidgeted impatiently while they were choosing. At last her turn came.

"I wanted that morris chair," she said bitterly, "but as it's gone I'll have to take the work table, although I've got one already." She looked contemptuously at the remaining article, a small round cherry stand.

"I'll leave you the chair when I'm gone," grinned George Giles.

"Now, Miss Thomasine," encouraged the lawyer.

"I'll take the stand," said Thomasine forlornly.

"Now, the other things. Mrs. Squires, your turn again."

"The marble clock," said Ann promptly. Jane and Fanny exchanged smiles.

"The vases," said Fanny Ray.

"Lamp," said George Giles.

Luke Howe smirked at his reflection in the looking glass and said he'd take that, much to Jane Morris' chagrin.

"Andirons," she snapped viciously, "though I don't want 'em!"

"I—I'll take the parrot," faltered Thomasine as each one arose and began to investigate his or her especial choice. They were not unkind people, but each one was unconsciously greedy of gain and none of them realized that the youngest cousin was poor and that the inheritance that had fallen to her share was the poorest of the lot. After the distribution had been made and they had got over their disappointment at there being no money they would forget all unfriendliness and perhaps invite Thomasine to spend vacations with them.

Now they were busily peering and investigating into their different articles with little success. There was nothing but dust in the vases, and the bureau contained naught save a collection of soap coupons. There was a dead wasp in the clock, while the work table contained many sewing materials. It did not occur to Jane that Thomasine might need the work table.

They parted later, and the next morning Thomasine went home and back to work. Ten days later the legacy came by express—the cherry stand and the stuffed parrot on his perch. Thomasine placed the parrot on the stand and stood them near the mantelpiece and forgot them until one day she took in a homeless cat, which she fed and warmed by the kitchen stove. After awhile the cat wandered into the little sitting room, and when he saw the green parrot sitting on the perch he snarled angrily and flew at the unoffending bird. When Thomasine ran to the scene the floor was covered with bright feathers and the stuffing was protruding from the body of the bird. The cat, chagrined at this one sided battle, retired to a corner and washed his face.

Thomasine picked up the body of the bird and wondered if she might not repair the damage with needle and thread and glue. Then her eyes opened wider and wider, for the stuffing of that parrot was composed of tight wads and rolls of greenbacks, and twisted among them was a queer little note from Aunt Lucia:

Dear Thomasine—I know they'll all pick out the best and leave poor Polly to you, so I have made him worth while after all. You need all of this, and you can keep it without having any dispute over it. Mr. Rhodes knows, and you mustn't tell anybody but your husband, if you ever have one, but I don't see how you ever can, handicapped with that dreadful name. With Aunt Lucia's love.

Through her tears Thomasine counted the money and found there was $5,000, and her worn little face was glorified by a smile of perfect relief. Now she could close her sewing machine and buy a farm and raise chickens! As a beginning she closed the machine with a loud clatter. Then she hugged the strange cat and adopted him on the spot, and thereafter he waxed fat and lazy and never even blinked at the young chickens that ran about Thomasine's poultry farm.

And Thomasine never told a soul about the strange way her legacy had come to her until after she was married, and then she told her husband, for of course she got married.

Iceland.

Iceland is perhaps the only country in the world with a strongly developed literary history which remains in the same unchanged state of nature today as it did 1,000 years ago, when the characters of the great sagas roamed the rocky slopes of the picturesque island or when Leif Ericsson and his hardy oarsmen sailed the seas, even to America, several centuries before Columbus was born. Professor W. H. Schofield of Harvard university will head an expedition to Iceland this year and hopes to find much of interest connected with the ancient myths and legends.

STORY OF FOREST

The Actors Encounter With an Impertinent Critic

Many years ago Edwin Forrest, the celebrated actor, when in New York, was in the habit of dining at Windust's, a noted restaurant on Park row, that was a favorite resort of actors and literary men. It usually happened that Forrest would be joined by friends and that the little group would sit together at one table. On one occasion it chanced that an Englishman with a reputation for conceit and impertinence, who had scraped acquaintance with the tragedian, was one of the group.

Early in the course of the dinner the Englishman began to make criticisms which he considered pleasantries about Forrest's conception of certain roles. Encouraged by his own appreciation, he gave full play to his humor and concluded each of his impertinences with "Pardon my freedom, sir—it's my way."

To the astonishment of all who knew Forrest's irascible disposition he bore the Briton's offensive remarks patiently and seemingly ignored them as far as possible. When, however, the nuts were brought in by the waiter he took several cracked walnuts in his hand and, walking over to the Briton's place, jocularly snapped them successively in the face of that individual, sedately saying after each shot, "Pardon my freedom, sir—it's my way," and snapped him out of the restaurant.

A TRICK IN FENCING

One Highly Distressing to an Accomplished Swordsman.

TURNS A DUEL INTO A FARCE.

Used by a Weak or a Timid Opponent It Renders His Adversary Practically Helpless—A Case of Two Playing at the Same Game.

A long and interesting chapter might be written on the humors of duels which never came off or which in some way fell short of deserving the name. A case which occurred a few years ago in Paris, the particular home and fervent field of the habitual duelist, merits mention.

A peaceable looking gentleman was walking down one of the boulevards with a lady on his arm when out of a cafe sprang a man, who dealt him a violent kick. The victim turned, only to meet the horrified apologies of the aggressor, who begged to assure him that it was wholly a mistake in identity. Instead of insisting upon an exchange of cards and the other customary forms, the kicked man answered with much warmth, but admirable self control: "I cannot, sir, accept your expression of regret as sufficient. Your action may have been a mistake, as you say, but acquaintances of mine may have witnessed it and will go away and spread the news that I have submitted to an insult without avenging it. I must therefore and instantly slap your face with equal publicity." The other man becomingly assented, the first sufferer administering a ringing blow on his ear, and the affair ended with entire satisfaction on both sides.

Weak or timid fencers are sometimes taught by their masters to keep a more skillful antagonist busy by fixing the sword in one position, aimed straight at his sword hand, and then not moving except to retreat when pressed too hard. It is highly distressing to an accomplished swordsman to have to face a learner so instructed, for it means a great outlay of energy and wind to little purpose.

Comte de Dion once thus chased a retreating adversary across plowed fields for a mile and a half and finally under the wheel of a cab for the poor satisfaction of giving him a slight prod in the back. Dr. Clemenceau in his famous duel with M. Deschanel, after a swift and wearisome pursuit, halted, shouldered his rapier like a walking stick and strolled back to his original place, throwing the contemptuous remark over his shoulder, "And now, monsieur, I will await you here."

Catulle Mendes had a similar run after Lugne-Poe through the forest of St. Germain, which he ended by flinging his own sword into the bushes, with the angry exclamation, "I am willing to die from exhaustion by the roadside, if need be, but not from running after a poltroon."

A yet funnier incident was that which occurred in Toulouse, where a lawyer [illegible] was called out by a landed proprietor whom he had offended by a speech in court. He repaired at once to a fencing master, as he knew nothing whatever about handling a sword. This teacher gave him the usual advice about keeping his adversary at arm's length with the poised and immovable rapier, but strongly enjoined him not to retreat. It so happened that the landed proprietor, being equally ignorant, applied to the same master for instruction. The master, who was somewhat of a wag, gave him the lawyer's lesson in duplicate.

When the two men met and their seconds had duly placed them a long and [illegible] distance apart. For more than five minutes each fencer stood with his sword arm extended at full length, waiting for the other to advance. Then the seconds intervened, declaring that both had proved themselves men of honor and courage and that nothing further was necessary but to shake hands and be reconciled.

And this recalls the occasion when Lieutenant Randolph Ridgely of our army, while in the Mexican war was sought by two young officers who had quarreled and each of whom wished the lieutenant for his second. It was finally arranged that he should act as second for both. On the field, where the adversaries were armed with shotguns, Ridgely measured off a line of ten paces and placed them respectively at its two termini, cocked his own revolver and announced that he would give all the orders himself and in his own way and that he would shoot [illegible] of his principals disobeyed him in the slightest particular. Then came the orders, very deliberately uttered, "Present arms!" "Order arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Take aim!" Then took careful aim and waited breathlessly for some minutes for the command to fire. It [illegible]

[illegible] given in [illegible] and knew that it would be [illegible] hard to rebel. He kept them marching till they [illegible]. Then he marched them and bade them stand at parade rest till they had listened to a lecture on the folly of dueling which fairly made their ears ring. But he continued his dose of [illegible] with a few words of [illegible] and the [illegible] his friends from that time.—New York Post.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months' residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,100,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 32,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 5,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

The Rod Not Spared.

John Wesley's mother believed in birching children at the earliest possible age. Each one of her family was compelled to celebrate his 5th birthday by learning the alphabet by heart. In order that this task might be accomplished Mrs. Wesley, after leaving strict orders that no one should disturb her, shut herself up for six hours with the child and drove the letters into his brain with the aid of a rod. Mme. Quinet, a French contemporary of Mrs. Wesley, was an equally firm believer in the virtues of corporal punishment, but was not sufficiently strong to administer what she considered a satisfactory flogging. She therefore engaged a constable to call twice a week and flog her three children. If by chance they had not been naughty then the punishment was inflicted to the account of future transgressions.—London Chronicle.

Arctic Magnetism.

The campaign for the extension of our knowledge of the magnetism of the earth is to be extended into the arctic regions during Captain Amundsen's north polar expedition, which is to start from Norway this summer in Nansen's former ship, the Fram. An American observer, Dr. Harry Edmonds, has been selected to accompany the expedition for this special purpose. Amundsen's plan is to enter the polar basin by way of Bering strait and then drift with the ice. While it is not his special object to attain the pole, he hopes that the course of the drift may take him across or close to it. The increase of geographical knowledge is his aim, and he expects to be absent about four years.—Youth's Companion.

Down to Hard Pan.

Rev. Frank W. Patterson, of Calgary, during a recent trip east in the interest of Baptist Western Missions, used to tell a story of a minister who was preaching about the "Prodigal Son."

"And then," said the preacher, "he began to be in want, and he sold his coat, and next he sold his vest, and then he parted with his shirt, and then, my friends, he came to himself."—[illegible]

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Funny Things You Didn't Know About Our Nomenclature.

Surnames are not what they seem, and some of the most distressing contain a wealth of meaning.

Take, for example, the surname with which many people think they are cursed—Snooks. This, by no means, seems to be an imposing cognomen; but, as a matter of fact, it is a name of great antiquity, and one of which nobody need be ashamed. In reality, it is a contraction of "Sevenoak." It was first corrupted to Sennoca, which, in its turn, was corrupted to Snooks of to-day.

The original bearer of the name of Legless was so called merely because he was a lawyer. Originally, the name was spelled Laegless, the expression signifying "learned in the law." Strangely enough, Lawless is derived from exactly the same source, and signifies exactly the opposite to its apparent meaning.

Take the case of the surname Heart. It is really a corruption of Hard, which was a name given to show that the owner was a man of firm character and resolute bearing.

One must extend pity to the poor individual burdened with such a name as Gumbell. Yet those who possess the name may be interested to know that it, too, has nothing at all to do with any part of the anatomy. It denotes that its first bearer was a man of considerable importance and great power in the state. It is derived from the Norse word "gunbald," which itself has nothing to do with any affliction, but means "bold in war."

It is quite wrong to assume that the name of Smith is derived from the fact that the original bearers were workers in metal. In reality, Smith is a very fine old name, far more ancient than Anglo-Saxon. The oldest-known bearers of the name were brewers, and it was in use many thousand of years ago in mighty Egypt.

Such names as Sweeting and Gambling show how the original meaning has become corrupted. Swears and Swearing are derived from the older Swear, which comes from an Anglo-Saxon word meaning "honorable." "Gambling comes from Gamling, which comes from a Norse word signifying "old descent." The ending "ing" to a surname simply means "son of." Thus, Browning means "son of Brown," and Dunning, "Dunn's son."

Apparently, a very ignoble surname is Tremble, a name which might make one imagine that the ancestor of Mr. Tremble was a craven-hearted creature. Still, the exact opposite is the case, for the name is only a corruption of the ancient word "trumbald," which signifies "steadfast and bold."

Any individual rejoicing in the name of Mr. Earwig may be proud in the fact that originally the name meant the "boar of battle." The surname Mouse denoted at first a man of great courage; while Mr. Rede gets his name from the fact that the first bearer of the name was a wise person, who gave "counsel" to the king.

Goose, Gosling, and Jocelyn are corruptions of a word which originally denoted the "Goths." The first Mr. Gander was an individual called "the wolf"; while the original Mr. Duck was a "doughty" man.

No; surnames are not what they seem. For instance, Lind appears to be a somewhat charming name; all the same, it is derived from a Teutonic word meaning a "snake." The apparently quiet and harmless surname Wren comes from a word which denotes "rapine." Then, Fish, though such an innocent name in appearance, originally meant "impetuous." That common surname Haddock is derived from a word meaning "war."

Never judge a person from his name!

He Wondered.

"Why are you so pensive this evening, uncle?" rallied the old codger's favorite niece.

"Well, I'll tell you, Phoeny," replied the veteran. "While I was downtown this afternoon I had the pleasure of witnessing an evangelist being bored to death by a life insurance agent, and I've been wondering ever since what the good man was saying to himself all the time it was going on."

Some Blanks Too.

A RACE FOR FAME.

How Robert Barr Managed to Get a Book to a Friend.

Robert Barr, the novelist, was one day at Euston station, London, to say goodby to Dr. McKenzie of McGill university, who was taking the steamer train for Liverpool, thence to sail for the United States. As they walked up and down the long platform together, says a writer who tells the story in Leslie's, Dr. McKenzie said jocularly:

"Let us go to the bookstall and see if any of your immortal works are there. If they are I'll buy one to take across with me. If they are not I'll tell all your friends on the other side that your supposed British reputation is a sham."

The two walked to the bookstall and examined it carefully, but nothing with the name of Barr was found.

The novelist was annoyed and would have entered a protest, but the doctor claimed that that was against the rules of the game. Time was short, and Dr. McKenzie took his place in the train. Mr. Barr bade him goodby and then made direct for the bookstall to give the dealer a piece of his mind, but as he glanced casually at the array of books in the most prominent place he saw a row of one of his novels.

The whistle had sounded. The train was in motion. There was no time for paying anything, so Mr. Barr grabbed his book and ran like mad up the long platform. The energetic railway officials thought he was a belated passenger and determined to throw him into the train. Doors in the moving carriages were flung open, and officials yelled frantically, "Jump in anywhere!"

It took great agility, but Mr. Barr succeeded. Dr. McKenzie was leaning out of his window, thinking from the outcry that some one had been killed, when Mr. Barr came alongside and said politely, if breathlessly, "Mac, allow me to present you with a token of esteem."

Panting, but triumphant, Mr. Barr strolled back to the bookstall.

"Didn't some one steal a book from you a moment ago?" he asked.

"Yes," cried the indignant stallkeeper, "and he's bolted off to America with it!"

"Why don't you telegraph a description of him to Liverpool? It will be hours before the train is there," suggested Mr. Barr sympathetically.

"Description! I didn't see anything but his back and his legs."

"Oh, well, let it go!" said Mr. Barr airily. "It was a good book, for I wrote it myself, so I'll pay for it." And he laid down the money.

AT THE AUCTION.

Man Who Knocks Down Is Always Good Natured.

Great day. Folks have come from miles around because it is not only a sale, but a social event. On a platform in front of the barn stands the auctioneer, a merry, fleshy, white whiskered importation from Gilesburg, twenty-four miles away.

Auctioneer—Now, my good people, I have here in my hands a half a sack of—(aside) what is this, George? (to the multitude)—a half sack of beets. We have got a lot of dead beats up our way (loud laughter), but these are live beets. Who wants 'em? Who'll give me a bid?

Horrible Yap—Five cents!

Auctioneer—Five cents. Thank you. You ain't going to beat yourself on this, are you? (Laughter.) I'm offered 5 cents for this sack of beets. Who'll give me ten?

Old Man Hawkins (squealing)—Ten cents!

Auctioneer—Thank you, uncle. I'm offered 10 cents for this bag of beets, and they are not dead beats either. (General snicker.) Who'll give me fifteen? Fifteen?

Mrs. Budders is about to bid fifteen, but doesn't decide quick enough, and the words are taken out of her mouth by Bill Hoover, who says loudly, "I'll give ye 15 cents!"

Auctioneer—Fifteen cents for a sack of beets and all live ones! Who'll make it twenty?

O. M. H.—Twenty!

Auctioneer—Twenty! Make it twenty-five?

H. Y.—Twenty-five!

Auctioneer (very much excited)—Twenty-five! Make it thirty!

H. Y. (still more excited)—Thirty!

Auctioneer (after the usual agony)—Sold to this gentleman for 30 cents. All good, aren't they, uncle?

H. Y. (opening bag)—Them ain't beets; them's carrots.

Auctioneer—So they are, uncle, so they are. Carrots are better than dead beats, ain't they? (General titter of approval. He proceeds to the next article and the next joke.)—R. L. Leigh in Puck.

Washington Irving.

To Washington Irving more than to any other writer belongs the high honor of being the "creator of American literature." Irving was not the first American to write good literature, but he was the first American to write in a way to catch and hold the European attention. It was through Irving's writings that the old world was made aware of the fact that there was an American literature. Hildreth, Prescott, Cooper, Poe and others of the pioneers came in for a full measure of praise, but Washington Irving will always hold his title as father of our literature.—New York American.

Hub of the Social Universe.

"We do not hesitate to call the Covent Garden Opera House 'the hub of the social universe,'" says the London Sphere. "We have been in the opera houses of Munich, Dresden, Milan, Berlin, Paris and Vienna, and there is nothing quite so impressive in any one of them as can be found at Covent Garden in the height of the season. To visit Covent Garden Opera House in the season is to know life at its most magnetic point."

At the Writing Desk.

"My health and digestion are perfect, doctor," began the caller in the office of the medical man. "I haven't an ache or a pain. The trouble with me is that I cannot sleep at night."

"Well, if that is the case, sir," said the learned physician, "I suggest that you consult your spiritual adviser rather than me."—Lippincott's.

HER MUSICAL TASTE.

[Professor Louis Wilson says that each color harmonizes with a corresponding note in music.]

I cannot wear the old songs
I wore a year ago.
My last year's hat was in B flat
And sounds like "Old Black Joe."
My husband says to change it
And pitch it now in F.
I tell him that a last year's hat
Appeals but to the deaf.

I cannot wear the old tunes,
Although they're not worn out.
My dinner gown would make you frown
Without the slightest doubt.
It's too accordingly.
The higher notes are starved.
The soprano skirt I used to flirt
No longer can be heard.

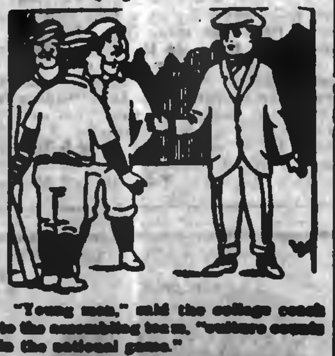
I dote on modern music.
To me it is sublime.
In last year's waist there can be traced
"The Good Old Summer Time."
And so I will not wear it,
Though it's as good as new.
I know you'd mock a ragtime frock
If one dawned on your view.

My new hat's a cadenza
Of wondrous tones and trills.
My husband swears in minor airs
When he looks at the bills.
There is a charm in music
To soothe the savage breast,
But men have hearts which music's darts
Find armor plate at best.

Still, I've made out my program
From overture to end.
For sleeve duets I've made some debts,
But all the chords must blend.
I cannot wear the old songs
I wore a year gone by.
They're now as old as "Threads of Gold"
Or "Comin' Thro' the Rye."

—Chicago Post.

It's Playing Ball That Counts.



"Young man," said the college coach to the scrambling team, "culture counts in the national game."

"What ye givin' us?" shrieked an old timer. "Old Pete Dunbar of our town that Henry James was a tavern clerk, but he played all the ball there was."

And a Bargain at That.

A little boy had got into the habit of saying "darn," of which his mother naturally did not approve.

"Dear," she said to the little boy, "here is 10 cents. It is yours if you will promise me not to say 'darn' again."

"All right, mother," he said as he took the money; "I promise."

As he lovingly fingered the money a hopeful look came into his eyes and he said, "Say, mother, I know a word that's worth 50 cents."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Was Suspicious.

A Scotchman at the dentist's was told that he must take gas. While the dentist was getting it ready the Scot began to count his money.

The dentist said somewhat testily, "You need not pay until the tooth is out."

"I ken that," said the Scotchman, "but as ye're about to make me sleep I just want to see how I stand."—Harper's Monthly.

Very Neat.

"What I like about you, dear," said George in a smothered tone of voice, "is that you're just yourself."

George was right, except for about a peck of some one else's hair, a wire [illegible], a small pharmacy of paint and powder and seven bunches of [illegible] only rivals.—Missouri Mirror.

The best known trip from Cork is the one to the blarney stone, which you will find at the very top of the 120 foot castle nine miles out from Cork. A fine old castle it is, too, once a stronghold of the McCarthys. The country all about it is beautiful, notably on the way out, around the pretty St. Anne Shandon Church, where for a sixpence or a shilling to the sexton you can hear again

The bells of Shandon that sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the river Lee.

Now, to kiss the blarney stone you should be of a thin, wiry build. Stout people find some difficulty because of the bending required, which is why one well known pastor admitted to his congregation that the best he could do was to put the handle of his umbrella to the stone and then kiss the umbrella. You should first remove your coat and jacket and anything that is likely to fall from your pockets when you are held upside down (women seldom attempt the feat), because if you do not they will drop down to the moat below. And be careful of your movements, for they will show you even now the tree that broke the fall (and the head) of the last man who slipped. If you should fall, of course it means death.

Two fellow tourists will grab you by your ankles; then you will sit back like a woman washing a third story window on the outside and bend down, clutching two parallel iron bars set in the granite, until your head is hanging as low as it can hang. Your head by then should be in the embrasure the top stone of which is the blarney stone. You will forget, if you can, what will happen to you if you slip, while you apply your lips to the top stone. Then you sing out and your tourist friends will pull you back by your ankles.

From then on you are qualified to hand out the blarney, for into your speech in future will come a beguiling quality that was not there before.

But do the Corkonians kiss the blarney stone? I put the question to one man there. A twinkle came into his eyes.

"Sure," said he, "what is the good at all to be kissing an owld gray stone when Cork is full of pretty girls waiting to be kissed?"

Something in that, too, we thought as we hurried for the train that was to take us to Killarney.

Johannesburg's Rise and Progress.

If any one gifted with prescience a generation ago had written out the story of Johannesburg's rise and progress he would have been regarded as a burlesque Jules Verne. For a city to spring up in the center of South Africa in twenty years, to attract a quarter of a million settled population and crowd an enormous municipal development within a single decade sounds certainly more like imagination than fact. So does the arrangement by which she farms her black domestics out in a suburb ten miles away and runs special trains for them morning and night. But one boast of the town's success rests on her natural throne of forty mile ridge 6,000 feet above the sea and her nine hours of sunshine a day is perhaps the mildest and most equable climate in the world.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Dickens' Desk.

A writing desk which belonged to Charles Dickens was sold the other day at the mart in Wellington street.

This is the desk whose reckless treatment by American railway porters he bitterly laments in a letter addressed to John Forster, dated Dec. 22, 1867. "Nearly every case I have," he writes, "is already broken. When we started from Boston yesterday I beheld, to my unspeakable amazement, Scott, my dresser, leaning a forehead against the wall of the car and weeping bitterly. It was over my smashed writing desk."

Among other relics of the novelist which will come under the hammer is the [illegible] chair used by [illegible] in his private [illegible] All the [illegible] Gazette.

Quit Sniffing. Stop Sneezing. Cure Your Cold Now!

Thousands of Cases Prove the Quickest Cure is Catarrhozone.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infect the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I have ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry, of Bugula Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—had droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat, and bronchial trouble." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months' treatment; smaller size 25c. and 50c., all druggist and storekeepers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

CITY AND DISTRICT

PASSING HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Parliamentary Committees.

Hansard shows that Mr. Burnham, M.P., is on the following committees: Banking and Commerce, Private Bills, Divorce and Debates.

A New Times Feature.

Mr. H. C. Brayley, manager of the World Syndicate Service, Ltd., Toronto, was in the city yesterday completing arrangements for some up-to-date plate features for the Times. This service will start here to-morrow.

Are There More Young Gamblers?

Three local young men were charged at yesterday's police court with gambling with cards on Sunday last. All three of them pleaded not guilty. The chief was not ready to go on with the case so the three young men were remanded for a week.

Eighty-Nine To-day.

Mr. Edward Green, 386 Water street, reaches the eighty-ninth milestone of his life to-day, having been born in County Meath, Ireland, on Jan. 30, 1825. His many friends will extend to him their hearty congratulations.

Proffitt Found Guilty.

Clarence Proffitt was charged with maliciously injuring a valuable deer hound, the property of C. K. Leeb, before Magistrate Edmison in the County Court. The Magistrate said that he felt that he must find the defendant "guilty," but he would reserve judgment for a week. He would also consider the matter of damages.

Taken With Appendicitis.

Mr. Geo. Kelleher of Campbellford, who has been visiting in the city the guest of Mrs. McNichol, 127 Romaine Street, ever since last Saturday, took suddenly ill Tuesday night and when medical aid was summoned, the doctor pronounced it appendicitis.

Parents Bereaved.

On Wednesday evening the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Picard, of Brownstown, passed away after a short illness. Death was due to pneumonia. In their bereavement Mr. and Mrs. Picard will have the sympathy of their many friends.

The funeral will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock to St. Peter's cemetery.

Only Temporary.

The Times has been asked several times whether the rafters on the new steel structure at the corner of George and Simcoe streets, which project several feet over our main thoroughfare mean that balconies are to be constructed there. A Times reporter yesterday asked Mr. V. Langford, what these projecting rafters mean. He replied that they are only there temporarily. It was thought that they might be used during construction work for scaffolding purposes. The rafters will, however, be sawed off before the building is completed.

Local Song-Wright Praised.

The Buffalo [illegible] of Jan. 19th, says, under a big heading, "We have a song written and dedicated to one by a subject of another country in the honor accorded to Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President of the U.S. The song, 'Bald Eagle of the U.S.A.' the words and music of which were written by Mr. Norbert Kendry of Peterborough, Ont., is a catchy piece of work, with plenty of tuneful music and enlightening words, praising the eagle 'that' guards the heritage of each brave site.' The song was written in honor of and dedicated to President Wilson by Mr. Kendry.

Mr. Matthews Re-Elected.

The inaugural meeting of the Water Commissioners was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. W. H. Moore, 310 London street. The meeting was held at Mr. Moore's residence because Mr. Moore, who is a member of the Board is ill. Those present at the meeting were Messrs. T. F. Matthews, W. H. Moore and R. Hicks. The latter, who was elected to the Board at the last election, was welcomed by the other members of the Board. On motion of Messrs. Moore and Hicks, Mr. T. F. Matthews was re-elected chairman of the Board.

Good Work of Salvation Army.

Last night a Times reporter had the privilege of taking a look through the local Salvation Army Temple, through the courtesy of that big hearted and efficient officer, Adjt. McElheney. The Temple has, of course, been written up before in the local press. Still, to use a slang expression, "when you see a good thing, push it along!" The big main auditorium is too well known, as are the grand results attained by the Army to require description. What our scribe was immediately interested in was the class of earnest and intelligent crowd of cadets gathered round a long table in a room at the rear. On the face of each was a look of happiness and contentment, whilst from all eyes of the cadets, now in training for the S.A. College at Toronto, shone a light of conviction of the usefulness of their respective endeavours. The library containing some 1500 books was most interesting and displayed good management in its care. Those who have spare books of suitable character could do worse than making a donation to this library. The Army is doing splendid work and should be encouraged.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE

Hastings holds a big carnival tonight.

Miss Gladman's Social Dancing Class was held last night in the Conservatory of Music Hall.

The opening of the new armouries at Norwood will take place on Wednesday, February 11th. Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes is expected to be present.

The musical clubs of Queen's University, Kingston, created a sensation last evening at the Griffin Theater, Belleville, where they appeared under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A.

Robert Thompson, a well known contractor of Belleville, of the firm of Thompson and Donahue, died at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning. He was taken suddenly ill Monday night.

The J. Finlay & Sons Co., of Norwood, are busy just now getting out some large orders for broom handles and cloth boards. Orders call for 150-000 handles.

It is expected that Cobourg Town Council will shortly introduce a by-law making it compulsory for a man to pay his taxes before he can vote at municipal elections.

YOU'RE CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS!—CASCARETS

Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Gas, Bad Breath, mean Liver and Bowels need Cleaning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get the desired results with Cascarets.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets to-night; put an end to the headache, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour, gassy stomach, backache and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. No more days of gloom and distress if you will take a Cascaret now and then. All druggists sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

OSK-KIC-HONG OCCURRENCES

Last Sunday Rev. Mr. Bell of Toronto preached on temperance.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Taylor have been the happy parents of a recently arrived son.

Messrs. Moses Marsden and Joseph Louisse of Alderville, have been the guests of Mr. Albert Whitney.

On account of deep snow the Chemong choir failed to attend the Sunday School convention at Wesley Church, North Smith.

Messrs. Alf McCue and H. C. Bolfain attended the Sunday-school convention at Wesley Church. Mr. Alf. McCue, of Chemong, was elected to the presidency of the Sunday school Association of North Smith and Harvey Townships, and also Chemong, while Mr. Samuel Woods, of Buckhorn was made secretary.

Miss Louise Beaver was laid up for a few days with a severe attack of neuralgia and toothache.

The Chemong residents are going to have a tea and concert and are expecting a big crowd. Come on. Mr. Peter Crowe of Alderville, will be present at the entertainment and give an interesting speech all in [illegible]. Don't miss him.

The next day after tea meeting, the Alderville, Hiawatha, Scugog and Chemong Indians are going to have a big council.

CLEANSES YOUR HAIR, MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL

It becomes thick, wavy, lustrous and all dandruff disappears—Hair stops coming out.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

MARTIN HARVEY IN "THE ONLY WAY."

It is a favourite device of the novelist who has chosen the fascinating world of the stage as the setting for a story to relate how the hero or heroine as the case may be, spring to fame and fortune behind the footlights in a single night. Those who know something of the patience and hard work which alone lead to theatrical eminence shake their heads sceptically when they read the roseate fiction. In one sense, however, Martin Harvey, who is touring Canada under the auspices of The British Canadian Theatre Organization Co., Ltd., is a living witness that real life can emulate romance. It is nothing more than the truth that the reception accorded to his first performance of "The Only Way" at the Lyceum, a theatre still glorious with the illustrious regime of Sir Henry Irving, established Martin Harvey at one bound among the foremost figures of the contemporary stage. But Martin Harvey would not have held this great position as he has, unless he had also tasted the vicissitudes and labours of apprenticeship. He had served a number of years under the aegis of Irving, starting at the bottom rung of the ladder, and after leaving "the chief" he had gained still more experience under other managements, including that of Sir Johnson Forbes-Robertson. But as a manager in his own capacity success arrived at the very first venture. This great landmark in the actor's career dates back something more than a decade, and in the meanwhile Martin Harvey has added the reputation of being one of the greatest exponents of Classical tragedy, to the fame he first acquired as a new star in the firmament of romantic drama. "Hamlet," "Richard III," "Oedipus Rex," and "Pelleas" have successfully been added to the list of great tragic roles in the actor's repertory, but still on every visit to the great cities of the British Isles in the course of his annual tours and in almost every season spent in London, Martin Harvey knows that the great public who have supported each new development of his genius, require with affectionate persistency that a certain number of nights shall be devoted to the ageless favourite which first brought the name of Martin Harvey to the front. Last summer was revived for a month at the Prince of Wales' Theatre, Piccadilly, the scene of some of its earliest triumphs, and with a special appropriateness Martin Harvey's last appearance in London before sailing for this side of the Atlantic was made in "The Only Way." There must indeed be some subtle magic in a play which has been received with enthusiasm by over two million people, from the late King Edward who saw it twice in its earliest days to the humble gallery boys of the great northern manufacturing towns who have learned to hail "Sidney Carton" as something more real and personal than a great character of fiction, in a word as a never-failing friend. Grand Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 4th and 5th.

SS. MONROE ON THE BOTTOM OF OCEAN TWENTY MINUTES AFTER THE COLLISION

Eighty-Five Passengers Were Rescued by Boats From the Nantucket, Among Them the Captain of the Ill-fated Monroe

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 30.—Forty-nine persons went down to death to-day when the Merchants and Miners liner Nantucket sank the Old Dominion liner Monroe. Wireless lists forwarded by Captain Johnson, of the Monroe, returning with the survivors on the Nantucket show:

LOST—Passengers, 25; crew, 24. Total, 49.
SAVED—Passengers, 30; crew, 55. Total, 85.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 30.—Out of a dense impenetrable blanket of fog the wireless early to-day sparked out another tale of a tragedy of the sea that had cost, it is feared, forty-seven lives. Booming along at better than half speed, the big Merchants and Miners steamship Nantucket crashed into the Old Dominion steamer Monroe, cutting her nearly in two. Twenty minutes later the Monroe was at the bottom of the sea. Boats from the Nantucket picked up 85 persons, among them the captain of the Monroe, all suffering from immersion.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Eighty-six of those aboard the Old Dominion liner Monroe were saved and 49 are missing, according to a report from the Norfolk offices of the line received here to-day by President H. B. Walker of the steamship of company. He had come over from New York yesterday to attend a meeting of the Master Pilots' Association, and was awakened by a long distance telephone this morning giving a bare outline of the disaster. A later despatch said that twenty-three of the passengers and fifty-five of the crew being saved.

Second Officer Gatley was reported lost. Among the members of the crew saved, the report said, were Captain Johnson, First Officer Horsley, Chief Engineer John Perkins, the first, second and third assistant engineers, an oiler and a steward.

ESTIMATES SHOW DECREASE LARGE VOTE FOR TORONTO

National Transcontinental Vote is Cut--Hudson Bay Line to Go On

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—The main estimates which were tabled in the House yesterday total $146,756,126 for ordinary expenses as compared $143,212,814 last year, or an increase of $3,673,311. Capital expenditure for the coming year is estimated at $43,945,000 as compared with $59,442,361 last year or a decrease of $15,494,301. The net decrease on the total estimates of this year as compared with last year is $11,820,990. The larger portion of this year's estimates are simply revotes of sums which were appropriated last year and were then unexpended.

Big Help to Farmer.

A striking feature of the estimates is the big increase in the vote for agriculture. In the last year of the Laurier Administration the total vote for agriculture was $1,646,234. The first year of the Borden Administration the increase was over a million, the total vote of 1912-13 being $2,703,400. The following year the vote was again increased to $3,381,725, and this year there is another increase to nearly four million dollars, the exact total being $3,987,687. Thus in the two and a half years of this Government's rule the appropriation for agriculture has been increased by no less than $2,300,000 and to-day is not far from three times what it was in 1910-11.

Aid H.B. Line.

The other chief increases in expenditure are for civil government subsidies to the Provinces, Dominion lands and parks, postoffice and immigration. There are decreases in public works, railways and canals, militia and for the naval service.

Amongst the largest votes are the sums for the carrying on of such great national projects as the Hudson Bay Railway, the National Transcontinental, Halifax Terminals, the Welland Canal, and the development of the national ports. That the National Transcontinental is nearing completion is shown by a decrease in the vote from nineteen millions last year to eight millions this year. For terminals and elevators of the Hudson Bay Railway there is a vote of four and a half millions. That the new Welland Canal is to be actively pushed forward is shown by the vote of four millions. Two millions was the vote for this last year. There is a vote of three million for the Quebec Bridge and seven and a half millions for the Intercolonial Railway.

A Bran New Story.

One day the little five-year-old daughter of a well known citizen was looking through a picture book, when she suddenly glanced up to her mother.

"Mamma," said she, with a very serious expression, "don't men ever go to heaven?"

"Why, of course, my dear," answered the mother in a surprised voice. "What makes you ask?"

"Because," responded the little girl, turning to the book again, "I have never seen any pictures of angels with whiskers."

"That's easily accounted for, darling," was the smiling rejoinder of mother. "While men do go to heaven, they only get there by a very close shave."

THE WEATHER.

Ne Temere is Hit by Court; Marriage Legal

Montreal, Jan. 30.—Judgment in the Hebert marriage annulment case setting aside as unnecessary that of Judge Charbonneau, was delivered by the Review Appeal Court of the Province of Quebec here to-day, composed of Justice Tellier, Delorimier and Greenshields.

The Heberts are thus legally married again and the parties are thus left civilly in exactly the same position as they were when the case came before Judge Laurendeau, and after the Catholic Church had pronounced their marriage as null and void.

Mrs. Hebert is not satisfied with the judgment as she would like a clear decision on her marriage and not a technical re-marriage, as she got to-day.

The Review Court's judgment does not pass on the vital question as to whether Protestant ministers can legally marry Catholics in Quebec at all.

FIELDING LIKELY TO RETURN TO COMMONS

Liberals Would Welcome His Assistance in Discussing Financial and Tariff Issues.

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—There is a rumor to-day at the capital to the effect that Hon. W. S. Fielding, late Minister of Finance in the Laurier Government, and who yesterday resigned from the position of editor of the Montreal Telegraph, will be back again in Parliament before very long. The report states that Mr. Fielding will seek re-election in the constituency of Yarmouth, N.S., which, it is stated, the present Liberal member, B. B. Law, will resign in his favor.

Dr. Helen McMurchy, as provincial inspector, finds fault with Brant county House of Refuge.

• HOW TO BEAUTIFY A •
• WEATHERBEATEN FACE •
• • • • • • • • • • • • • • •

(From Beauty and Health)

It's really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by dirt, wind and cold. Ordinary mercolized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst old complexion into one of snowy whiteness and velvety softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually, there's no discomfort. The worn-out skin comes off, not in patches, but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The younger, healthier under-skin forming the new complexion is one of captivating loveliness. One ounce of mercolized wax, to be had at any drugstore, is enough to rejuvenate any coarse, chapped, blemished, freckled, faded or sallow skin. Apply before retiring, washing it off mornings.

Many skins wrinkle easily with every wind that blows, with heat, worry, etc. An excellent wrinkle-remover, because it tightens the skin and strengthens relaxed muscles, is a wash lotion made as follows: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, one half pint. This gives immediate results.

KAISER IS CRAFTY

Sends Prince to Alsace to Win Back Loyalty of People.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—An attempt is to be made by Emperor William to win back the sympathies of the Alsatians after their recent irritation in connection with the violent incidents between the military and civilians at Zabern by appointing a Royal Prince as viceroy in place of Count Charles Von Wedel, who has resigned.

The Zeitung Am Mittag, which announces this news to-day, says that Prince Frederick William, son of the late Prince Albert of Prussia, who was regent of Brunswick until 1906, or some other Prussian Prince, probably will be selected and sent to Alsace in order to show the people there a mark of royal favor.

EDMONTON FIRES DEPUTY CHIEF

Edmonton, Jan. 30.—Deputy Chief of Police Davis, formerly of Toronto, who several days ago tendered his resignation, to take effect at the end of the month, was summarily suspended last night by Mayor McNamara, following the escape of two more prisoners yesterday from police cells. This makes four escapes in three days. It is understood that another reason for the Deputy Chief's suspension was an interview in the press yesterday in which he stated "he would not work with such a bunch as the present council."

There promises to be a big shake-up in police circles in the next few days and it is expected that Chief Carpenter, formerly of Montreal, will be dismissed within a week and be succeeded by ex-Chief of Police Lancey.

SIR JAMES SITTING UP FOR FIRST TIME SINCE ILLNESS

His Knee Trouble Has Practically Disappeared, Says Dr. Clark

Toronto, Can. 30.—This morning's news concerning the health of Sir James Whitney is of a very satisfactory nature, notwithstanding that he had a restless night. The morning's bulletin simply stated that Sir James had had "a restless night, sleeping quietly at present;" but Dr. McPhedran amplified this by saying that Sir James was better to-day. He was taking food splendidly. He was asked the condition of the knee trouble, and Dr. McPhedran replied, "the knee is better—nearly well."

Dr. Clarke stated that the Premier was sitting up to-day. He was pressed to say if Sir James was now out of danger, and replied: "At present, yes, but we never know what may happen."

Sir George Ross, the former Premier of Ontario, who is occupying a suite of rooms on the same floor as Sir James Whitney, is considerably better to-day. As was stated yesterday, Sir George is suffering from nephritis, an acute kidney trouble, but he has greatly improved during the short time he has been in the General Hospital. "His condition shows marked improvement," said Dr. Wm. Goldie. "He takes nourishment; is mentally bright; and the outlook is favorable."

ONE HUNDRED BARS TO BE WIPED OUT

Canada Temperance Act Was Carried in Welland, Huron and Peel.

Toronto, Jan. 30.—The Canada Temperance Act, passed in all three counties in which it was voted upon yesterday, Welland, Huron and Peel all going dry. The Scott Act, as it is better known, is a Federal measure and prohibits all bar and shop licenses within the county limits, except in the cities which are voted upon separately. Manitoulin adopted it a year ago, the first Ontario municipality to bring the act into operation in Ontario since 1890. The temperance forces claim that the evils which existed under the measure years ago will not now flourish, the difficulties which in former times had made the Act so hard to enforce having been overcome.

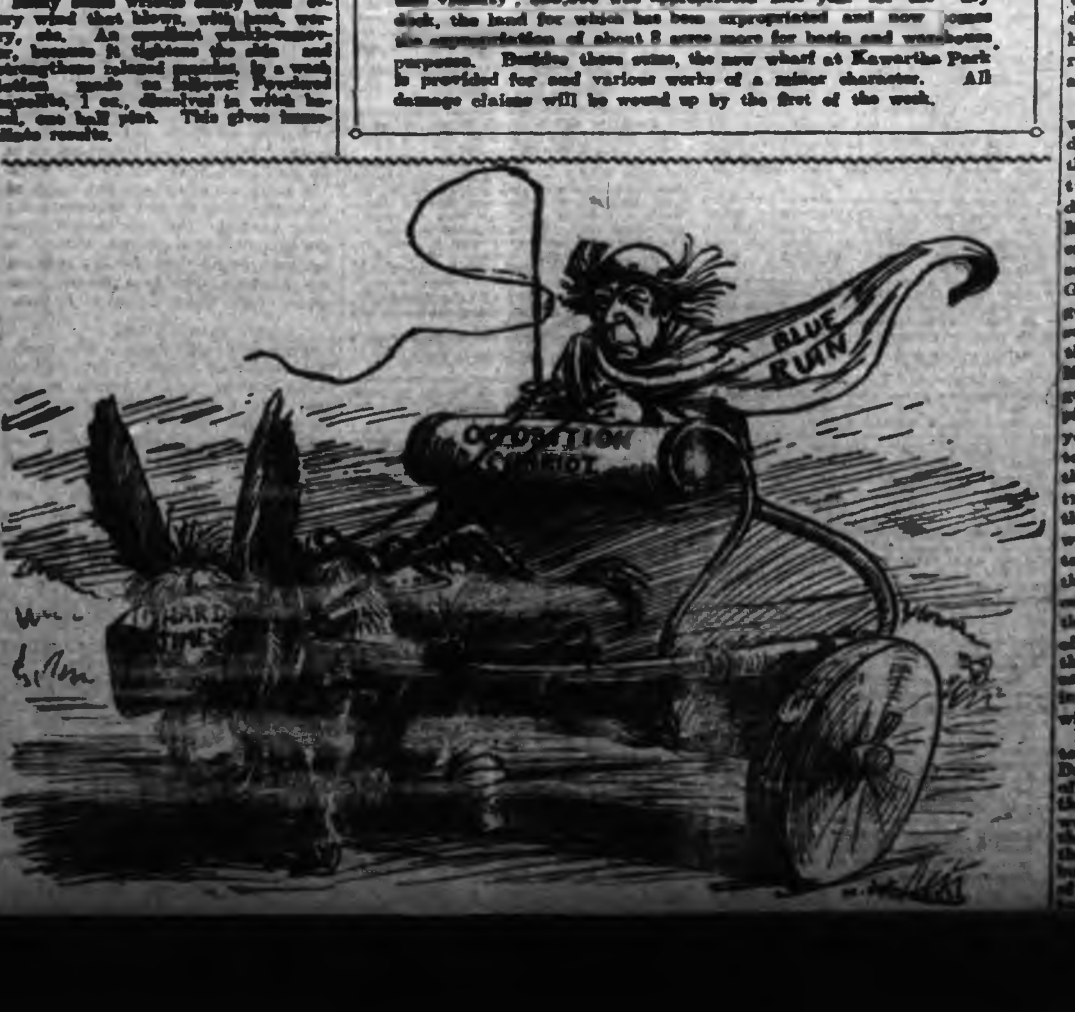
CARS MUST SEAT 67 OF 100

Wisconsin Commission Issues Order Expected to Be Widely Copied.

Milwaukee, Jan. 30.—No-seat-no fare advocates obtained an order from the state railroad Commission to-day which probably will serve as a model for street railway regulation all over the country. The Commission issued its order to the Milwaukee Trolley Corporation, a subsidiary of the North American Company, which controls street car lines in St. Louis, Detroit and several Wisconsin cities. The standard of service is established at sixty-seven seats for each 100 passengers during the rush hours and 113 seats for each 100 passengers at other times. Traffic policemen will be stationed at important transfer point to limit the loads on cars to the maximum comfortable carrying capacity.

THE DOMINION ESTIMATES

The estimates were laid on the table of the House of Commons just before the House adjourned on Thursday night. There are several items of interest to Peterborough in them. The first instalment of the new government building, fifty thousand dollars appeared as promised. Then there is $75,000 for the dam at Nassau (an increase of $25,000; $24,000 for dredging, and $65,000 for improvements to canal, some of which will be spent in this vicinity; $25,000 was appropriated last year for the dry dock, the land for which has been expropriated and now comes the appropriation of about 8 acres more for basin and warehouse purposes. Besides these sums, the new wharf at Kawartha Park is provided for and various works of a minor character. All damage claims will be wound up by the first of the week.



CASE PHYSICAL 'IMMORTALIZER' IS NOW SENT ON FOR TRIAL

Mrs. Sharp, Who Alleges Undue Influence, Gives Sensational Evidence

Toronto, Jan. 30.—In the whole history of the police court it is doubtful whether there have been more sensational revelations made than those testified to by Mrs. Harriet Sharpe to-day. The lady who is 70 years of age, and resides at 790 Euclid avenue, appeared in the witness box to give evidence at the investigation into the charge preferred against "Dr." Francis C. Wright, alias Theo Horos, alias Frank Dutton Jackson, whom it was claimed had caused Mrs. Sharpe to sign certain securities, with intent to defraud, so that he might benefit by them.

Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., who, in conjunction with Mr. W. H. Hodges, appeared for Wright, entered a plea of "not guilty" on Wright's behalf, and asked that the case be tried by a jury. Following the investigation, Magistrate Denison declared that there was enough evidence for the case to go to trial, and signed the order accordingly.

Prisoner Nervous.

Mrs. Sharpe, the only witness called by the Crown, was clearly nervous. Wright watched her closely during the entire hearing. He frequently interrupted and his lips twitched nervously.

The witness stated that she would be 70 on her next birthday, and that her husband had died eight years ago. She had been living at 790 Euclid avenue for the past forty years. She first heard of Wright through neighbors called McKay, husband and wife. They had both received letters from the man.

Mr. Corley here handed a letter to Magistrate Denison, but Mr. Robinette took exception to this.

"That is no evidence," claimed counsel, "and I object to the letter being shown in court."

Magistrate Denison ordered that the letter be withdrawn. Mrs. Sharpe stated that she met Wright on September 13th, when he came from New York. The McKays had gone to California, and she, therefore, took him in to her house, it being understood that the McKays would pay his expenses from New York, which were met by Mrs. Sharpe.

MR. J. B. McWILLIAMS ANSWERS A SLANDER

Had Nothing to do with Report that North Country was Full of Degenerates

Mr. J. B. McWilliams addressed the County Council yesterday in regard to Dr. Fernow's statement regarding settlers in the north district. Mr. McWilliams said:

It just came to my knowledge yesterday that some parties were circulating a report that I was responsible for the statements made by Dr. Fernow regarding the large number of degenerates in the Northern section of this county, and I desire to state that there is not one word of truth in the report, so the gentlemen representing the different municipalities will be in a position to contradict it. Those who are personally acquainted with me know the statement is false, for I can safely say the settlers in the northern township never had a better friend. I am responsible for the building of nearly all the roads in those townships, such as the Buckhorn, Cavendish. Harvey from Nogie's Creek to the Buckhorn road, Anstruther, Booth. Scott, through to Coe Hill, Wellington, through to lake, the Chandos roads, connecting Scott and Wellington roads, besides other short roads. I obtained the appropriations and superintended building them.

Another matter I carried through was worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to the settlers: At one time the lumbermen claimed all kinds of timber on the settlers' lands, and I disputed their right to any but pine. Mr. McGill, a resident in Chandos, cut a quantity of cedar which was seized by the Gilmour Co. Mr. McGill was a poor man and not able to go to law with such a wealthy firm, so I furnished the money and fought the question out in the courts and Mr. McGill won the suit. The decision gave the settlers all timber but the pine, and it is not necessary to tell you gentlemen what that was worth to the settlers. In 40 years traveling through this county I only know of two families of degenerates, and neither were in the north country. I would be the last man in the country to say a word against the people in the northern districts, for I never received anything but kindness from them, and I know I have the respect of the people there. I will say this, that the settlers in that section are as well read, as intelligent and will compare favorably with any district in the Province.

Dr. Fernow made a number of trips to the north country where he had Dr. Howe, Prof. White, and a number of students making an examination of the timber, and any report he made would be on information received from them and not from me. Not likely they met many University graduates, but I have no doubt they met dozens of men just as well qualified, if not [illegible]

Quebec, Jan. 30.—Mr. Edward Beck, the first witness before the Assembly special committee this morning, formerly the managing editor of the Montreal Herald, said he knew Mousseau, had met him first four years ago when the Herald ran a campaign to amend the landlords and tenants act. He would be able to identify Mousseau and knew his voice. During the last few months Mr. Beck had had at least 30 interviews with Mousseau beginning on Nov. 24, 1912, Saturday p.m., when he was called to the Duluth building by Mr. Sampson, whom he had previously engaged to conduct an investigation.

Sampson said he expected a visitor and he wanted Mr. Beck to hear what took place. Beck saw Mousseau come into the Montreal office and go into Sampson's private office next to the room in which Beck was waiting with ":L. D. Kelly" whose real name he knew was Keys.

Heard it Over 'Phone.

Kelly had on the table a box with a telephone apparatus. It had two receivers, one for Kelly and one for Beck. Kelly was a stenographer and recorded the conversation which came over the detectiphone from the next room where Sampson and Mousseau were closeted. Beck took long hand notes of his own which were a fair record of what took place.

There was no possibility of illusion or deceit. He recognized the voices of the men who were speaking. Sampson said:

"How do you do Mr. Mousseau, come in."

Through the instrument the witness could hear the chairs being drawn up when the two men sat down. Sampson said Labelle had been in a short time before and they had discussed the Montreal Fair Bill. He inquired of Mousseau what would be the probable fate of the Bill. He was anxious because he said that so soon as it was passed the promoters could get $300,000 for their rights.

THE FOURTH DIMENSION.

To Catch a Glimpse of It Just Get Delirium Tremens.

The majority of us are like brutes. We believe but in the reality of things. Science, more hospitable, acknowledges the fourth dimension and with it the constant parade before our eyes of things and events ordinarily unseen. The phenomena of delirium tremens forms a case in point. The shapes which the layman believes the patient only imagines are really seen and are rendered visible through the excitation of the pineal gland, which now is the rudimentary organ of what once was psychic vision. Alcohol stimulates this gland. The drunkard in his aftercups sees with it the hideousness of shapes which his own hideousness has attracted to him. For they are there, or, rather, they are here, about us in the fourth dimension, precisely as there are other shapes as gracious as these are revolting. Only ordinarily we do not see them. There are, though, those who can and do, and without being drunkards either.

Thinkers as sober as Jevons and Babbage go a bit further. They will, if you let them, tell you that whatever occurs in the privacy of a room remains photographed in it. A mere extension of this enables occultists to say that nothing has ever occurred anywhere which is not also photographed; that in the ether above us is the great picture gallery of the world.

In India, at Adyar, the chief lieu of theosophy, this gallery is constantly being studied. The results, occasionally bizarre, are sometimes trivial. It has been found that Herbert Spencer was Aristotle; Gladstone, Cicero; Tennyson, Ovid.—Edgar Saltus in Forum.

Tactful Truth.

"I appeal to Mr. Verity, whose truthfulness nobody doubts," said the outraged hostess, with a glitter in her eye. "Mr. Verity, do you think I supply my boarders with bad butter?"

The others looked eager attention to see how Mr. Verity would get out of it.

"Madam," he answered, with a bow, "the truth on which you compliment me forces me to declare that your butter is one of your strong points."—Baltimore American.

Bites.

The safest way to measure your maximum bite longitudinally is to lay it out on an ear of corn. To get the depth of the bite, measure it in a slice of watermelon.—Boston Globe.

And the best way to determine the capacity of your bite is to watch you eat beans.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Serious.

Mother—Oh, Billie! What has happened to your dolly? Billie—The doctor says it's a nervous breakdown. He prescribed [illegible].—Life.

THE LOT OF HARDSHIP.

It Is Ever the School In Which Greatness Is Taught.

There is a purpose in circumstance. Nothing in our lives is for naught. All things which have been given us, even our chains, are meant for our making—meant for the working out of our goodly destiny. Bunyan in prison, apparently cursed by sunless hours of solitude and loneliness, was a greater Bunyan than if he had been free to roam afield. The walls which shut his body in could not confine his soul. It escaped them and went out into all the world to lift to higher levels the hope and vision of mankind. The log cabin in which Lincoln was born lent its ruggedness and simplicity to the man himself and has become a shrine which men approach with reverent feet as to some holy place which love and truth have glorified. The hard lot is ever the school in which greatness is taught, and the best scholars are those who perceive the purpose of difficulty and do not grow bitter as they grapple with it. The very genius of progressive living consists in a capacity to appreciate the day and what the day holds, to find in all reasons and events a divine conspiracy to refine the soul and make it a greater soul, to hail hardship with grim gladness and bless the hills which must be climbed, to look with kindly eyes upon every little thing, to accept with complacence the small circle of opportunity until it has been shown that we are worthy to move in a wider one. Along no other path may we come to our best and largest estate of being and serving.—Richard Wightman in Metropolitan Magazine.

HIS QUEST FOR A WIFE.

John Newcomb Was a Close Observer and Was Hard to Suit.

The sister of Simon Newcomb, the great astronomer, tells in McClure's of their father's John Newcomb's wanderings in search of a wife, whom he had decided to select in accordance with scientific theories:

"John Newcomb stopped at farmhouses for his refreshment, and in each house, if there was a daughter of marriageable age, he tarried perhaps a day or even longer to make a study of the maiden. He always made himself 'handy' about the place, drawing up water with the great well sweep, bringing in firewood—doing anything that he could do and still keep near the daughter.

"Disappointment met him at every door. At one house the cooking was poor, at another the house was not neatly kept, at a third there was scolding or faultfinding, a want of harmony—and in all the maidens a lack of desire for learning or education. One young woman little knew by what a narrow margin she missed her fate. All was going smoothly till, when she was molding the dough for the baking pans, he noticed that a considerable portion of the dough was left in the wooden kneading trough. He asked her the reason for this, and her reply was that she left it for the horse because he was fond of it. She always did this, she said; there was plenty. 'Want of thrift,' decided the young man, and he shouldered his bundle and walked on."

The Old Fashioned Woman.

"What caused your sudden blowing in?" asked a veteran in Shade Land of a woman who just arrived. The woman gave a sigh that blew over a tombstone as she replied: "I am an old fashioned woman, and I did my work in a kitchen with a six hole range, a big sink, three long tables, two pantries and a dishpan large enough to wash a turkey in. Two days ago I went to visit my daughter in a big city and found her cooking for her family in a chafing dish, doing her dishes in a washbowl and keeping them stored in the lower part of the washstand. When I saw her get the bread out of a big bowl on the piano called a jardiniere and reach for the butter out of the window I felt a cold chill come over me, and when she made soup by opening a tin can and pouring out a mess to which she added water from the wash pitcher I knew no more." Then the old fashioned woman gave such a sniff of disgust it blew all the shades over into the next county.—Atchison Globe.

Trapped.

The man was neither neatly nor well dressed. He was plainly a tramp, begging, and had just turned away from one passerby when he saw a young man walking briskly toward him. "Please, mister," said the tramp, "can you give me a dime to get something to eat?"

The young man stopped. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"Can't get work," said the other glibly. "I haven't had a bite to eat since yesterday morning. Pawned all my clothes 'cepting these. Slept under a wharf for a week, and I don't know anybody in the whole city—honest, I don't."

The young man looked at the tramp's smooth face, over which a razor had evidently passed very recently.

"Who shaved you this morning?" he asked, and as the beggar faded away the young man grinned and walked on down the street.—Youth's Companion.

A Master Tactician.

"Why," expostulated the lady in the brown dress when the artist who had painted a portrait of her little daughter said the price of the picture was $100, "you charged Mrs. Crawford only $50 for the picture you painted of her Lucy."

"I am aware of that fact, my dear madam," the suave and politic artist hastened to explain, "but you must consider the great difference in the costs of the paints used for the hair of the two children. The scant, drab colored hair of the Crawford child required just a touch of the cheapest kind of pigment, but the wonderfully beautiful and luxuriant curls of your lovely daughter required a large quantity of the best paints on the market."

Then the lady in the brown dress smiled, took out her purse and begged the artist's pardon for having spoken rudely to him.—Chicago News.

The Battle of Chalons.

There have been so many bloody battles it is perhaps impossible to say with absolute certainty which of them all was the bloodiest, but the balance of the evidence seems to be in favor of the battle of Chalons, France, fought A. D. 451 between the Huns, under Attila, and the Romans, Goths and Franks, under the command of Aetius, the most renowned captain of his day. At the head of his [illegible] of savages Attila was having everything his own way, and it looked as if Aryan civilization was destined to fall before the [illegible], when suddenly, like the bolt out of the blue, Aetius fell upon the barbaric hordes and Europe was saved. It is estimated that [illegible] of the barbarians were left dead on the field.

Catalogued.

Two women on a train, seated together, held each a covered basket. From one a faint clucking noise proceeded, while from the other came now and then an indignant purr.

The conductor came by.

"Dogs ain't allowed on this train," said he.

"This is a cat," protested the owner of the purring basket.

"Makes no difference; dogs ain't allowed," repeated this stolid logician.

"Must I get off, too?" inquired the other woman. "I have a turtle in this basket."

"No, ma'am; turtles is insects, but cats is dogs," he told her.—Short Stories.

Rusty Steel.

A good method for removing rust from steel is first to rub the object with sweet oil and then after a day or two to rub it with finely powdered unslaked lime until the rust disappears. Then give it another coating of oil with a woolen cloth and put it in a dry place.

THE NEW SLEEVES ARE VARIED—RAGLAN, KIMONO, AND DROP SHOULDER ARE ALL FAVORED

The modified kimono, the raglan and the set-in sleeve are all smart this season. Nothing could be better suited to the loose blousy effects that are now so modish, than the raglan or kimono sleeve. The full length model is perhaps a trifle in the lead but many attractive frocks show the three-quarter or elbow sleeve.

Number 6120 is a costume fashioned of black velveteen; the vest and waistcoat girdle are of figured tapestry. A collar that flares away from the neck in back after the Japanese fashion is a new feature of this gown; the waistcoat girdle is another.

This costume may be copied in size 36 with 3 yards of 36-inch material for the blouse 3½ yards of 36-inch material for the skirt.

Number 6120 is a model in dark blue striped satine with a collar of silk in a soft color. The effectiveness of the raglan sleeve is well brought out; another attractive detail is the belt. A straight little skirt slightly full at the top completes the design.

For size 36 this design requires 6½ yards of 36-inch material.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvenay Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claims one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a lifesaver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits, destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. [illegible] is a splendid bitter, also a worm killer; [illegible] and [illegible] cures all kinds of diseases, [illegible] kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulvenay. WESTERN MEMBERS GIVE WEST BLACK EYE

Western members of the House of Commons, are ready to sacrifice everything else to their own immediate wants. In trying to stampede the House into favouring free wheat, etc., they implored the House to take note of the fact that the farmers of the west are on the very verge of bankruptcy. The rest of Canada is wondering what sort of people western farmers are if with all their advantages they have been going down year by year. That the greedy ones have dealt the west a bad black eye and have opened the optics of Canada East is generally admitted.

GRAND TRUNK AT PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

The Grand Trunk System has received word from the Chief of Architecture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, that the design submitted for the Grand Trunk building at this great event which takes place during the year 1915, has been approved. The information is of great importance as being the first of the proposed Canadian Railway Buildings that will be erected at this Exposition. It will in a way set the pace for the balance of the Railway Plaza in which this Building is situated and where all the other Canadian Railway Buildings are to be placed. The group of buildings therefore will be of one design and all will follow the Grand Trunk style of architecture, which is taken from the Spanish Renaissance and which follows to a certain extent the general scheme of architecture of the Main Palaces at the Exposition.

The location of the Building is in one of the best parts of the Exhibition grounds and faces on the south side the entrances for the ferries from the many towns and cities across San Francisco Bay. On the west side it faces the Machinery Palace. On the north side are located the beautiful Sunken Gardens, that will be part of the landscape scheme of the Exposition and on the east side is San Francisco Bay.

Estimates for the construction of this handsome building which will contain 10,000 feet of floor space, are now being secured and construction will proceed at an early date. It is the intention of the Grand Trunk to install one of the finest exhibits they have yet assembled for this Exhibition and one which will place before the people of the world Canada's illimitable resources, its scenic attractions and its haunts for fish and game.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You?

IF YOUR COLOR IS BAD, IF YOU SUFFER FROM PIMPLES, HERE IS GOOD ADVICE

Fine Results in Two Weeks

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash, and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt as if I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

MARRIAGE MADE EASY IN GREAT METROPOLIS

The Method of the Modern Matrimonial Agent

To the unthinking mind it would seem a strange proposition that London is the modern Gretna Green; but just as in the first half of the nineteenth century the Border village offered facilities for easily tying the matrimonial knot, so now scores of would-be brides and bridegrooms look with longing eyes on the great metropolis.

Before the passing of what is known as Lord Brougham's Act in 1856, couples who desired to be speedily married often found the English law far too slow or difficult for them.

In order to expedite matters a hasty journey to the Border, and an equally hasty interview with the historic blacksmith, was arranged—with results, let us hope, satisfactory to all the parties concerned.

But, alas! the stern Act of Parliament above referred to put an end to all such swift alliances, and marriage came to be treated in the slower and more stately manner befitting such a solemn ceremony.

Yet it is a curious fact, just as our ancestors hurried to Gretna Green, so do many residents in foreign lands regard London at the present day. To their anxious minds the great metropolis is the Mecca to which all who wish marriage made easy should undertake a speedy pilgrimage.

There are (1) those who wish to avoid the local publicity attendant on marriage in their own district, (2) those who, for a very good reason—often the absence of the very necessary documents — find it practically impossible to be married in their own country; and (3) those who are, through some legal regulation, debarred from marrying at all in the state to which they owe allegiance.

Of course, the latter class is by far the most numerous, and provides the ever-watchful London newspaper reporter with many a modern-day romance.

They also provide a number of more or less reputable "matrimonial agencies" with something more solid—in the shape of fees for arranging the binding together in legal ties of many an anxious couple of foreign origin. Thus there has arisen in recent years a widely-spread and regularly-organised system of circumventing the law.

Advertisements can always be met in certain foreign newspapers, calling attention to the advantages offered by the English marriage laws. The address of the marriage-broker's agent is given, and, when this gentleman is applied to, he most readily quotes inclusive fees, and guarantees to arrange matters so that the proposed marriage may be carried through in a perfectly binding manner.—Tit-Bits.

Couldn't Frighten Him.

An Indian maharajah once received Lord Clive, the famous soldier, in his palace court. Presently in sprang two whopping big Bengal tigers, as big as ever grew. They rolled and sprawled and romped all over the court, growled, spit and struck at each other. All the time the rajah slyly and sneakily stole glances at Clive to see if it would scare him green white. After a little the tigers were driven out. Clive smoked his cheroot all the while.

Birds and Lightning.

Birds are sometimes struck by lightning. Darwin records the case of a wild duck that he saw struck by a bolt while flying. It was killed instantly and fell to the ground. But birds seem to know instinctively that lightning is to be feared. That perhaps is why they seek shelter in thunderstorms. The sudden disappearance of the birds is, indeed, in the country one of the surest signs of an approaching tempest.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

FOR THE COMMON GOOD

It is the aim of The Times:

To exploit and advance the best interests of the people of the fair and fertile land wherein it is published, and to which it steadily devotes its efforts;

To stand for liberty and law, equal rights and good government, the greatest boon to a free people;

To foster and encourage private and public enterprise, and hold up the hands of every honest toiler, either with brawn or brain, in every field of activity;

To stand independently for the true interests of the city, the Dominion and the Empire, and for those policies only which make for the common good;

It aims to be excellent and not cheap.

EGYPTIAN GRAVES.

Bodies Were Carefully Kept For Their Returning Souls.

The great pyramids of Egypt are merely the tombs of kings. Although they are larger and much more imposing than any built in former ages, these tombs are constructed on the principle of all Egyptian graves. There is a chamber underground in which the body is walled up and protected against decay and spoliation, while above ground a mound of masonry or brick marks the grave and presents a place where the living may meet the dead with offerings and magic words which will secure to the spirit of the dead its daily bread and protection from evil.

An essential part of the Egyptian religion was the belief in another life after death and in some unseen way the personality of the dead man continued after death with the same necessities, the same fear of evil demons, the same work and the same pleasures as on earth.

On the graves of all classes food and drink were placed, and it was the duty of the relatives of the dead to renew these supplies. The Kings and great men founded endowments to provide for their wants after death. For these endowments farms and estates were granted to certain men, who thus became funerary priests and were enjoined to bring offerings of food and drink to the graves of the founders every day.

Thus it is that each pyramid not only contained the burial place of a King, but also presented on the side nearest the valley a chapel for the presentation of offerings and the performance of certain rites. The pyramids, with their temples, stand high up on the rocky plateau, and for convenience or some other reason which we do not know, a second chapel was built below on the edge of the valley. In each case the valley temple was connected with the upper temple by a causeway.

HE KNEW DE QUINCEY'S WORKS

Choate Was Better Posted on Them Than the Author Himself

Many years ago James T. Fields, the publisher, was making a collection of the writings of De Quincey. The essays were widely scattered in various periodicals and were often hard to identify. Mr. Fields knew Rufus Choate as a devoted student of De Quincey and wrote him one day asking his opinion as to a certain article. Was it by De Quincey or not?

Mr. Choate replied that it certainly was. There could be no mistaking the style of the piece. A few weeks later Mr. Choate received through Mr. Fields a letter from De Quincey denying absolutely and somewhat indignantly the authorship of the article. But Choate was not of the stuff to yield his opinion for a trifle like that. He wrote to Mr. Fields:

"I still believe that De Quincey wrote the essay, De Quincey to the contrary notwithstanding."

Doubtless Mr. Fields read the note with a smiling comment, "That's just like Choate's confidence in his own judgment!"

He Was Very Much Surprised When He Saw Her

By Ella B. Barker

Mr. Willard Lane, bachelor, returned to his house after business, sat down in the library and took up a newspaper. He turned over the sheets three or four times, vainly endeavoring to become interested in something, and finally fell to reading the advertisements. Then he threw down the paper and, leaning back in his chair with a bored expression, mused:

"This house is comfortable, but it isn't home. I have a mind to give it up and take bachelor apartments. I can buy anything I want, but I can't buy a helpmeet. I'd give one-half of all I'm worth if I could go back ten or fifteen years and meet again the girls I used to associate with. I'd propose to every one of them successively till I got one for a wife. There's Molly B., married and four children; Matilda R., gone, I don't know where; Edith Jenks is still unclaimed, but she was always sour as vinegar, and she hasn't improved with age. As for me, I'm altogether too old to get a wife from among young women, and I'm sure none but a youthful one could ever get on with me, and she would have a hard time of it. I'll sell this tomb"—

"A letter for you, sir."

Mrs. Parker, the housekeeper, handed him a missive that the postman

HE DREW HER TO HIM.

had just left at the door. He opened and read it:

Willard Lane, Esq.:

Dear Sir—We have to announce to you that by the will of the late Hamilton Bingham, which has this day been admitted to probate, you are appointed executor of his estate and guardian of his daughter, Marie Southworth Bingham. Your ward has no relatives, and it is incumbent upon you to provide a home for her. Very respectfully, your obedient servants,

KINGSLEY & KINGSLEY,
Attorneys.

"Well, well! Poor Bingham's gone! And left his child to me! Why didn't these musty attorneys say something about her age? Will she need a nurse, or is she old enough to go to school by herself? Let me see. I have had no knowledge of Bingham for a dozen years. I can't figure out how old the child is. But, any way, it will liven up this tomb to have any living thing in it. I mustn't sell it. I'll need it for her home. By Jove, that's what I'll do! I'll make a home for her right here!"

Going out to a telegraph office, he sent the following message to the attorneys: "Send Marie Bingham here."

During the evening Mr. Lane received a reply that his ward would be with him at 5 o'clock the next evening, and it was suggested that he meet her at the station. Calling for Mrs. Parker, he gave her minute instructions as to the preparations he desired made.

"Put in order," he said, "the two rooms adjoining on the west, second story—the one for a nurse, the other for a child. In the garret is a crib that has been there for years. Get it down, and I'll order a new mattress."

"How old is the child, sir?" asked the housekeeper.

"How old? I don't know. The stupid attorneys didn't say anything about her age, but I figure it out that she can't be over, say, ten years old. If she is I've been getting old mighty fast. I hope she's between six and twelve. We'll assume that she's seven, old enough for dolls, sets of dishes and all that. At any rate, I'll provide those when I go downtown tomorrow. Poor little thing! I wish her to feel at home. She's just lost her father."

"I'll see that everything is done, sir."

So Lane the next day sent home all that was required, including such toys as would please a child seven years old. There were three dolls and a playhouse big enough for the little girl to get into—that is, if she wasn't large for her age. By 4 o'clock in the afternoon the two rooms were in prime order and looked both comfortable and cosy.

At 5 o'clock Mr. Lane was at the station and watched the people pour from the train when it came in, looking for a woman with a little girl, but there was none such—at least none that did not go away at once. Lane was disappointed. He had made up his mind [illegible]

"I beg pardon, sir. Have you seen an elderly gentleman who appeared to be waiting for some one?"

"No; I have not."

"He was to have met me here, but I don't see him."

"I was to have met a little girl [illegible] She has not come, or if she has I've missed her."

"I don't know what I'm going to do."

"I have a carriage outside and will be happy to drive you wherever you wish to go."

"Thank you ever so much. I'm to go to my guardian, Mr. Willard Lane, No."—

"What!"

"Mr. Lane."

"I thought you said he is an elderly gentleman."

"Why, I suppose he is. He and my father"—

"Are you Marie Bingham?"

"Yes."

Lane looked at her for a moment as if dazed, then said:

"I'm the elderly gentleman you're looking for, and you're the child I'm looking for. I'm your guardian. Come right along."

Seizing a bag she carried, he led her out of the station, put her into a carriage and drove her home. The housekeeper received them at the front door and looked surprised at seeing instead of a child a tall, willowy girl who might have passed for twenty.

"Just wait here a few moments," said Lane to his ward. "I wish to be sure your room is all right. Mrs. Parker, we'll go and see."

The two hurried upstairs.

"We must get this out first," he said, taking hold of one end of the playhouse.

"She'd never get in it in the world," remarked Mrs. Parker dryly.

"Run it up into the garret."

The crib was next removed, after which the dolls, sets of dishes and other toys. Then Lane went down and told Miss Marie Bingham that her rooms were ready for her.

Mrs. Parker had been in the Lane family long enough to have taken care of Willard Lane when he was a kid. She was the only woman upon whom he could rely for advice, and as soon as she came downstairs he said to her:

"What am I to do? Will it be proper for me to keep her here?"

"In the first place, Mr. Willard, I understand she has no other home. Some people will think it right for you to give her a home here with me for chaperon, while some will talk. But if we're going to listen to what people say of us we'll be hearing something disagreeable all the while. If she's happy here I see no reason why she shouldn't stay."

"That settles it; she remains."

Marie Bingham was of an age to be treated either as a woman or one just emerging from childhood, especially by her father's old friend. The tomb, as he had called his house, seemed to have thrown off its sepulchral atmosphere from the day she came into it. For some time after her arrival she felt deeply the loss of her father. But youth is quick to throw off sorrows, and even during this period she was cheerful. Beyond this was the presence of a young girl. It seemed that the very atmosphere had been changed. The servants were better contented and easier to manage. Mrs. Parker's heart, that had been supposed to have congealed with age, came out to the motherless girl, and she was happy in having some one to care for. As for Lane, it seemed to him that he walked lighter, breathed freer—indeed, that the whole world had taken on a brighter hue.

Three years passed, years that Lane afterward referred to as the happiest of his life. From the first he was interested at having the direction of a young girl's education, the same as if [illegible] her," he said to Mrs. Parker. "She needs to associate with young men of her own age."

Mrs. Parker looked up at the ceiling and said nothing.

So Lane hunted up some of the younger members of his club and took them to call upon his ward. She appeared to enjoy their society, but it was not to be expected that she would fulfill the purpose for which he had brought them—that is, that she should marry one of them. Her twenty-first birthday was near at hand, when by the terms of her father's will her inheritance was to be turned over to her, and, though her guardian had trotted up a number of attractive young men, she had shown none of them any preference.

The day she was twenty-one Lane handed in to the chancery court an account of his stewardship. His ward surprised him by asking for a copy of it. He gave it to her, and she perused it carefully.

"I can't make this out," she said to her guardian. "What has been the average income from the estate since father's death?"

"About $700."

"How much have you charged me for board?"

"There hasn't been any income for board. It has all been needed for schooling."

"And how much has been drawn for schooling?"

"Nothing has been drawn for schooling. It was all needed for board."

She looked up from the paper. There was a revelation for him in that look. She put out her hand and rested it on his. He drew her to him and kissed her.

The next morning Lane said to Mrs. Parker, "I have a surprise for you."

"What is it?"

"Marie is going to turn down all the boys to marry the old man."

"Tut! That's no surprise."

HIS ONLY REGRET.

The Sorrow That Concerned Bichat When He Was Dying.

Over a century ago died Xavier Bichat, the famous physician and anatomist, author of "L'Anatomie Generale." He probably dissected more human corpses than any other man in the world's history. He established a record when he opened 600 bodies during one winter.

Of his nerve a tale is told. When he lay on his deathbed he called his colleagues to him and said: "Dear friends, I am done, but what comforts me is the fact that my case is a remarkable one. I have had unusual symptoms for some days which I have analyzed. They have greatly surprised me." The doctors sought to reassure him. He answered that he was under no illusion with regard to himself. "I shall die fairly satisfied with my life and go to the grave with only one regret, one great sorrow."

"What is that?" he was asked. "I am distressed that after death I cannot dissect my own body. I could, I am certain, have made some beautiful scientific discoveries." Then he sank back, murmuring: "I must not think about it. It won't bear thinking of."—Westminster Gazette.

Flounces and Pleats Distinguish New Gowns

By Madge Marvel

"WE are showing interest in pleats," said a prominent designer to me a day or so ago. "You will find them used in some of the best of the spring models. By that I do not mean that we shall adopt the full pleated skirt we used to wear, but I think you will find pleats introduced into the newest and best designs.

"Women are growing tired of the slash. They still want the close outline, and how can they have it without the slash unless they gain the necessary width with pleats? The pleats will probably be very modest affairs, with the fulness anything but obtrusive. The surest sign that the slash was losing favor came when it began to be shifted around, from the side to the front, and now to the back. And I predict its next move will be out and away."

It was my privilege to see some of the latest importations of gowns recently, and I was impressed by the draping. It has changed. In one of the frocks it was strangely reminiscent of the days of the polonaise, which the present generation remembers only from old fashion plates and portraits. Also of the overskirt, which succeeded it. One of these skirts had long overdrapery, and it was caught up in the back in quaint loopings. The narrow foot outline with the fulness at the hips will obtain for some months, according to the best authority.

It seems to me that we see more flounces than were worn earlier in the winter. One evening frock made for a debutante had the skirt of palest blue nearly covered by four deep and full flounces of pink chiffon which were graduated from a narrow one at the waist to a deeper one which came to the knees in front and sloped lower in the back.

Every one seems to agree that the Eton effect is to be popular for the coming season. In some of the imported suits it appears as the most abbreviated little affair one can imagine. But it is very smart and ever so becoming to the modern figure.

There seems to be general agreement among the milliners that the new hats are to be the same tiny things we have grown used to seeing and wearing, but if they are modest in circumference they are ambitious in height. They tower so far above the head that they make all women look more than "divinely tall."

Just now, when it is not a long plume sticking straight up in the front of one of these narrow-brimmed hats, it is an arrangement of ribbon bows, and, as the season advances, this will be replaced by tall flowers, such as the more majestic varieties of the roses, which will be wired to lift their blooms well skyward.

Maline has lost none of its usefulness and popularity as a mid-season hat material. It rises in a mist of bows and a whirlpool of fluff from a jet banding which fits the head snugly and at just the right angle, for woe to the woman who hopes to set her hat squarely on her head and attain unto that mysterious state called style.

All hats have a tilt that is evident but escapes the point of rakishness. It is simply the perfect angle.

Hat makers tell us the best hat in the world can be utterly ruined by not being put on the head in the approved manner. And now that the new high coiffure is displaying our ears, and our foreheads as well, we shall have to learn all over again how to put on our hats, for it is not to be expected that we can draw them on from the nape of the neck as we have done.

This same hat maker tells me that we are to wear straws of more vivid coloring. We are to find pleasure in a new shade of bronze-green and in purple, and that wood and taupe are going to replace the straw color to which we have long been faithful.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest.

Woman's Big Job

XVIII.

"MOTHER," I said one night, when I had slipped in for a little twilight chat with her before going home, "tell me, why do so many women know so little of the essentials of their business? It is their business, isn't it, the ordering of the house?"

Mother looked worried. I had spoken a little bitterly, I'm afraid, for my wife's inability to manage our little home systematically was much upon my mind.

"Don't be too hard on Mary, Peter!" she said gently. "Remember she's very young and she's never before come in contact with the discipline of work."

"I know," said I, patiently. "That's what I want to know about. It isn't that I'm blaming Mary, mother, for it's pretty hard on her, too, but I can't for the life of me see why her training shouldn't have prepared her for the systematic ordering of our home just as my training has prepared me for the financial maintenance of it. If I knew no more about earning money than Mary does of spending it judiciously we'd be in desperate straits."

"Yes," said mother slowly. "That's true enough, but men are a race of specialists, son, and women, alas! are not." She turned the log in the fireplace and the blaze leaped, coloring the shadows about the trim, old-fashioned sitting-room.

"Peter," she went on quietly, "some day when we wake up and learn how to train our women, from the lowest to the highest, for the tasks of daily existence, we're going to save a tremendous amount of energy and heartaches. Mary is the victim of her mother's foolishness. Every girl ought to have at least a bowing acquaintance with a trim gingham apron and a frying-pan, if only for the purpose of inspiring the respect of her servants. I feel exceedingly sorry for the woman whose servants are better informed about household problems than she is herself.

"I'd like to see every girl have a course in nursing, too. The most comfortable and optimistic influence in a home, I think, is a capable woman who knows absolutely what she's doing. She can put her finger instantly on anything that's needed; she can perform the humblest task with dignity, and when illness comes she can slip quietly into her niche in the sick room without disorganizing the whole house. Most girls, I think, expect to marry, and certainly not all of them can marry wealthy men, yet a woefully small percentage take the trouble to learn the philosophy of a kitchen. And there is a philosophy, Peter. The germ of the day's cheer lies in the kitchen. The man who eats a burned breakfast, quarrels with his wife and departs in a temper influences the atmosphere of more lives than his own. He may upset a whole office before his morning's over and start a dozen wires of gloom to singing."

I flushed—wincing under the memory of the first morning I had had to prepare my own breakfast. My office had been a hornet's nest by noon with everybody keen for trouble.

"It's a big job," said I, "housekeeping. I never realized it before."

"It is," said mother. "That's why I want you to be very patient with Mary. Ninety per cent. of womankind—and particularly the girl who hasn't had to work for a living—go through a trying period of readjustment after marriage. Otherwise we wouldn't have all these funny tales of the mistakes young brides make in ordering and cooking.

"Housekeeping isn't so difficult; home-keeping, Peter, is a vastly different art. It takes temperament and genius and tact to create an atmosphere of cheer and cover the domestic machinery so the family won't hear the wheels creak. And no house is a home without some vital womanly personality at the head of it."

As usual mother has given me much to think over. Why are men so smug about their job of earning money? After all, haven't women the big job of the universe? And if they have, why under heaven do they go to the task with no preparation?

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

SO you're dead in love with the dark-eyed stranger, are you, little girl, and you admire him because he is "so secret"? That strikes you as romantic and fascinating and altogether enchanting, does it?

Well now, little girl, I wouldn't work up any great romance about the dark-eyed stranger, just because he's "secret." What's he so secret about, for pity's sake?

Does he hold hands with you in corners, and speak very coolly to you when other people are around? That isn't secret; that's sly, and he has a very plain, practical, every-day reason for doing it—just set your mind at rest on that point.

He's either engaged to somebody else, or married, or he's ashamed of his little passing fancy for you—and so he's trying to make you think there's something romantic about being secret. Listen, little girl, make up your mind to this once and for all—there is nothing fine about being "secret."

When a man doesn't want to tell you his right name, or where he lives, or what he does for a living, or why he never asks you to any public place of amusement with him, or why he doesn't want to introduce you to his friends, that man is the very one person in the world for you to keep away from. He hasn't chosen you out of all the world to be the keeper of his sad, lonely, secret heart. You're just one of a dozen. That's the reason he wants to be so "secret" about it.

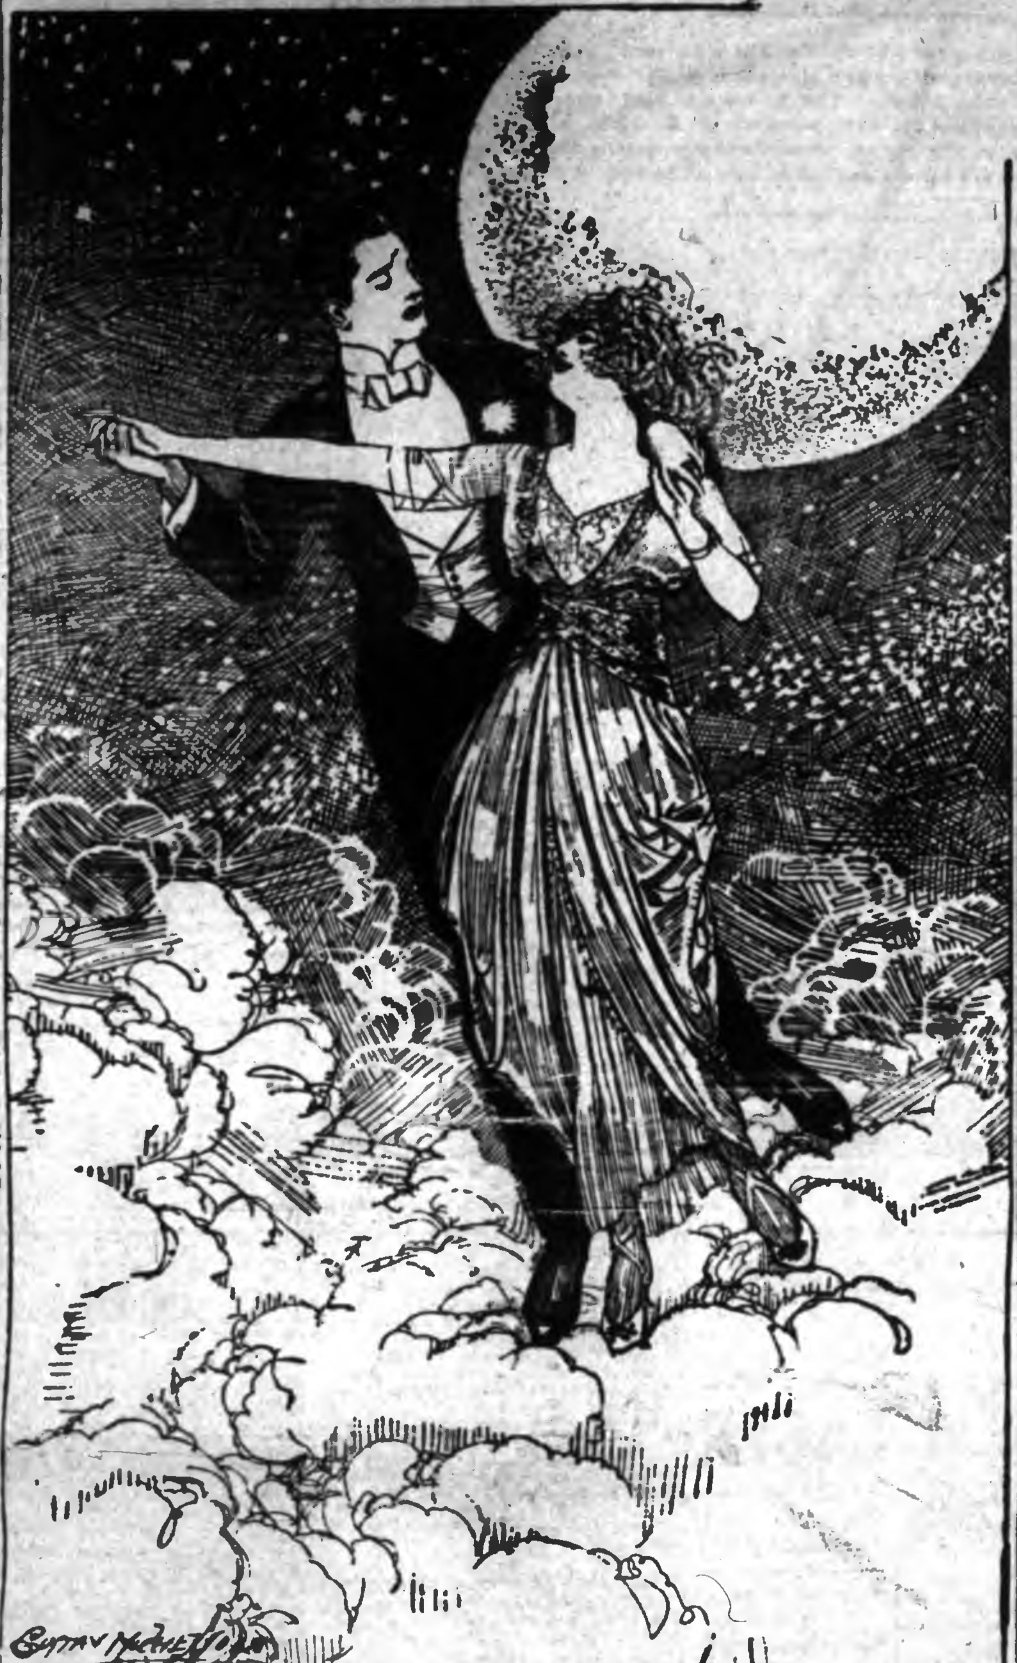
Get a sweetheart who loves you so hard that he can't help showing it every time he looks at you—a sweetheart who's so proud of you that he wants to go out with a band and tell everybody that you and he belong each to the other.

And let the "secret" sweetheart go sleuthing around in corners with some other girl who hasn't as much sense as you—[illegible] foolish [illegible].

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed care this office.

"IN THE CLOUDS" :: By Michelson



THERE comes a time in the unfolding of romance when the solid earth gets to be a bore—it really does. Of course, there always is a good deal of solid earth around, but in this crisis of TWO it seems to dissolve.

It is not exactly a case of being "up in the air." No, it is different. It is different from anything else that ever happens. It may happen in a dance. It may happen when the two are just THINKING of the dance or some other ecstatic moment.

Then vulgar, every-day things melt quite away. The sky stays in place and the constellations keep on doing business. But all that is usually under foot softens and softens until a joyous haze envelops and sustains the parties in interest. Pale sapphire, dashed with gold and pink, bathes the rock of all that surrounds the participants.

Of course, it is a MOMENT. One cannot live on moments for long. Mostly life is made up of INTERVALS. It is what you learn how to do with intervals that makes the great difference.

Great Novels in a Nutshell

"Water Babies"

Condensed from the KINGSLEY novel by ANITA von HARTMANN.

ONCE upon a time there was a little boy named Tom, who worked for a cruel, old chimney sweep called Mr. Grimes. One day Grimes was summoned to clean the chimneys in the mansion of a rich man.

Very early in the morning Grimes got astride his donkey, and with Tom trudging behind on foot, set out. An old Irish woman joined them and, as she walked beside Tom, she told him stories of the great ocean and of the fishes and flowers that lived in its cool depth.

Tom was not overfond of water, but the old woman's stories made him think how delightful it would be to wash off his soot. So when Grimes stopped at a spring, Tom dipped his dirty little face in the water. Grimes gave Tom a beating.

"Are you not ashamed of yourself, Thomas Grimes," said the old Irish woman indignantly.

"No; nor never was yet," said Grimes, and he went on beating Tom.

The old Irish woman spoke sternly: "Those that wish to be clean, clean they will be," said she, "and those that wish to be foul, foul they will be."

Tom was still thinking of the old Irish woman as he slid down a chimney in the rich man's house. Suddenly he found himself in the whitest, prettiest, cleanest bedroom he had ever seen, and in the bed, sound asleep, was a golden haired little girl. She opened her eyes and screamed. Tom jumped out of the window and ran. Everybody in the house ran after him crying "Fire! Murder! Stop thief!"

Pretty soon Tom left all the people behind. He saw a cool stream and he thought "How nice to be clean!" So he took off his clothes and jumped in. By and by some one found Tom's body, and they all said: "How dreadful, the poor, little boy is dead."

But Tom was not dead. He had become a little water baby and he was very happy swimming about in the water. He met an otter who told him of the sea.

"I will go to the sea," thought Tom.

As he was journeying down stream he saw two men fighting on the bank. Then there was a splash and a man fell to the bottom of the stream and lay quite still. It was Grimes and Tom hurried away as fast as he could.

Another day a funny thing happened to Tom. A net poked about among the seaweed, caught him up, and before he knew it Tom was looking at an old man and the little girl who had been asleep in the white room.

"It has eyes, Ellie," said the old gentleman. "It must be a [illegible]."

"No, I ain't," cried Tom, for he did not like being called names.

He bit the old gentleman's thumb and jumped back into the water. Ellie leaned eagerly over to look after Tom and slipped and hurt herself. The old [illegible] by [illegible] became a water baby, too.

At last Tom came to the sea and found lots of other water babies, and swam back with them to their home in the caves beneath St. Brandan's fairy isle. There he met a fairy called Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid. When Tom was good, she would give him a delicious sea lollipop and when he was cruel to the little sea creatures she would pop a cold pebble in his mouth. There was another fairy, too, whom Tom loved very much, and her name was Mrs. Doasyouwouldbedoneby. But Tom was so very naughty that prickles grew out all over his body and by and by Mrs. Doasyouwouldbedoneby could not cuddle him any more.

The next time Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid came to see the water babies she took Tom away to a schoolmistress to teach him to be good. The schoolmistress turned out to be little Ellie.

Tom was so anxious to please Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid that he set out for World's End to find his old master, Grimes. After travelling a long time he found Grimes with his shoulders sticking out of a chimney. Tom tried to wipe the soot from his old master's face and was so anxious to help him that the old man cried. The tears Grimes shed washed the soot off his face and loosened the mortar between the bricks so that the chimney fell down.

Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid suddenly appeared. "Will you obey me if I give you a chance?" she asked Grimes.

"I never saw you before——" said Grimes.

"Never saw me?" said Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid, "Who said 'Those that will be foul, foul they will be?'"

Hers was the voice of the old Irish woman who had walked with them long ago.

Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid sent Grimes to sweep out the crater of Aetna, and Tom set out for St. Brandan's isle. When he reached there at last he saw Ellie and they were both very happy to be together again.

When Mrs. Bedonebyasyoudid came, she smiled and said:

"You may take him home with you now on Sunday, Ellie. He has become fit to go with you and be a man, because he has done the things he did not like."

Tighten up Your Belt and Stop Hunger Pangs

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

DR. L. K. HIRSHBERG

HAVE you ever felt like the floor was dropping out of your tummy? Some feel in that way when they are hungry. Others feel an aching void when the pangs of hunger begin to gnaw. One well-known adventurer describes his sensation of hunger as "the hole to a doughnut," however that may feel!

Julius Caesar, you recall, had the diagnostic acumen to spot the lean and hungry look of Cassius, but many who suffer only with this torment of Tantalus nowadays believe that they have a tapeworm.

No less than several score of patients who came to me with a home-made diagnosis of "tapeworms" were found to be afflicted only with a stomach which sang this song of victualary desire.

The sea hath bounds, but deep desire has, like these Gargantuan appetites none at all. Such appetites are pathological, true enough, but the cries of famished anguish from their inner man are the same as those of the wistful Cassius or the garret-fed poet.

Hunger has been a moot point between those who occasionally suffer it and those who are always investigating it. The experimenter, among his crucibles and white rats, held it to be one thing and the psychologist, amid his introspections, with a few pooh-poohs, maintained it to be otherwise.

Comes now Prof. W. B. Cannon of Harvard University, with a gem of perfect ray genius. He has cleared up, for the nonce, the mystery of hunger.

Have you ever noticed how hunters and "wanderlusters" who must needs tramp great distances often go for days without much food or water? They squelch the cries of the inner man by pulling their belts tight!

The very instant these experienced travellers feel the pangs of hunger bothering them they pull their belts up a few notches and tighten their bands.

Prof. Cannon and his students, in a brilliant series of experiments upon animals first and then upon human volunteers from among themselves, discovered that hunger was only manifested when the muscles of the stomach became busy.

In a word, movements by the empty stomach make themselves felt as hunger. When you become aware of a prodding appetite, an examination by the X-rays or by the methods of Prof. Cannon will show the walls of your stomach gyrating in a veritable turkey-trot or Argentine tango.

The poor fellow in the bread-line and the woman toiler with her tenement children have learned by experience that an annoying appetite can be squeezed out of existence merely by strapping up the belly or tightening up the corsets.

Young girls often become thin, anaemic and hollow-looking because they have driven away those signs of the appetite which tell of hunger, by tight lacing and the wearing of corsets two sizes too small.

As the Avon bard phrases this idea: "Why she does hang on him as if increase of appetite had grown by what it fed on."

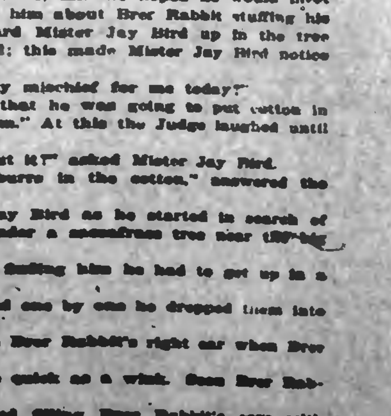
Daddy's Good Night Story



By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

AFTER Judge Bear went down the road he came to a soft, mossy bank and sat down to rest. It was Friday, the day that Mister Jay Bird is always up to mischief, and he hoped he would meet that saucy fellow so that he could tell him about Brer Rabbit stuffing his ears with cotton. By and by he heard Mister Jay Bird up in the tree singing. The Judge coughed very loud; this made Mister Jay Bird notice him.

"Hello, Judge," he began, "got any mischief for me today?"

"Brer Rabbit was just telling me that he was going to put cotton in his ears so that no one could tickle him." At this the Judge laughed until he had to hold his sides.

"What do you want me to do about it?" asked Mister Jay Bird.

"I thought you might put some burrs in the cotton," answered the Judge.

"Bright idea!" exclaimed Mister Jay Bird as he started in search of Brer Rabbit. He found him asleep under a sassafras tree near the big briar patch.

Mister Jay Bird was so tickled at finding him he had to get up in a tree and laugh and laugh.

Then he gathered a lot of burrs and one by one he dropped them into the cotton in Brer Rabbit's ears.

He was putting a great big burr in Brer Rabbit's right ear when Brer Rabbit sneezed.

Mister Jay Bird jumped into a tree quick as a wink. Soon Brer Rabbit was asleep again.

Once more Mister Jay Bird started filling Brer Rabbit's ears with burrs. He turned over in his sleep and this made Mister Jay Bird hop into the tree again. By and bye Brer Rabbit's ears were full of burrs and Mister Jay Bird flew high up in a hickory tree and waited to see what would happen.

He had not long to wait, for soon Brer Rabbit got up and started for home. He was so tired and sleepy he forgot all about the cotton in his ears and he did not know about the burrs.

As he passed by Mrs. Squirrel's house she poked out the window.

"Oh! look!" she exclaimed to her husband. Then he looked out of the window and began to laugh.

"What are you laughing at?"

"We just happened to think of something!" exclaimed Mrs. Squirrel.

Brer Rabbit went down the road wondering and wondering what was the matter.

DEATH OF SCROOGE

A little book written by an anonymous author in the year 1870 has been discovered in an old London bookstall by a writer in the Dickensian. One chapter in the book gives a sequel [illegible] account of the last hours of Ebenezer Scrooge. [illegible] "A Christmas Carol." [illegible] as good a man, as the good old city, town or borough in the good old world."

The closing words of this chapter on "The Death of Scrooge" are as follows:

He retired from business after that memorable Christmas eve, and in his place, he placed his nephew, making only one condition—that every Christmas Eve was to be spent in as jolly a manner as he had himself [illegible] shown to others as he has experienced himself. [illegible] Scrooge had gone mad. What a glorious madness! His will, strange to say, particularized his last bequest [illegible] one of the legacies to Bob Cratchit's wife, and also stated how a plain but very pretty stone which stood over his grave should be inscribed:

In Memory of SCROOGE,
(Relic of the firm Scrooge & Marley).
A hard, grasping man in earlier life, he lived to see his folly, and live for others.
His life, a lesson to all who read,
Became most changed on Christmas Eve.

ATE A WHOLE SHEEP.

One of the Feats of Nicholas Wood, a Famous Glutton.

The following account of a man named Nicholas Wood, famed for his gluttony, was written by John Taylor, the "water poet" of the seventeenth century:

Nicholas Wood was a Kentish yeoman. "Be it known to all men to whom these presents shall come," writes John Taylor, "that I, John Taylor, waterman of St. Savior's in Southwark, will, with plain truth, here and thereafter, treat of the remarkable actions of Nicholas Wood.

"He hath eaten a whole sheep at one meal; pardon me! I think he left the skin, the wool and bones; and presently after he hath swallowed three pecks of damsons. Two loins of mutton and one loin of veal are but three sprats to him. Once at Sir William St. Ledger's house, so valiant and staunch of tooth he showed himself, that he ate as much as would suffice thirty men, and afterwards he slept eight hours.

"One morning I sent for him to the inn to eat breakfast. He had already eaten one pottle of milk, one pottle of pottage, and bread, butter, and cheese. He gave me thanks and said that if he had known any gentleman would have invited him to breakfast he would have spared his meal at home. Nevertheless he would do me the courtesy to show me some small cast of his office. Whereupon I summoned the hostess and commanded that all the victuals in the house be laid before my guest.

"The inn was slenderly provided, but six-penny loaves were mounted two stories high like a rampart, three sixpenny veal pies, one pound of sweet butter, and a number of other dishes were set out, all of which were quickly brought to nothing."

How Hogs of This Breed Get Down a Steep Hill.

The group on the porch was talking about razorback hogs, and the storekeeper was telling a story.

"There was a feller travelin' through here," he said. "He was a stranger in these parts. One day he come across a bunch o' hawgs that had big slits in their ears. He figgered at them slits. They was too big fer brands. What else could they be? After a bit a native come down the trail. 'Jest lookin' at them hawgs,' said the stranger. 'You was,' says the native. 'D'ye min' tellin' me what them big slits in their ears is fer?' said the stranger. 'Not at all,' says the native. 'Have you noticed these hills?' 'What d'ye mean?' 'Noticed how steep they is?' 'Yes, I have.' 'Waal,' says the native, 'that's it. We have to put them slits in the hawgs' ears so they kin stick their hind legs through 'em an' rough lock themselves down these hills to keep from killin' themselves.'"

There was a salvo of very hearty outdoor laughter at this, and Mr. Antwine stirred behind his newspaper.

"That remin's me of one they use to tell down on the Arkansas line," he said. "There was a feller goin' through there too. He saw a drove o' razorbacks carryin' on mighty queer. There was about twenty o' 'em, an' they acted like they was crazy. They would run fust to one tree an' then to another, tryin' to climb it. Then they would spin aroun' on their noses, crack their tails an' squeal in the most plaintive way you ever heard. The traveler watched them hawgs fer fifteen minutes, an' the more he saw o' 'em the more they puzzled him. Finally he went on through the woods till he come to a house. There was a man out in front. He was baskin' in the sun. 'Is them your hawgs up there in the hills?' the stranger asked. 'Yep,' says the native. At that the traveler stepped up an' looked his man in the eye. 'Say,' he said, 'what in the Sam Hill's the matter with them hawgs? The native kin' o' half smiled. 'They does act queer, don't they?' he says. 'I should say they does.' 'Waal, it's this a-way,' said the native. 'We had a hard winter in here this time, an' there was no food in the hills for them hawgs. I had to let 'em have corn. Along late in the winter I tuk such a bad col' I couldn't holler pig-ooey any more. I had to call 'em up by hittin' the corncrib with a ax handle, an' now,' he says, lookin' back up the hill, 'them dern woodpeckers is settin' 'em crazy.'"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Passing It On.

The clerk filled out the marriage license and handed it over.

"Thank you," said the young man.

"Hold on! That's $2."

"Two dollars!"

"Yes. Did you suppose we gave these things away?"

"I certainly did. Charging a man $2 for a sheet of paper that didn't cost the county more than a nickel at the outside is robbery. Have I got to pay it?"

"You'll pay it or you'll hand back that document."

"All right," said the young man, taking a bill out of his pocket, tendering it to the clerk and waiting for his change, "but I can tell you right now you ain't robbin' me. You're robbin' the preacher. He'll get just $2 less than I was goin' to give him."

Pocketing the change and tilting his hat back on his head, he stalked out of the office with the air of a man who had been imposed upon, but who knew how to get even.—Chicago Tribune.

Observatory Without Telescopes.

The Carnegie observatory on Mount Wilson, in California, is of white canvas, like some huge ark. You look for telescopes inside, but in vain; a series of mirrors appear instead, and it is the third of them that does the magnifying instead of the usual telescope tube. Visitors are accommodated in chalets, a little house being apportioned to each guest. Observations have been carried on since April, 1904, and every day a photoheliograph is taken and several other pictures by means of the spectroheliograph.—London Globe.

United States Vessels Not in the Navy.

Considerably less than half the boats belonging to the United States government are a part of the navy. The war department operates a greater number of craft of all kinds than is found on the navy lists, while the departments of the treasury, commerce and labor and agriculture all have boats under their jurisdiction. According to the latest government figures, there are but 340 vessels flying the naval pennant.—Popular Mechanics.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,170,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,100,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 22,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 5,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

A Tribute to Women.

When everything around a man staggers and wavers, when all seems dark and dim in the far distance of the unknown future, when the world seems but a picture or a fairy tale and the universe a chimera, when the whole structure of ideas vanishes in smoke and all certainties become entangled, what is the only permanent thing which may still be his? The faithful heart of a woman. There he may rest his head; there he will regain his strength for the battle of life, maintain his faith in Providence and, if need be, find strength to die in peace with a benediction on his lips.—Henri Frederic Amiel.

RUBBER OYSTERS.

They Brought Trade and Saved Their Inventor From Failure.

"Rubber oysters laid the foundation of my success," said a millionaire hotel man.

"I had a small saloon in those days, and things looked very black. They looked, in fact, like bankruptcy. So in desperation I cut an old rubber doormat into oyster shaped pieces on April 1 and fried them in egg and breadcrumbs to a tasty brown.

"There was only one man in the bar when I fetched in that dish of smoking rubber oysters. His eyes glittered, and he grabbed a fork, jabbed it into a big fellow and took a hungry bite.

"Seeing the surprised look that spread over his face, I turned away to hide a smile. He gave an awkward laugh and said:

"'Them's fine oysters. I'll bring a couple of the boys in to sample them.'

"Sure enough, he brought two friends a half hour later. The friends no sooner saw the appetizing rubber oysters than, setting down their beers, they each sunk their teeth in one.

"Well, they sent in friends for oysters. I fried up no less than three old doormats and two overshoes that April fool day. The whole town laughed, and the papers printed funny stories about my joke. My joint got real popular.

"In short, I was saved—saved from bankruptcy by rubber oysters."—Washington Post.

A Light on Mothers.

The late William James, Harvard's famous psychologist, would often illuminate a misty subject with an appropriate anecdote. Discussing motherhood in a lecture on psychology, Professor James once said:

"A teacher asked a boy this question in fractions:

"'Suppose that your mother baked an apple pie and there were seven of you—the parents and five children. What part of the pie would you get for your portion?'

"'A sixth, ma'am,' the boy answered.

"'But there are seven of you,' said the teacher. 'Don't you know anything about fractions?'

"'Yes, ma'am,' said the boy. 'I know all about fractions, but I know all about mother too. Mother 'd say she didn't want no pie.'"

The "Silent Admiral."

For the first time in his life Sir Arthur K. Wilson, First Sea Lord and chief expert advisor to the Admiralty, has entered into the public controversy regarding the strength of the navy. A man who prefers deeds to words, "Tug" Wilson, as he is popularly termed in the service, is recognized as being without equal as a strategist and tactician. He is one of the very few naval officers who have earned the coveted V.C. This was at the Battle of El Teb in 1884, when the Arabs broke the square formed by the Naval Brigade, and he sprang into the breach and engaged the enemy with his bare fists, having broken his sword. Sir Redvers Buller described the act as "one of the most courageous he had ever witnessed." Sir Arthur is known in the navy as "the man who never takes a holiday," for he rarely goes ashore, even when his fleet or flagship visits any port. He regards every moment spent away from the service as wasted.

That "Cursed" Weed.

In his book of reminiscences, "One City and Many Men," Sir Algernon West, the defendant in the recent society case, who for some time was Mr. Gladstone's private secretary and most trusted confidential adviser, says that the G.O.M. "hated the smell of tobacco, and once accused me of bringing the odious aroma of the 'cursed' weed into his room. Meanly anxious to excuse myself, for I never smoked before going into his presence, I said I had been sitting for half an hour with Sir William Harcourt. Such was Mr. Gladstone's innocence that he said, 'Does Harcourt smoke? I am sure if he does he must always change his clothes before he comes to me, for I have never perceived that he smokes.'"

UNCONSCIOUS HUMOR.

The Way It Sometimes Crops Out In Examination Papers.

"About the driest thing in the world is the reading of a lot of examination papers," said a young University of Pennsylvania English instructor recently, "but occasionally the monotony of an evening of such work is relieved by a bit of humor. Frequently students try to be funny, thinking, perhaps, that they will in this way get on the right side of the man who marks the papers, but such attempts are usually flat failures. It is the unconscious bits of humor that are the gems.

"A short time ago I gave as a subject for an essay to one of my freshman classes 'My Impressions of Pennsylvania.' One youth wrote his name at the top of his paper and then sat through the entire hour, gazing at the ceiling, apparently unable to get a start. Then at the end he handed in the blank piece of paper. As a piece of satire it would have been excellent, but I am sure he had no such intention. The blank paper merely represented his inability to get his impressions in writing and not the lack of impressions.

"A short time ago a history professor asked the question, 'What caused the French rebellion of 1830?' One of the replies was merely, 'Too much Bourbon.' If this answer had come from an ordinary student he would have given the writer credit for a witty answer, but it was written by a serious minded youth from the country, who, he was sure, was incapable of such an effort and probably did not even know there was a whisky by that name. Truly the unconscious are the gems."—Philadelphia Record.

"Three Fingered" Brown's Hook Curve and How It Is Delivered.

Hugh S. Fullerton, writing in the American Magazine about the "Wonders of Pitching," says of "Three Fingered" Brown, the star twirler of the Cubs:

"Beyond doubt Mordecai Brown's hook curve is the highest development of the fast overhand ball which curves down and out, as all good curves do. Brown has but two entire fingers on his right hand and only fractions of the others. His first finger is cut off short, and the middle finger is wrenched so that the first joint turns almost at right angles toward his thumb. Perhaps this mutilated hand is the secret of his marvelous curves. Brown pitches the hook overhand, releasing the ball at graduated points after the hand passes the line of the center of the body in swinging. Upon the point at which the ball is released by the fingers the place of the 'break' depends, and Brown can by regulating the point of release make it either describe a wide, fast arc or, after traveling fifty feet, break suddenly at a sharp angle from its original course. If the batter retires to the back of the batter's box Brown, by releasing the ball a flash sooner, can make it break in front of the batter, almost over the plate. If the batter moves to the front of the box to meet the curve before it breaks a sudden jerk of the pitcher's wrist makes the ball break several feet in front of the plate. He controls the point of the break or curve at will, except when the ball slips, as it sometimes will do even with the greatest of pitchers. Most players who faced him in duels between batter and pitcher concede Brown's curve to be the greatest of all, but no member of the Detroit team who batted against Overall in the world's championship series of 1908 will acknowledge that Brown is better. In the game that Overall pitched, the final one of the series, his curve broke in such an astonishing manner as to surprise even himself. Overall pitches his curve with a wide, sweeping, overhand swing, releasing the ball over the side of his index finger just as his hand turns downward."

A Leader.

"The hero has a good many mental struggles, but that kind of combats don't go well on the stage."—Houston Chronicle.

Swimming for Actors.

Perhaps the most amusing of the stories in the Era Annual is the following, narrated by Mr. Edward Terry: "Some years ago, when playing at Leeds, I started a swimming competition among the members of my company, and, to encourage them, offered as a prize a silver loving cup (won, by the way, by the late Edward Lennox). The event apparently excited some interest in the town, and a friend heard two men engaged in a discussion as follows: First Man: 'I say, dost ta know this 'ere Terry's given a cup to his company?' Second Man: 'Nay. What's that for?' First Man: 'Well, I suppose it's to keep t' play-actors clean!'"

Bacteria.

Modern investigations as to the origin of diseases have brought the little organisms called bacteria into so much prominence that search has been made to ascertain whether they existed during the early geological periods. Not long since the fact was announced that Renault had discovered bacteria in coal. Continuing his researches, he found evidence that bacteria were probably coeval with the first appearance of organic life on the earth. They attacked vegetable tissues as well as the bones and teeth of animals; but, as a rule, they belonged to species distinct from those of today.

Zena Dare's First Appearance.

This popular young actress, who is engaged to the second son of Lord Esher, confessed to the writer a short time ago that, like her sister Phyllis, she suffers greatly from stage fright, and that before her first appearance as a leading lady in "The Catch of the Season" at the Vaudeville, London, in 1904 she was literally petrified with fright. "First I grew hot as the hour of my debut approached. Then I grew cold. My knees shook and my teeth chattered. Then I became hot again. In fact, altogether I must have experienced every variation of temperature between zero and 104 degrees in the shade. I am perfectly certain that no criminal sentenced to death ever experienced such mental torture as I did on my first appearance in London."

Mexico Has Some of the Most Perfect of These Peaceful Pools.

The mere words "crater lake" carry with them a charm and mystery that are akin to romance. But Mexico, with all her romance, has never given abroad any description of some of the most beautiful crater lakes in the world. Valle de Santiago, a little town of the state of Guanajuato, boasts four of the most perfect and beautiful of such lakes.

The village nestles among eleven craters, all formed in some past age by sudden explosions from the interior of the earth, explosions that blew out a great amount of earth, formed low cones and subsided without flow of lava or other demonstration than the single explosion. They are what are known to science as "explosion craters."

The calm restfulness of the crater lake is unlike anything in the world. One finds lakes and solitary pools in forests or mountain fastnesses, and the calm there is akin to witchery, but they are stirred sometimes by passing breezes, and the trees will wave above in the wind. But in a crater lake there is not a breath that will stir it, and even a stone cast into its bosom creates ripples that seem as though they would be swallowed ere they are born. Peace is a word without a meaning until one lies silent on the slope of such a crater, with such a lake at his feet.—Mexican Herald.

Presenting Cullinan Jewels.

Sir Richard Solomon, High Commissioner of the Union of South Africa, had the honor the other week, on behalf of the Government and people of the Union of South Africa, of presenting to Her Majesty the Queen, in commemoration of the Union of the South African colonies, six diamonds mounted as ornaments and cut out of the well-known Cullinan stone, which was discovered early in 1905 in the Premier Diamond mine, near Pretoria. The two largest of these diamonds, which are considered by experts to be of matchless quality, one weighing 92 and the other 62 carats, have been mounted as a pendant. Three, averaging about 10 carats each, have been mounted as a small pendant, and the sixth diamond as a ring.

The Fact Remains

No amount of misrepresentation by the peddlers of alum baking powders, no juggling with chemicals, or pretended analysis, or cooked-up certificates, or falsehoods of any kind, can change the fact that

Royal Baking Powder has been found by the official examinations to be of the highest leavening efficiency, free from alum, and of absolute purity and wholesomeness.

Royal Baking Powder is indispensable for making finest and most economical food.

No More Asthma A Cure Discovered That Really Does Cure

Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise, a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once, say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that a man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in [illegible]'s drugstore and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh."

The one-dollar package last two months; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists. The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Lakefield News: Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop of Peterborough, spent a few days in the village visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Galvin.

Judgment Rendered.

In the action brought by the Ontario Wind Engine and Pump Co., against John E. Payne, which was argued before Judge Huycke, his honor has given judgment for the defendant, for $62.50 and costs.

A Splendid Deer's Head.

Mr. T. E. Curvin, of Campbellford was in the city yesterday. He procured from Mr. [illegible], the local taxidermist one of the finest deer heads ever seen in this part of Ontario. The buck which was shot in Hastings Co. weighed, when dressed 225 pounds. The horns measure 32 inches from tip to tip.

Alleged Murderer Arrested Here.

Albert H. Brodeur, alias Albert H. Blanchard, alias A. J. Stevens, wanted by Chief Wm. G. Quilty of Springfield, Mass., on a charge of murder, it is believed, was apprehended here on Thursday night by Detective Newhall and Constable Meagher. He appeared before Magistrate Dumble yesterday morning, and was remanded three days awaiting the arrival of officers from Springfield.

Otonabee Councillor Here.

Councillor R. J. Patterson, of Otonabee, was in the city yesterday en route home from a business trip to Port Hope and Cobourg. The Councillor was summoned to Cobourg as a member of the committee who supervised the disputed boundary line between the Counties of Northumberland, Durham and Victoria Counties.

New Local Restaurant.

As may be seen in another column of this issue, Messrs. Woodhouse & Pacey have opened "The Canada Hot Fish Restaurant" at 305 George St. Here everything is kept scrupulously clean and dainty meals served. This is a great boon for those who have too often been impelled to get meals from dust eyed [illegible].

Speech to Technical Society.

Last night Dr. H. T. Barnes, F.R.S., McGill University, one of the eminent scientists of the day, addressed the Technical Society of Peterborough in St. Andrew's Lecture Hall, on the subject, "Icebergs and Their Detection," illustrated by lantern slides and other electrical apparatus. A most interesting and instructive lecture was given.

Population of Peterborough County.

According to the Dominion Government Census return for 1911, just received, the population of West Peterborough in that year amounted to 28,157, including 23 Mormons. There were eight residents who claimed to have no religion, the latter residing in the city. East Peterborough was credited with 15,400 residents, all of whom professed some kind of religious belief.

Local Organist Honored.

Miss Mabel Clarry, retiring organist of Charlotte street Methodist church, was presented with a purse of gold by members of the church. The presentation was preceded by a banquet given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church to Miss Clarry, the choir and official board of the church. The affair which was held in the Sunday School room was attended by about one hundred and fifty people.

Local Masons at Brockville.

Twelve members of the Moore Preceptory of Free Masonry visited Brockville on Thursday for the Kingston and Ottawa District. Those who went down were Messrs. E. L. Goodwill, W. R. G. Higgins, J. D. Sampson, R. S. Cotton, George Evans, T. H. Hooper, Alex. Richardson, W. A. Logan, Wm. Lytle, E. B. Fowler, A. A. Fowler, and F. W. Trebilcock.

How We Stand In Religion.

The Dominion Census for 1911 has just reached us. From it we learn that the population of Peterborough then had 18,360 population. In religion the population is divided as follows: Adventists 2, Anglicans 4,311, Baptists 1,086, Brethren 37, "Christians" 9, Congregationalists 15, Greek Church 5, Jews 30, Lutherans 8, Methodists 4,303, Mormons 3, Presbyterians 3,400, Roman Catholics 4,566, Salvation Army 263, "Protestants" 8, Various Sects 266, Unspecified 110, No religion 8.

A Professor to the Rescue

Yesterday morning, as Prof. Schlochow, the local musical instructor was warily walking along the ice pavement on Aylmer street, near McDonnel street, carrying three parcels, he saw, near him a lady of somewhat generous build fall heavily. Like a knight of old, seeing beauty in distress, the professor sped to the rescue. As he slithered along the ice clad pavement his parcels, one fortunately containing eggs, flew in all directions. He assisted the lady, who was knocked almost senseless, to her feet and gave first aid. 25 worth of sand on the icy pavements would relieve such dangerous conditions.

Lindsay Nurses Graduate

Lindsay Post: Close to a thousand people attended the Graduation of Nurses at the Academy of Music. In spite of a heavy downpour of rain and general counter attractions, the people were there before eight o'clock. Mr. J. D. Flavelle was chairman. In the neighborhood of twenty young lady nurses were seated in two rows upon the platform. They looked very pretty dressed in the white uniform of their profession, and created a great impression among the audience. The eight nurses who graduated Tuesday night were seated in the front row. Each bore huge bouquets of beautiful cut flowers.

Good Vaudeville at Royal.

The vaudeville acts at the Royal Theatre this week are certainly "scarlem." Vincent Vernon's magnificent voice not only makes the audience sit up and take notice, but brings rounds of applause. In the double male-female singing and dancing act, two ladies last night sat behind a Times reporter. The following conversation was overheard: "Mame, ain't they grand? I believe one of them is a man dressed up as a woman. If the girl with the red stockings, however, was wise, she would not display those thin legs so much when she dances." Both performers were nice. Babe Butler's singing and dancing act also brought down the audience.

Oddfellows Entertain.

The second entertainment of Peterborough Lodge Oddfellows, was a great success. The program was as follows:

Vocal Solo—Mrs. McLaren.
Vocal Solo—Mr. Heafield.
Violin selection—Mrs. Boyd.
Vocal solo—Mrs. R. W. Davidson.
Quartette vocal—Messrs. Cole, Johnson, Dorrell and Fraser.

Cover the Whole Field

An advertisement in The Times is guaranteed to reach regularly 90 per cent. of the homes of Peterborough. Sworn statement furnished of proof of this if required.

Business men are also reminded that The Times is the only paper that reaches those served by the Rural Mail Routes on the day of issue. As a result it gets the call.

Thus advertisers will therefore know that by using The Times for their business announcements, they not only reach the WHOLE population of the city of 22,000 people, but a large proportion of those residing within a twenty-mile radius of the city. These are the people who have the money to pay for what they want.

EAT CABBAGE, FISH, SAUSAGE, NEW BREAD

No Indigestion, Gas, Sourness or Upset Stomach if you'll take "Pape's Diapepsin"—Try This!

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mrs. David Wilson.

Jane Gibson, wife of Mr. David Wilson, of Springville, and for fifty years a very highly respected resident of Cavan Township, passed away at her home yesterday morning. The late Mrs. Wilson was born in Ireland, but came to Cavan township years ago, and for a long time had been known as one of the oldest residents of that township. She resided near Springville, at Lot 23, con. 10, Cavan, where her death took place this morning. The whole community will feel the loss of the deceased lady.

She is survived by several children. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to the 9th line cemetery.

MR. J. B. McWILLIAMS ANSWERS A SLANDER

In justice to Dr. Fernow would say that he denies making any such statement about degenerates as reported in the press.

I prepared a report for Dr. Fernow on the timber and waters in the Trent district, which I have here and any person can examine it and see that there is not one word about the settlers.

I gave particulars of the first timber sales, names of purchasers, and price paid, for the limits. The different crown timber regulations gives dues paid since 1840, the names of all lumbermen in business in Trent district 40 years ago with the output of each, lots and concession for all licenses in force at present time and those cancelled or abandoned. Names of all parties in the lumbering business at present time with their output. No doubt Dr. Fernow in examining the reports and comparing the present output with 40 years ago, would say the lumber business had degenerated.

Then I took the waters and gave the different lakes on the Trent and Otonabee Rivers from Trenton to North Lake in township of Havelock, the head waters of the Trent, then gave the different rivers emptying into the Trent with lakes on each that could be used as reservoirs.

The Hastings County Council took up Dr. Fernow's report and defended the settlers in their county, and it might be well for this Council to write Dr. Fernow and see if he made such a report, and if so to give the names.

After Mr. McWilliams took his seat, Warden Shaw, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Coben, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mr. Howden and Mr. Squires spoke in highest terms of what he had done for the northern district and a resolution was passed thanking him for explanations made.

From Great Lakes To the Rockies

WOMEN SING THE PRAISES OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Saskatchewan Lady Adds Her Testimony to What Has Already Been Said of the Great Work Dodd's Kidney Pills Are Doing.

Connerville, Sask., Jan. 30.—(Special).—The scarcity of female help in a new country subjects the women of the prairies to unusual strain, and careful observation has established the fact that this strain first makes itself felt in the kidneys. For this reason Dodd's Kidney Pills are making an enviable reputation from the Great Lakes to the foothills of the Rockies.

Everywhere you will find women singing the praises of the great Canadian kidney remedy that has banished their pains and weariness, and brought them back to health. Among the many is Mrs. Edgar Cowen, an estimable lady of this place.

"I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills very beneficial," Mrs. Cowen states. "If anything I can say will help any sufferer I am glad to add my testimonial to what has already been said."

The kidneys strain all the refuse material out of the blood. If they are out of order this refuse remains in the blood, and becomes poison. That's why sound kidneys mean pure blood and good health. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound kidneys.

HUNDREDS THAT COL. HUGHES THOUGHT ENTITLED TO FENIAN RAID BOUNTY SWELL TO 33,000

Although Only Ten Thousand Men Went to Front, Fifteen Thousand Have Already Been Paid Hundred Dollar Bonus--Some Never Fought

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—An extraordinary situation has developed over the $100 bounties which Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes decided he would pay to the Fenian Raid veterans, and for which he had legislation enacted. Ten thousand Canadians took up arms against the invaders, and as the event occurred over 40 years ago a large proportion of the veterans have died. When Col. Hughes decided that the best way to satisfy the claims of the survivors was to pay them $100, he thought there would be only a few hundred left. He did not know, however, that the then governor of Nova Scotia had issued an order calling out the men and the militia of the Province to the defence of that part of Canada. Such an order was not issued in any other province, and so in Nova Scotia there were many thousands under arms who never went to the front. None the less, however, they are entitled to the bounty in virtue of the order of the governor of the province. About 15,000 applications for the $100 have been received from Nova Scotia alone. The total applications to date are 33,000, and about 15,000 claimants have been paid, leaving 18,000 to be dealt with yet. Yet only 10.000 men went to the front.

Why West Wants Free Wheat

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—Wheat is getting to be a drag in the market. Prices for the best Western Wheat have fallen in three years from $1.23 to 98c on the Liverpool market. The fall in the price of wheat has checked the boom of Western lands. Westerners are "plunging" in their efforts to repair the damage.

DUKE HAS A HEAVY DAYS WORK AHEAD OF HIM FOR TO-DAY

Toronto, Jan. 31.—The Duke of Connaught has five engagements during his visit to Toronto on Monday. In the morning he will distribute the prizes at St. Andrew's College. At noon he will lunch at the York Club. In the afternoon he will be at the meeting of the Royal Humane Society in Convocation Hall. Afterwards he will dine at Government House and spend the evening at the concert of the Mendelssohn Choir.

Mayor and Mrs. Hocken will be at the luncheon at the York Club and the dinner at Government House. Mayor Hocken will, on behalf the daughters of the Empire, request the Duke of Connaught to be present at the ceremonies next summer in connection with the opening of the Howard Memorial Gates at the High Park entrance at High Park avenue. The Daughters of the Empire, assisted with civic grant, are presenting the Memorial Gates to the city.

THREE SHOT WHEN LOVER RUNS AMUCK

Montreal Youth Shoots Sweetheart and Sets Fire to House When Jilted.

Montreal, Jan. 31.—Running amuck when his sweetheart, Ethel Surrey, refused last night to leave her home at Long Pointe, Que., when he demanded it, John McGarr shot the girl in the head, and fighting wildly wounded her brother Gvelyn, and brother-in-law, A. W. Cloake. McGarr then tried to get out of the house by the back door, which he found locked. He then smashed a window with an axe and in doing so upset a kerosene lamp which set fire to the house. The flames were put out by Mrs Surrey, the aged mother of the girl, who was asleep upstairs, and who also secured medical attention for the wounded McGarr got away.

HAND FLUTTERING ABOVE DIRT SLIDE

Old Well Caved in, Injuring One Man and Killing Another in Full View of Son.

Talbotville, Ont., Jan. 31.—Half buried under several tons of clay and bricks, Charles Yeandle, 52 years of age, was killed and John Ramey, 45 years, almost completely buried, was rescued, but not until he sustained a serious fracture of the leg in the cave-in of an old well on the farm of Thos Fife, near this village, Friday afternoon. A third man, Phillip Gilbert, scrambled out a moment before the crash came and escaped injury.

The crumbling wall crashed upon Ramey and a solid hour elapsed before he was removed. Yeandle was buried only to his waist, but falling forward on the handle of a shovel he struck his stomach and suffered what is thought to be an internal hemorrhage.

The tragedy happened in full view of several men who were assisting, and among them was Yeandle's son. The young man slid down the well with the others and worked like a trojan to rescue Ramey, whose right hand could be seen fluttering above the death dealing mass.

Ramey's head was uncovered and then the men set to work to remove Yeandle, who gave no signs of life. The son worked with the others and helped carry his father to the top. Then he jumped into the well again to assist in the work of bringing Ramey to the surface.

SNOW STORM TIES RAILWAY TRAFFIC

Chicago, Jan. 31.—A snow storm over Northern Illinois Indiana and Ohio to-day caused much delay to railroad traffic and telegraph and telephone service was badly hampered. In this city, all street railways had snow sweepers our early, but much difficulty was experienced in keeping lines open in the outlaying districts. In the lake region of Indiana and Ohio, the snow turned to sleet and many wires were prostrated by the heavy frost.

DEATH OF AGED BELLEVILLE MAN

Belleville, Jan. 31.—Mr. James Cummins, aged 80 years, a resident of this city for 64 years, died this morning, after a brief illness. He was a well known harness manufacturer. For years deceased was assisting chief of the fire department, and a member of the Separate school Board.

GRAHAM AND McGIBBON, POLITICIANS

A Surprising Tale of Intrigue and Quarrels Involving Politicans and Both Parties---And the Greatest Revelations Are Yet to Come

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—Nothing is more interesting to those on the inside of politics here than the developments in the City of Quebec in connection with the legislation and the developments in Montreal in connection with the newspaper question.

In regard to the former, nobody doubts that the statements made by the Burns detectives as already published in the press, are substantially true, and that the detectives did pay out money to members of the legislature, and that a bill against the public interests was put through the legislature in a surprisingly quick way—and that not only was money taken by somebody, but what was worse, the bill was allowed to go through without check from any quarter, that is really as serious a matter, or more serious, than taking the money.

It is also confirmed by the testimony taken at Quebec and already published in the papers on several occasions, that the man at the bottom of the revelations at Quebec is Lorne McGibbon, who was the owner of The Montreal Herald, and that his agent who organized the scrutiny by detectives was his managing editor, Edward Beck; and it is further confirmed that McGibbon and Beck took all this trouble, and incurred the great expense they did, not to get a bogus bill through the legislature, but to head off any legislation that might be sought by the Montreal Tramways Co. to secure an extension of their franchise.

Two Once Worked Together.

And at this point the story goes further back to some months ago, when Sir Hugh Graham and Mr. McGibbon had been working together to secure control of the Montreal newspaper situation, for what purpose it has not yet been divulged; but the two men had been working together and had an agreement of some kind; and Mr. McGibbon's friends say that Graham went back on him, and that Graham had got The Witness and had tried to get The Herald unfairly from McGibbon, who was negotiating for it. A bitter row was therefore brought about between the two, and McGibbon's friends say that the row turned on the purchase of the papers and also on the scheme that the Tramway Co., headed by Mr. Robert, had for the extension of his franchise. Mr. McGibbon, before that, may have been on the inside of the Tramways policy; probably he was and probably he speculated more or less in Tramways stock; but after that row he determined to fight the Tramways Co. through his newspaper, The Herald, and get which he had to outwit Graham, and through any and every means that he could think of including the Burns agency.

While the newspaper fight was going on, according to the Liberals, Graham and McGibbon were constantly running up to Ottawa and consulting members of the Government.

It is believed here that Sir Lomer Gouin is in constant touch with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and that the Quebec Liberals who are now under public scrutiny will insist on the whole story being told before the committee at Quebec; of McGibbon's relations and quarrels with Graham and of both Graham and McGibbon being put in the witness box and made to explain the part both of them had been playing in the affairs of the country generally. If one is to believe half what is said now, the most marvelous story of intrigue, of wasteful expenditure of money, and a story whose ramifications, if followed up, go back to more than one Dominion election, will be forthcoming.

ATTACK TORREON IN FIFTEEN DAYS

General Villa Has Nearly Twenty Thousand Men at His Command.

Juarez, Mexico, Jan. 31.—"Within fifteen days the attack on Torreon will begin," said Major Dominic Fierso, Gen. Villa's superintendent of transportation in the State of Chihuahua, who accompanied Gen. Villa to Juarez.

"Troops have been sent as far south as Escalon, and the railroad is being rapidly restored beyond that point. Every fighting man in the State of Chihuahua who can be spared from the garrisons will be sent southward to attack Velasco's federal forces, and General Villa will have between 15,000 and 20,000 men.

"In our visit to the border we have arranged for the resumption of several of the mining properties owned by Americans in the State of Chihuahua, and normal business conditions are rapidly being resumed. We intend to maintain a regular train service between Juarez, Shihuahua and other points south."

FORMER CITIZEN DEAD

Late T. L. Joy Fought for North In U.S. Civil War.

Stricken with a paralytic stroke about a year ago, Mr. Theodore L. Joy died as a result on Saturday morning at his home 252 Pacific avenue, Toronto. The late Mr. Joy who was 82 years of age, was born in Ohio. He enlisted in the United States army at an early age, and fought for the north in the American civil war.

After the war he moved to Lakefield and a few years later to Peterborough. He was a carpenter by trade, but being on the American army pension list, he was retired for some years. From Peterborough, he moved to Brampton, living there for ten years, before going to Toronto in 1911. A member of the Masonic Lodge, Peterborough, the late Mr. Joy was a Methodist in religion.

Besides the widow, he is survived by four sons.

BESCHER WANTS SMALL FORTUNE

Former Red Star Will Ask McGraw for a Huge Salary and a Three-Year Contract

New York, Jan. 31.—While the officials of the Giants do not seem to be alarmed by the refusal of Bescher, the former Cincinnati outfielder, to sign a contract it was reported here yesterday that Bescher would ask John McGraw, when the latter returns from the world's tour, for a salary of 10,000 a year, and a three year contract. Bescher wants nearly 5000 more than he received from the Cincinnatti Reds lanst year, it is said. The Giants got him in trade for Charley Herzog and Grover Hartley. Beschers friends say that he had no idea of considering Federal League offers which are plentiful, and will report at Marlin on March 1.

DREAMED "MONROE" WAS IN TROUBLE

Wife of Captain Johnson Had Premonition That Husband Was in Danger.

New York, Jan. 31. "I had a premonition Thursday night that my husband was fighting for his life," said Mrs. Johnson, of No. 2488 Seventh avenue, wife of Edward E. Johnson, captain of the Monroe, when told yesterday by a reporter that her husband had been saved.

"All night I walked the floor praying that he might be guided to safety," she continued. "Early in the evening as the fog gathered I and my children, Alice, nine, and William five, knelt at the window and prayed.

"As I gazed through the fog across the courtyard I was horrified to see Arthur Brown, next door, stretched across the bed with a gas tube in his hand, held to his mouth a suicide.

"I dreamed that the Monroe was in trouble. I stretched out my hands to my husband. I thought that he had been drowned. When I awakened I looked across the courtyard. I could still see the body of the suicide." Then the door bell rang. It was all over. I heard my husband was saved.

"Early Wednesday morning he left home. When he bade me and the children goodbye he said he had a feeling that he was going on a fatal trip."

PUSHED BACK INTO SEA WHEN TRYING TO GET INTO LIFEBOAT

Young Actress Reports Case of Cowardice Shown When "Monroe" Sank--Thomas Harrington Tells of His Terrible Experience

New York, Jan. 31. Six survivors of the Monroe disaster arrived today. Included in the vivid stories told of the disaster were many of unselfish heroism, but there is one report of cowardice, recited by Miss Leona Soule, of the Maracia Theatre Co., who had a narrow escape from death because of the disregard of the unwritten law of the sea—"Women first."

"I was struggling in the water in an effort to reach one of the life boats," said Miss Soule, "when my strength was almost gone. I succeeded in catching the side of the boat. A man reached over and pushed me away. I begged for a chance to hold on to the boat just long enough to rest. When I had about given up all hope another man in the lifeboat reached over and pulled me in."

"Women must be saved," he said. "Even if we all go down in the attempt, we'll all die together if necessary, but this woman is going to stay in this boat. The first man who protests will be thrown out."

Fought to Take Home Wife's Body.

Thomas F. Harrington of Bridgeport, who brought the body of his wife which will be taken to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kelly No. 55 Stevens street, Norwalk, was also among the arrivals. Harrington who saved his wife from the wreck, only to lose her forever, and then fought with his fists so that her body might be buried at home and not thrown into the sea, brought all that he held dear to him to this city today.

Get Next Winters Coal by Water

The last contract for the upper end of the Trent Valley Canal will be let in February. The work below Peterborough will be finished by August 1st next. The estimates contain sufficient money to do the trick. The Trent Valley Canal can thank Messrs. Bennet, M. P., of Simcoe, and Burnham, M.P., of West Peterborough, for their efforts this last year or two to keep things going to a speedy and successful issue.

Canadian National Opera on a Tour

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 2.—The National Opera Company of Canada opened here to-day for three days of subscription operas. There has been a good demand for tickets and much interest is taken in the productions. The company will proceed to the Pacific coast through the United States, going south to Texas.

WILL TRY TO RAISE TITANIC BY VERY POWERFUL MAGNETS

New York, Can. 31. To raise the Titanic, recover the bodies from the hold and agains fit the ship for the sea is a scheme which Chas. Smith, a Denver architect, hopes to carry out this year.

For several months Smith has been drawing plans of submarine boats scows and other apparatus to be used in raising the Titanic.

His scheme is first to locate the ship. He then intends to lower a submarine carrying seven persons, by means of a steel cable. The submarine will be attached to a ship on the surface, and communication is to be had by means of a telephone electric signal bells. The submarine is to be operated by electricity, furnished thru cables from the ship above, and is to be especially constructed so as to withstand the terrific pressure, which is estimated to be almost forty tons a square foot. As the submarine is lowered electric magnets will be attached to its prow. Light steel cables are to be attached to the magnets, the other end of which will be wound around steam winches on scows on the surface. When the Titanic is found the submarine will push the magnets against the side of the wrecked ship and then signal to the the man above to turn the electric current, thus adhering the magnets to the sunken vessel. Magnets will be placed all around the ship, and when the last one is placed the submarine will be pulled to the surface and the work of raising the vessel begun.

Welland county is excited over the action of an alleged Government representative working against the Canada Temperance Act.

DOMINION BANK HAS HAD SUCCESSFUL YEAR

The Annual Statement of the Dominion Bank for the year ended 31st December, 1913, contained in another part of this issue, was the best ever issued by this Institution. The Net Profits amounted to $950,402 as compared with $901,000 for the previous year and $704,000 for 1911. In addition to the Net Profits of $950,000, the Bank received as premiums on new Capital Stock, the sum of $811,000 and brought forward from the previous year a balance of $686,000, making a total of $2,449,000 available for distribution. Dividend disbursements and bonuses took $765,000 and Reserve Fund $811,000, Investments Account $200,000 and Officers' Pension Fund $25,000, leaving $647,000 to be carried forward. The Bank has now a Paid-Up Capital of $5,811,000, a Reserve of $6,811,000 and Total Assets of $80,506,000. The year has been an exceptionally prosperous one for the Dominion Bank.

Mr. John Crane, the local manager who though a young man, is a veteran in finance and has brought the Peterborough branch to a high degree of efficiency.

BEEN IN THE RIVER SINCE CHRISTMAS

Body of Man Found Drowned at Chatham Identified by His Brother.

Chatham, Ont. Jan. 31.—The man taken from the river late yesterday was identified this afternoon as John McNaughton of Ruscombe by his brother Robert A. of the same place.

A bill from a Ruscombe store issued to J. McNaughton, resulted in the brother bein located this morning over the long-distance telephone, and he identified the remains as those of his came to Chatham immediately and brother, who left home on Dec. 24, coming to Chatham with the intention of returning the following day.

It is believed he was drowned about Christmas time. Deceased was a bachelor, about 55 years old.

"TIN BOX" BURST; BOY DIED.

Montreal, Jan 31.—One boy was killed instantly and another seriously injured early to-day when a small tin box which they had found in the street exploded and burst into atoms. Denville Gilbert, of 310 Mazarin street, who had the box in his hands, was struck dead when it exploded, while twelve year old Dauboise Divuere, a companion, who lived next door, had his right arm badly burned.

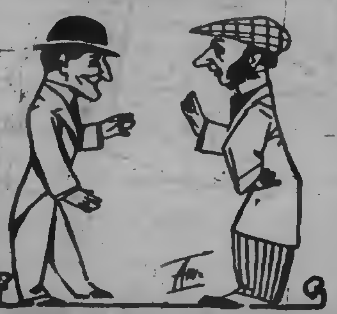
The Base Bawled.



"Why," inquired the Englishman, "do they call this game baseball?"

"The first time it was played," explained the American fan, "the members of a singing quartet were among the players, and when the umpire said 'Strike 4!' it made the base bawl."

S. Holmes, Jr.

"Hah!" said Sherlock Holmes, Jr., as he and the doctor sat down in the dining car.

"What is it, Sherl?" asked the great detective's companion.

"Notice the man across the aisle?"

"Yes."

"He is paying his own way. He is not one of the many who have the privilege of turning in expense accounts when they get home."

"Wonderful! Do you know him?"

"No. I never saw him before."

"How have you succeeded in making this startling deduction?"

"Look at the bill of fare. You will see that they are serving strawberries in this car. He is not ordering any."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Easy Marks.

"Talk erbout yere easy marks," said Uncle Silas Geehaw, who had been passing a week in the city, "us rubes ain't in it with them air town chaps."

"Did yew sell 'em enny gold bricks, Silas?" queried old Daddy Squashneck.

"Naw, I didn't," answered Uncle Silas, "but I seed a feller peddlin' artificial ice—hed th' sign right on his wagon—an' blamed ef th' chumps did not buy it fer th' real thing, by gram!"—Chicago News.

Why He Waited.

The man who is anxiously watching the steeple jack at work 300 feet from the ground is approached by a passing acquaintance.

"Hello, Brown!" says the latter. "Are you still here? It's fully an hour ago that I saw you standing in the very same spot."

"That fellow up there gives me the cold shivers," says Brown. "He makes me feel weak in the knees."

"Going back to your office?" inquires the friend.

"I guess so," Brown reluctantly replies. "There doesn't seem to be much use in waiting any longer. I don't believe he is going to fall."

And he turned away with a lingering glance at the intrepid jack.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Great Age of Halley's Comet.

While Halley's comet has been identified as a member of our system for over 2,000 years, certain characteristics of its orbit lead us to believe that it has been with us at least ten or perhaps 100 times as long as that. According to all accounts, it was a magnificent object at the time of the Norman conquest in 1066. Its head was equal to the full moon in size, and its tail increased to a wonderful length.—Century.

A Queer Hiding Place.

During a furious storm in Paris a janitor was struck on the shoulder by a small but heavy tin box which had fallen from an upper story of a house in the Rue de l'Ouest. The box was found to contain $6,000 in gold and notes. It was claimed at the police station by an elderly woman, who said that the money constituted her entire savings, which she had hidden by tying the box to the drainpipe outside her window.

Another Theory Demolished.

"It costs nothing to be polite."

"You're wrong. While I was politely picking up a glove for a lady yesterday my new four dollar hat blew off and rolled in front of a passing trolley car."—Chicago Record-Herald.

How He Got Out of It.

"My dear, before marriage you told me all your doings."

"Yes, but now I have come to think such talk savors too much of egotism."—Lippincott's.

The Chamois Trail.

Every day at noon at Grindelwald there is a rush of visitors for the telescopes in order to gaze at one of the most interesting natural scenes in the Alps, "the chamois trail." Regularly at this hour a herd of twenty to thirty chamois may be seen passing in Indian file up the yawning abysses of the precipitous Mettenberg rocks, separating two glaciers, the male animals leading the way, the king of the herd keeping twenty yards in advance and on the watch. At the bottom of the Mettenberg, where the slope is freed from snow, the chamois find a meager subsistence when their usual feeding grounds are under deep snow. It is a curious fact that the chamois descend to their feeding grounds at dawn, when there is little likelihood of avalanches, and return to their haunts at an hour when avalanches—for this portion of the mountain has frequent avalanches—have already fallen and the danger is past.—Geneva Cor. Pall Mall Gazette.

Pussy and the Burglar.

A good dog has hitherto been considered the best protection against burglars, but a certain old lady differs from this view. She believes in cats, and, her house being broken into not long ago, she proceeded to put her theory into practice, and with marvelously good results. The midnight hour had not long struck when she heard unusual sounds in the hall below. She slipped out of bed, took her faithful feline in her arms and walked quietly on to the landing. She leaned over. The burglar was on the stairs. Suddenly in an unlucky moment he struck a match upon the staircase. The lady could see the burglar, but the burglar could not see the lady. She held puss up and then dropped her upon the burglar's head. The cat uttered an unearthly screech and then commenced to scratch for all it was worth. Puss was certainly the willing worker. The next instant the man was outside in the street.—Manchester Guardian.

Whistler's Friendships.

That Whistler, the man of famous enemies, had faithful friends is recalled by Ford Madox Hueffer, writing of the pre-Raphaelites in Harper's Magazine. Madox Brown had a circular printed drawing the attention of all his old patrons to the merits of Whistler's etchings and begging them in the most urgent terms to make purchases because Whistler was in indigent circumstances. The story is that upon one occasion Madox Brown, going to a tea party at the Whistlers' in Chelsea, was met in the hall by Mrs. Whistler, who begged him to go to the poulterer's and purchase a pound of butter. The bread was cut, but there was nothing to put upon it. There was no money in the house, the poulterer had cut off his credit, and Mrs. Whistler said "she dared not send her husband, for he would certainly punch the tradesman's head."

The Popular Drama.

Manager—We've got a great play here.

Backer—But it has no comedy in it.

Manager—The actors will insert that.

Backer—There's no action.

Manager—I've got a few dandy mechanical surprises to put in.

Backer—What has the author furnished, then?

Manager—Everything else except for required indecency. I'll have to hire an expert on that.—Cleveland Leader.

The Old "Chanticler."

Ethelyn—Oh, grandmamma, Jack and I were to see the new play last night! All the players were dressed to represent barnyard fowls.

Grandmamma—Why, that's nothing. The summer before I was married I had a duck suit, a leghorn hat trimmed with canary ribbon, and every one said your grandfather was the biggest quack in town.—Judge.

She Knew the Answer.

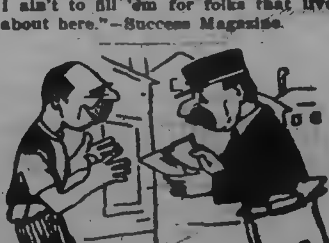
A reporter called on a rector to ask him if he had accepted a bishopric that had been offered him. The servant said that her master could not be seen. He was at prayer seeking for guidance. Then could the reporter see the rector's wife? "Oh, no," said the slavey, "you can't see her. She's busy packing up!"—Circle.

A Neighborly Precaution.

The new clerk at the drug store returned the prescription to the old customer with a request that he wait till the boss returned.

"But why can't you fill it out?"

"I could if you was a stranger, but I ain't to fill 'em for folks that lives about here."—Success Magazine.



Pat (meeting postman)—Ony letther f'r John Brickbrat?

"Nothing."

"Hev yez anything f'r enybody near thot name?"

"One for John Shubrick."

"That's it. Faith an' I made a close guess."

Touching Verse.

At first she touches up her hair
To see if it's in place,
And then with manner debonair
She touches up her face.
A touch to curls behind her ear,
A touch to silken collar,
And then she's off to hubby dear—
To touch him for a dollar.
—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Not Bragging.

"There are a lot of girls who don't ever intend to get married."

"How do you know?"

"I've proposed to several."—Cleveland Leader.

To Serve a Purpose.

Young Lady—Please show me your extremest style of hobble skirt.

Salesgirl—For yourself?

Young Lady—No; for my chaperon.—Judge.

A FAD OF THE MOMENT IS THE SHORT COAT

The short coat is favored in Paris by the leading gown and suit makers and promises to be a feature of the spring styles. Many of them are belted, others are on the bolero order. The bolero is charmingly suited to the new skirts with their ruffled and draped hips and is far too becoming a mode not to "catch on". If the hip trimmed skirts continue popular and every indication is that they will, the vogue of the short coat is assured.

The modish suit sleeve is three-quarter or full length although we glimpse here and there a short sleeved model that is decidedly smart.

Number 8140 is an unusual little coat in embossed velvet. It has a three-quarter kimono sleeve, a rolled collar and smartly cut revers which may be rolled back as illustrated, or closed and buttoned on the side front.

The skirt (8148) is a peg-top, draped in pannier effect in front. It is made up in black chiffon velvet.

A smart feature of number 8158 is the raglan effect in the back of the blouse. The sleeve is a full-length design; the shaped peplum and the small sailor collar are effective touches. A two-piece skirt completes the costume.

Dull green duvetyn is the material used with a narrow strip of skunk edging the blouse. Collar and cuffs are of brocaded velvet in soft colors.

Number 8140—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 8148—sizes 22 to 30.
Number 8158—sizes 14 to 18.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 5 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits, destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

Charles K. Hamilton, the aviator, has broken all records. A few days ago he died in bed.

◆

Some men are born great, and some achieve greatness, but there are others who can't even get their names spelled right.

◆

A Philadelphia doctor says that nitrate of silver will cure the taste for smoking. And so will arsenic, if one takes enough of it.

◆

Again it has been suggested to mark married men by requiring them to wear rings on their thumbs. But as nine-tenth of them are led by the nose why not put the ring in that organ.

◆

Colonel von Reuter, a German officer, would shoot citizens for smiling at the army. It would serve them right. Smiling at the soldiers is a pastime which should be confined to the fair sex.

◆

Wood alcohol has been put in the class of dangerous poisons because its use causes blindness. But strange to say the popularity of grain alcohol is due to its ability to make persons stone blind.

◆

A Toronto doctor tells us that there is more alcohol in a fresh loaf of bread than in a glass of beer. But who ever heard of a fellow consuming six loaves of bread so as to get himself in trim to sing, "On the Banks of the Wabash."

◆

Out in one of the German settlements in Western Ontario a man was summoned to court for manufacturing sauer kraut in a cow stable. He should be prosecuted not only for violating the sanitary laws but for cruelty to animals.

A UNITED STATES SUGGESTION

Once again the proposal to make a deep waterway from ocean to the head of the great lakes is being advanced, and we are told in a dispatch from Washington that it will be taken up and discussed in the Canadian House of Commons.

There is something magnificent in this suggestion to make the inland waters of Canada navigable for ocean going vessels all the way west to the head of navigation—magnificent as an engineering project and also as regards possible cost, it being estimated that from 100 to 300 millions would be required to complete it. But from a Canadian viewpoint there is something in the scheme besides magnificence to be considered.

The suggestion comes from the United States, and it requires but little investigation to make plain the fact that our southern neighbor would be immensely more advantaged by such a work than we would ourselves. Why, then, should we commit ourselves to the scheme? Why, indeed, should we even sanction it, for it could not be undertaken as proposed without our sanction.

In the matter of transportation improvement the Dominion is doing fairly well. Large expenditures are being sanctioned to still further improve the St. Lawrence route, the Welland canal is to be rebuilt on an enlarged scale, the Georgian Bay canal work is being proceeded with, the Hudson's Bay railway is being constructed, and two new transcontinental lines of railway will be tapping the Pacific coast within a year or two. Canada will be able to worry along without an ocean waterway to Duluth for years to come, even though Uncle Sam is very anxious to get it at once.

THE PIG AS A SCHOOL STUDY

In the states of Washington and Oregon every district school is to have a pig, to have, to hold and to keep—until ready for the market. What is the idea? Well, it is sane enough. The complaint has been made in these States that the children who attend the rural school do not learn anything which fits them for the practical duties of life. So the pig, one of the great revenue producers of the farm, is introduced as a study in life. The youngsters will learn about the porker at first hand, how to feed and care for him, all his foibles and eccentricities. Pig will mean more to them than bacon, ham and lard by the time they have finished their course of special study. Nothing is said in the curriculum about the advisability of acquiring a knowledge of the acrobatic abilities of the quadruped when greased, but the children are likely to gain experience in this department. Reading through the lines one may perceive the laudable intention of the paternal rural government is to create such interest in the pig and its possibilities that the urban movement will be effectively discouraged.

FOR THE COMMON GOOD

It is the aim of The Times:

To exploit and advance the best interests of the people of the fair and fertile land wherein it is published, and to which it steadily devotes its efforts;

To stand for liberty and law, equal rights and good government, the greatest boon to a free people;

To foster and encourage private and public enterprise, and hold up the hands of every honest toiler, either with brawn or brain, in every field of activity;

To stand independently for the true interests of the city, the Dominion and the Empire, and for those policies only which make for the common good;

It aims to be excellent and not cheap.

RESERVE FUND.

Balance at credit of account, 31st December, 1912	$6,000,000.00
Transferred from Profit and Loss Account	811,344.80
	$6,811,344.80

E. B. OSLER, President.

C. A. BOGERT, Gen. Manager.

The year 1913 was one of general financial and commercial depression throughout the world, which conditions became more accentuated during the closing months of that period. Your Directors, therefore, deemed it advisable to enforce a policy of conservatism without interfering with the requirements of legitimate borrowers.

The funds of the Bank were fully and profitably employed throughout the twelve months under review, resulting in a further increase in the net earnings, the disposition of which is dealt with in detail in the accompanying Report. A bonus of 2 per cent. was again distributed, in addition to the regular dividend of 12 per cent.

Following the announcement made in the last Annual Report, an issue of $1,000,000 of new Capital Stock was made to Shareholders of record of the 15th of February, 1913. The whole of this issue was taken up, and although the final payments thereon are not due until June, 1914—$811,344 of the amount had been paid up on the 31st of December last. The total Paid-Up Capital of the Bank was, on that date, $5,811,344.

To meet the requirements of Section 56, Subsection 6, of the new Bank Act, you are now asked to elect auditors to serve until the next Annual General Meeting, and two written nominations have already been received in this connection.

You are also requested to sanction the passing of new By-Laws, necessitated by changes in the Bank Act and the advisability of having them more fully meet present circumstances.

Branches were opened in 1913, as follows:—

New Westminster, B. C.
Fairview, Vancouver, B.C.
Fernwood, Victoria, B.C.
Medicine Hat, Alta.
Arlington Street, Winnipeg, Man.
Walkerville, Ontario.
Danforth Avenue, Toronto and Eglinton Avenue, Toronto.

The offices at North Vancouver, B.C., and Guernsey, Sask., were closed, as existing conditions did not warrant their continuance.

Very satisfactory progress is being made in the erection of the new Head Office building at the corner of King and Yonge Streets, Toronto, and it is confidently expected that the premises will be ready for occupation before the end of the year.

The customary thorough Inspections of the Head Office and Branches have been made, including the verification by your Directors of the Balance Sheet now presented.

All the Assets of the Bank have been carefully scrutinized by the Directors and Officials, and its Investment Securities are carried on the Books at conservative values.

E. B. OSLER, President.

Toronto, 28th January, 1914.

The Report was adopted.

In conformity with Section 56, Subsection 6, of the New Bank Act, Messrs. Geoffrey T. Clarkson and Robert J. Dilworth were appointed Auditors for the current year.

New By-Laws were submitted and passed by the Shareholders.

The thanks of the Shareholders were tendered to the President, Vice-President and Directors for their services during the year, and to the General Manager and other Officers of the Bank for the efficient performance of their respective duties.

The following gentleman were duly elected Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. A. W. Austin, W. R. Brock, James Carruthers, R. J. Christie, J. C. Eaton, J. J. Foy, K.C., M.L.A., W. D. Matthews, A. M. Nanton, E. W. Hamber, H. W. Hutchinson, and Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P., was elected President, and Mr. W. D. Matthews, Vice-President, for the ensuing term.

Blinding Headaches From Catarrhal Irritation Now Quickly Cured

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With All This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old-fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headache. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh and grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Dawdling Over Dinner No Longer Good Form

By Ann Marie Lloyd

WHOEVER dines out much has noticed for several seasons a tendency to shorter and simpler menus. The present season has emphasized this to such an extent that the chefs whose earning capacity depend upon their ability to keep up interest in food are quite discouraged at the apparent indifference to unusual dishes.

There is no longer the dawdling over the dinner which was once the rule. There are two reasons advanced for the change. People want to eat and get through with it and have more time for the tango, or they dance so much between courses that they are unmindful of their food. Then, too, since the world has grown more abstemious the tendency has extended from drinking to eating. It is no longer good form to gorge one's self. And if one would keep young it is contrary to reason.

So many dinners and luncheons start with the fruit cocktail that it is well to have the exact proportions of this most agreeable concoction in mind. Grape fruit, oranges, pineapples and bananas are the fruits most often used, but white grapes and maraschino cherries, or berries may be added at will.

Here is one of the rules of a famous chef in the employ of a man noted the world over for his dinners:

"Take one cup of grape fruit, being sure to remove all the skin, one-half cup of orange pulp and bananas and a third of a cup of pineapple which has been finely shredded with a silver fork.

"Mix, and if you like it, add a dash of maraschino. Let stand for a few minutes. Melt half a tumbler of currant jelly, add the juice of a large lemon and sweeten to taste with powdered sugar.

"It is well to add the sugar to the jelly while it is melting over the fire and then the lemon juice as you remove it. Pour the sauce over the fruit while it is still hot, and chill in the ice box. Serve in tall glasses which come for the purpose."

Another rule for these delicious cocktails adds canned and diced peaches, a mixture of the juice of two oranges and one lemon, and a small glass of the best sherry. Sweeten with powdered sugar.

Grape fruit sometimes replaces the fruit cocktail. It is easy to prepare grape fruit if you have the right kind of a knife to loosen the pulp, remove the core and seeds. This may be purchased in any place where kitchen cutlery is sold, and is the most useful implement the cook can have.

When the grape fruit is in proper eating shape add powdered sugar and let stand in the ice box for an hour or so with a maraschino cherry crowning it. If the flavor of maraschino is particularly fancied, a bit may be poured over the fruit. Sherry may be used in the same way.

One of the most attractive of fruit salads is poinsetta salad. Take a slice of canned pineapple and arrange it on a lettuce leaf. Cut wedge-shaped slices from red apples and place three, skin side up, radiating from the centre of the pineapple. Between the apple use single dates. Put a red maraschino cherry at the centre and serve with mayonnaise dressing to which has been added whipped cream.

Folklore Signs and Omens

By Elizabeth Hayward

TINGLING in the ears denotes that some one is talking about you. If the tingling is in the right ear it is a friend speaking well of you; if it is the left, it is an enemy speaking ill. This is an old superstition.

Shakespeare in "Much Ado About Nothing" makes Beatrice say to Ursula and Hero, who have been talking about her, "What fire is in my ears?" Long before that, Pliny notes the same, "When one's ears tingle some one is talking of us in our absence." Sir Thomas Browne, an authority on folklore, ascribes this to an ancient belief that our guardian angel touches the right or left ear according to whether the conversation is good or evil in purport.

Among the Scotch peasantry there is a belief in the "death bell," a tingling in the ear which forebodes the death of a friend. Hogg, the Scotch poet, alludes to this in "The Mountain Bard":

Oh Lady, 'tis dark and I heard the death bell,
An' I darena gae yonder for gowd nor fee.

An itching of the nose in our grandmothers' days gave indication that a stranger would appear before many hours had passed. Dekker, an early writer, says: "We shall have guests today, my nose itcheth." An old English superstition was to the effect that if the nose itched it was a sign that the person would be vexed or kissed by a fool before the day was ended. With the Germans it was a sign that one would drink wine with a friend.

A child born with a blue vein across the nose was born to an early death. Bleeding at the nose was a sign that the person was in love. This omen is still current in many parts of the country.

In a book published in the 17th century the maid says scornfully to her too presumptuous lover, "'Did my nose ever bleed when I was in your company?' and, poor wretch, just as she spoke thus, to show her true heart, her nose fell ableeding."

It must also at times have had a more ominous portent, for Launcelot in "The Merchant of Venice," says: "It was not for nothing that my nose fell ableeding on Black Monday last at 6 o'clock."

Itching of the right eye is a lucky omen. It must be a very old sign, as we find Theocritus saying: "My right eye itcheth; I shall soon see my love." Grose, the antiquary, puts it: "When the right eye itcheth the party affected will shortly cry; if the left they will laugh."

There is an old saying that "It is a good thing to have the eyebrows meet as the wearer will never know trouble." Among the peasants of continental Europe, however, a different significance is attached to this peculiarity, as indicated by an old couplet:

Trust not the man whose eyebrows meet
For in his heart you'll find deceit.

To dream about teeth is a warning that sorrow of some kind is at hand. Even worse it is to dream about one's own teeth falling out. When baby sheds his first teeth they should be thrown into the fire to insure the new teeth coming in properly. Teeth set wide apart betoken prosperity.

Hair, whether cut from the head or falling out, should be buried—else the birds might use it in building their nests, which is sure to bring ill luck to the one who lost it. If the bird chanced to be a magpie it foretold death within twelvemonth.

As with the eye and ear, it was considered ominous when the cheek itched or tingled. If it was the right cheek it was a sign that some one was speaking to the person's advantage; if the left, it was with malice. An old charm, still recited under such circumstances, runs as follows:

Right cheek, left cheek, why do you burn?
Cursed be she that doth me any harm;
If she be a maid, let her be staid,
If she be a widow, long let her mourn;
But if it be my own true love—burn, cheek burn.

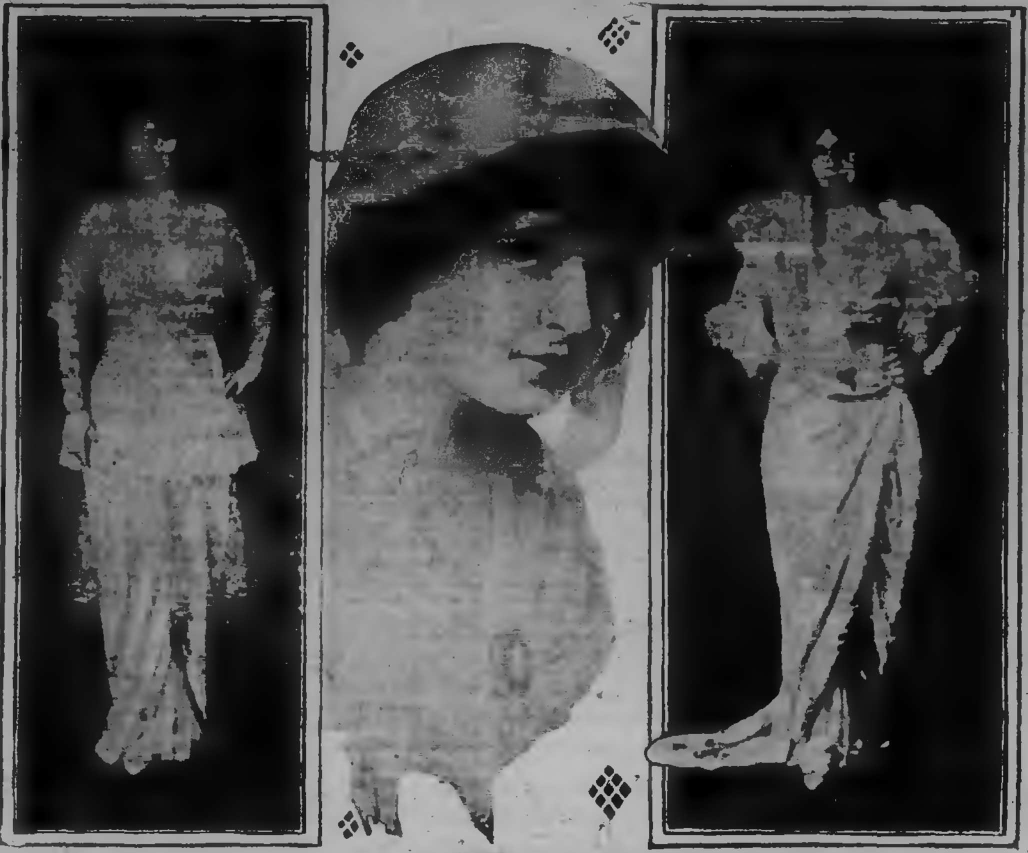
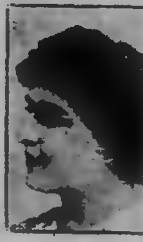
FASCINATING "OFF STAGE" FROCKS



MARGUERITE CLARK

"Study Clothes Carefully," Miss Clark's Creed

By MADGE MARVEL.



STAGE clothes have a never-ending fascination for the average woman. What the star wears is of importance secondary only to the plot of the play in the mind of most theatregoers.

But the most interesting frocks worn by the popular actress are the ones her admiring public seldom sees. They are the costumes that make up her private wardrobe, in which she appears when she is herself and not the play woman. The stage gowns necessarily partake more of the personality of the role the wearer interprets than of her own individuality. Her personal clothes are the expression of her real self.

It is safe to say the majority of actresses furnish the inspiration for the gowns which they wear in private life. They are therefore the more interesting.

Consider the costumes shown in the accompanying illustrations.

They are gowns which Marguerite Clark has just added to her "off stage" clothes collection, and they are especially valuable in that they give a splendid idea of the type of dress that the small woman may wear with success. Miss Clark is so dainty and petite that she has to avoid many of the styles which are so becoming to her statuesque sisters. She has made the problem of correct clothes for women of her size one for personal solution, and she is willing to pass the news on.

"The first thing to learn is what to avoid," she says. "You must beware of the brocades with gorgeous colorings and the stuffs that have the air of magnificence we all love. Then you must remember that in making your frocks the dainty things that suit your style you must not give the impression of neutrality and insipidity. They must be just as distinctive as those made of the bolder fabrics. They must make us appear the persons we would like to be, as well as the persons we are."

In "Prunella," Miss Clark's present success, she has no chance to wear anything but "kiddie" clothes. As a result, she confesses she never spent so much time planning her "real" clothes.

It is part of her dress creed that one needs comparatively few frocks to be well dressed, but a lot of thought must be put into buying the right ones.

The afternoon gown shown would be quite as delightful for a debutante of any size as it would for a small woman. It shows the new combination of charmeuse and figured taffeta, which is to be very smart this spring. The skirt with its long, admirable lines and slight draping is of ice blue charmeuse. The bodice and tunic is of taffeta in the fresh, soft shade of green which blends so beautifully with that particular shade of blue. And it is strewn with little flowers in pink and blue and yellow—a good many yellow ones.

A corner of the velvety lawn, with the morning sun slanting across the multi-hued posies that dot it might have furnished the pattern. There is a double tucked-up draping and a sash of primrose yellow and a rolling revers collar of the silk turning back from an inner vestee of white embroidered net, and where the revers joins the sash there are some velvet pansies in yellow and deep purple.

Black lace and malines make the hat with a straying wreath of button roses and an upstanding fan of malines at the back.

Blush pink, so faint that it has the merest suggestion of color, is chosen for the evening frock, which is draped and caught up in front with a pink rose over a petticoat of pleated chiffon.

There is a tunic of white silk net lengthened with a deep flounce of silver lace which also forms the sleeves and part of the bodice, the white net over flesh tulle forming the vest. The folded sash is of three shades of pink. Floating about the shoulders is a scarf of pale pink tulle.

To wear over this very charming model is a wrap of dull rose and gold brocade lined with lighter rose silk, which is puffed about the edge. Swansdown is used for the collar and sleeve finish, and little pink chiffon roses dot its fluffiness here and there.

Cooking Experiments

I ALWAYS fancied women had an instinct or a sixth sense about cooking problems, just as a boy knows how to throw a ball, or fly a kite, or hit a nail. I guess I'm wrong. Mary and I have had a laughable experience, though I must confess there were tears in it for Mary.

It all grew out of our entertaining mother and dad at dinner. I arrived home early and found Mary industriously beating cream for dessert.

"What," said I smiling, "are we making?"

I'm an old-fashioned chap. The sight of a woman in a white apron cheerfully engaged in a household task puts me in an excellent humor with the world at large. And it pleased me that Mary was taking so much pains to please mother and dad.

Mary frowned and consulted a large, business-like cookbook.

"Peter," she said, "I'm making charlotte russe and I never made it before. Do come and help me."

Nothing loathe, I struggled into another apron and kissed Mary where the soft color in her cheek was highest.

"Just beat the cream," begged Mary, "while I read over this recipe."

I did. Mary read the recipe very carefully.

"One half p—k of gelatine," she read aloud. "The printing's awfully indistinct, Peter. Some of it is so blurred that I can't read it. Doesn't a half pack of gelatine seem an awful lot for that little bit of cream?"

"It certainly does," I exclaimed. "A half a peck of gelatine sounds too much for most anything."

Mary read again.

"Well," she said, "I certainly see the letters p—k very distinctly and certainly they stand for peck. I haven't got a half a peck of gelatine in the house, but I'll put in all I have."

We rummaged the pantry and discovered two packages and a half of gelatine which Mary, per instructions in the book, dissolved in water and poured into the cream. Having piled the delectable mess upon pieces of sponge cake, we carefully deposited it in the ice-box with a feeling of awe. For it really was a beautiful piece of culinary architecture and well worth our admiring satisfaction.

I shall never forget the terrible moment when we came to that dessert. The two packages and a half of gelatine had put in some deadly work. The cream was a tough, swollen sponge of white, which wobbled ridiculously as I bore it to the table.

I wanted to laugh, but I didn't dare. Mary's eyes were tragic. I'm not sure that we had a knife that could have contended successfully with that rubbery mass upon the sponge-cake. Dad made queer noises in his throat, I thought, but mother's eyes, as usual, were sympathetic. She knew well enough that it was one of the little tragedies of humdrum life which sometimes hurt.

Mary's lip quivered and the tears welled swiftly to her eyes. What a spoiled child she is!

"And I wanted it to be so nice!" she faltered. "Indeed, I did, didn't I, Peter? And the recipe really said a half a peck of gelatine."

"Half a peck!" exclaimed mother, aghast. "Sure it wasn't half a package, Mary?"

Mary and I stared hopelessly at one another and dad made another singular noise in his throat. There were tears of real disappointment in Mary's eyes, but she blinked them bravely back and smiled suddenly at us with a wistful pathos.

How much easier it would have been if someone had only troubled to teach Mary cooking before our marriage instead of letting her learn through such dreadful disappointments. Why don't engaged girls fall to and take a course in cooking and housework?

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am very fond of company. I am rather pretty and my friends tell me that I am very graceful, but I am so shy that I don't know what to do with myself whenever I get out among people. I can think of plenty of things to say when I am at home, but the minute I am in company I am so afraid I will make a mistake and give people a chance to laugh at me that I can't speak a word.

What shall I do about it? My mother says it is a sign of a sweet character for a girl to be shy, but my brother says it's a sign of a chump. Which do you think is right?

SWEET AND TWENTY.

WELL, little Sweet and Twenty, I am afraid I'm inclined to agree with brother.

I have known some very nice, clever, kindly, big-hearted, big-minded people who were shy, but they weren't in the habit of thinking much about it.

As a rule, however, the average case of shyness is just a case of overweening self-consciousness. If you'll stop thinking about yourself for a few minutes and think about what the other people are saying, you'll find it a great relief. You aren't half so important as you are afraid to think. Nobody is watching you like a lynx; nobody is sitting with bated breath trying to get a chance to laugh at you; and as to the laughing, can't you laugh yourself? It's a great accomplishment—the laughing habit—try to cultivate it. It will take up your attention.

If people do laugh at you, anyway—is there anything so terrific in that?

What's the matter with you, little girl, is that you've just discovered yourself. And you're so interested in the discovery that you can't get your mind on anything else.

No doubt you are pretty and bright and sweet as a peach, as somehow I read between the lines of your letter that you feel that you are—but, dear me, you're just one in thousands—only one. The whole world isn't standing around waiting to see you go by. Honestly, it isn't, little sister.

So take courage, be kind, be good-natured, be friendly, be sorry for the other people a little while, and the first thing you know you will forget all about being "shy."

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Fidelity of Memory Is Dependent Upon Health

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright 1914 by L. K. Hirshberg

DR. L. K. HIRSHBERG

MEMORY is the privy council of imagination. It is the sub-treasury of the intellect, to be drawn upon for gold coin of the realm. Memory is the inexhaustible origin of reason and the end of experience.

Lord Macaulay is said to have had a memory which put dictionaries and historians to shame, while Magliabechi of Florence, who flourished in the latter part of the 16th century, was called the Universal Index and Living Cyclopaedia.

P. J. Beronicius, the Greek and Latin improvisator, who knew by heart Horace, Virgil, Cicero, Juvenal, both the Plinys, Homer and Aristophanes, lived at Middleburgh until 1676. But even he was outdone by Andrew Fuller, who, after he heard 500 lines twice, could repeat them without a mistake. He could also repeat verbatim forward and again backward almost any short thing he read, any sermon or speech, and could do the same with every shop sign from the Temple to the extreme end of Cheapside, as well as the articles displayed.

It is no great feat to train your memory almost to equal these ancient fellows. Nowadays, with the newer psychological experiments at your finger ends, everybody ought to be a Grand Panjandrum with his aids and subalterns, the Picininnies, Joblillies and Garyulies running him a close second.

Health with a Big H.

It is not necessary to study as hard as Gargantua intended his super-Gargantuan giant of a son, Pantagruel, to do in order to acquire a good memory. More is known now than Rabelais's last Titan knew.

Lulled in the countless chambers of the brain,
Our thoughts are linked by many a hidden chain;
Awake but one, and lo, what myriads rise!
Each stamps its image as the other flies.

Memory is a complex of accurate or inaccurate, if your eyes, ears, muscles and skin are in the slightest degree below par or defective—representations of objects, words, events and combinations of these which your common senses take in.

This sounds fearful. Yet it is showing you in plain words what you must do to train your power of observing.

The fidelity of your memory depends upon the perfection of vision, skill, hearing and the other sensations, the firmness with which their ideas are stored away in your tissues—the brain may be only a way station or telephone exchange—and the facility with which you can summon to your command the things you have thus previously experienced.

Thus, memory primarily depends upon health, with a big H.

First, be convinced, however much you hate me at the words, that your memory is shockingly treacherous and faulty. Indeed, your memory is as false as your eyesight, audition and muscular adeptness is below par.

How to Improve Memory.

No person, no matter how successful he has been financially, socially or otherwise, has a trustworthy memory if his muscles, emotions and feelings have been neglected at a cost of the mere supremacy of his eyes and ears.

Just as muscular and touch sensations which are associated with pain are better remembered than other experiences, objects and concrete experiences are stored away better than mere words.

One of the tricks by which you can improve your memory after your muscles, brain, eyes, ears, mouth, nose, skin and throat have been restored to 100 per cent of health is to associate and link up every new thing you read, hear, see, feel, move and sense with some well remembered object or experience.

Thus, if a Pundit comes along and tells you of the new microbe which explodes like dynamite you naturally wish to know and recollect its name. Well, there is such a fungus. It is called microsporea pilliobolus. It was just discovered the other day, but I shall always remember it because "micro" means small and spores means it forms little egg sperms. It is a rather hard "pill" or "bolus" even for a savant to swallow, but this microsporea pillobolus is retained in the Widow's Cruse of the memory.

Answers to Health Questions

Mrs. S.—My eyes burn me all the time and I have headaches. I just had new glasses. What is wrong?

Visit an eye specialist, not a jeweller-optician, and have him re-examine your eyes. Very often an over-correction, or even an exact correction of the eyes, exaggerates the trouble. Eyeglasses slightly short of absolute accuracy are often better for the eyes than a precisely mathematical correction.

Anxious—Can moles be removed without leaving a scar?

Yes and no. Moles that are removed and then replaced with fresh skin-grafts leave hardly any scars. The removal of many thin surface moles leaves red blotches, which fade completely away after six months or so.

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

BRER RABBIT had forgotten all about putting cotton in his ears and he did not know that Mister Jay Bird had filled it full of burrs, when he walked into the kitchen of his home. Mrs. Rabbit was there and when she saw him she gave one shriek:

"Get out of here!" and with that she reached for the broom.

"Do not be afraid," pleaded Brer Rabbit. "I am your husband."

"What!" exclaimed Mrs. Rabbit. "My husband with ears, or whatever they are, looking like that? Never! You are a walking bramble bush." She threw a broom at poor Brer Rabbit and just missed his head.

Mister Jay Bird had hopped alongside of the window so that he could hear all that was said. When Brer Rabbit came out he saw Mister Jay Bird and asked him: "What on earth is the matter with me?"

"Your ears are filled with cotton," said Mister Jay Bird.

"Is that all?" asked Brer Rabbit anxiously.

"No, the cotton in your ears is filled with burrs and you look like a brier patch."

"That's what my wife says," whined Brer Rabbit. "She doesn't seem to know me. How does it come that YOU know me? I guess YOU put these burrs in my ears. It's Friday, too, the day you are always up to mischief."

Just then Judge Bear came along and he asked Mister Jay Bird: "What is that you are talking to?"

"That is Brer Rabbit. Don't you recognize him?"

"Ha! ha!" exclaimed the Judge. "He looks like a cotton field with a brush pile in the middle."

Mrs. Rabbit came to the door just then and said:

"How dare you talk about my husband like that?"

"My dear wife knows me now," shouted Brer Rabbit as he tried to put his arms around Mrs. Rabbit.

"No, no," began Mrs. Rabbit. "Go out and roll in the brier patch first and get all that garden out of your ears."

"Now you scat!" said Mrs. Rabbit to Judge Bear and Mister Jay Bird and they did not wait to see Brer Rabbit come back.

France might reckon Thackeray, along with Edward, the king of sunny memories, as the most Parisian of Britons, for truly did Titmarsh know and love the life of the boulevards, ebbing and flowing between the Bastile and the Bois, the cafes and the theatres, himself most aptly described by his own lines:

FREAK APPETITES.

Animal Repasts Have Been Both Queer and Costly.

Cat-owners have written of cats which liked parsnips and jam-tarts, and others which revelled in mushrooms, tomatoes, and coconut cake.

But it has remained to Devonport to produce a pussy which feasted on hatpins. The landlord of the Friendship Inn at Devonport has a cat which swallowed a nine-inch hatpin, head first, and the point of which was found sticking out of the poor creature's head. A veterinary surgeon operated, and the victim is convalescent.

A cat belonging to a farmer at Ballina, New South Wales, taught itself to catch fish, and would dive into the sea and bring out mullet, which it ate with delight. Alas! its angling career was ended by a hungry shark.

A bullock butchered at Hadleigh seems to have been training itself to emulate the ostrich. In its stomach were found over ninety pieces of bricks, two nails, and a fair-sized lump of iron. The pieces of brick, some of which were as large as a hen's egg, were worn perfectly smooth, and one of the nails had pieced the coat of the stomach; yet the animal was fat, and in good condition.

About two years ago a dog-owner was summoned by the S.P.C.A. for cruelty to his dog. It was proved that he had given it biscuits soaked in whisky, and that the animal had fallen dead. In the evidence it was stated by a veterinary surgeon that quite a number of animals have a taste for this form of refreshment.

Mons. Beron, a Parisian hatter, whose shop is in the Boulevard de Belleville, was justly proud of the fine array of Panama hats which adorn his premises the summer before last. One afternoon in July, an returning to his shop after a short absence, he found a horse inside, busily devouring the last of a row of ten of his best hats. These hats were worth about $20 apiece. So the hungry horse's meal was worth a good deal more than the animal itself.

Talking of expensive meals, a most extraordinary claim was made against the National Bank of Belgium. An old peasant woman had laid on the grass her jacket, in the pocket of which were banknotes to the value of $250, her life-savings.

While she was at work, her pet goat got at the coat, and ate part of it, including the notes.

The meal was poor nanny's last. She was killed, the chewed remains of the notes were recovered from the stomach, and the bank, after verifying the facts by chemical analysis, paid the claim.

Here is another goat story too good too lose. Mme. Poisson, a widow, dropped a banknote for $20 in the Rue de Vanguard, in Paris. A man leading a goat was pointed out to her as having picked it up.

"It is quite true," said the man; "and I was going to give it back, when my goat snatched it and swallowed it."

The lady called the man a thief, and the lady, man, and goat were taken to a police-station. The man's story was disbelieved, and, in desperation, he told them to kill the goat and look inside it.

This was done, and, sure enough, the remains of the note were found. The owner then claimed for the loss of his goat, the widow refused to pay, and there followed an action for false arrest, slander, and compensation.

Jack Frost Hurled It Down Into the Yosemite Valley.

Delicate frost tracings on the window panes seem to be the work of fanciful and harmless sportiveness, but the hand that forms them is capable of greater deeds and of other kinds. Mr. J. Smeaton Chase, in "Yosemite Trails," describes an experience that must have been wonderfully impressive to the spectator. He had been spending some weeks in exploring the Yosemite valley and the "great rocks," like El Capitan, that wall it in.

Standing one day of late autumn about the middle of the valley, I was startled by a report like a cannon shot, which filled the whole valley with echoes that roared and boomed, replied and multiplied, in a long continued, glorious tumult.

As the deafening sound died away in sullen mutterings under the visor of El Capitan I was able to distinguish the point of attack by the long, clattering descent of a vast quantity of rock.

The night had been a cold one in the valley, and on the seven to eight thousand foot levels of the upper rim the temperature must have dropped almost to zero.

Frost, working quietly with his Archimedean lever, had just succeeded in shifting from the shoulder of the sentinel a trifle of fifty tons or so of granite. For near a thousand feet the bowlder fell sheer, swift and silent; then, striking the cliff, it burst like a bomb, shattered into a myriad flying shards and splinters and dislodged a smother of fragments that trickled down to the valley in a stream that lasted for minutes.

Then from the spot where the bowlder had struck dust began to rise into the sunny air, slowly building up and burgeoning like a summer cloud and every whit as snowy. It was the flour of granite, powdered instantaneously by the terrific shock.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months resident upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

To Stop Hiccoughs

Simple cases of hiccough are often relieved by such measures as sucking ice or taking salt and vinegar, says the New York Medical Journal. Pulling the tongue forward and holding it for some time is an effective procedure. Sometimes obstinate hiccough is relieved when the patient is strong by having him hang with the arms extended and grasping some beam or pole, so that his feet do not touch the floor. With all the abdominal muscles tense, have him hold his breath as long as possible. Sneezing is very efficient in certain cases, since it is the exact opposite to hiccough being a sudden expiratory act.

WANDERLUST.

I hear insistent singing in a corner of m. brain
It must
Be the gust
Of the waking wanderlust.
What glimpses it is bringing of the orient—and Spain!
I scan
Quaint Japan
And bejeweled Hindustan.
I sway to rhythmic measures of a melody unknown
"Why thrall,"
Is its call.
"To one land, O lord of all?
You, who yet are straight and strong.
Foot the highway! "Life's not long!
Throw away your shriveled crust!
Waken!" sings the wanderlust.

"See where waters lap the sky.
Slave of poisoned city dust?
Far beyond is bright romance
Where the languid houris sigh.
Spurn the job and lose the chance!
Would you rot?
Would you rust?
Chained and cobwebbed would you die?
Waken!" sings the wanderlust.

"Oh, the breakers now are pounding on a Polynesian shore
To the rip
Of a ship
Throttled in the tempest's grip.
And the booming conch is sounding in the temples of Lahore.
And the lead
Bloody red
Stretches desert bandits dead.
And the slender palms are sighing by a sea of rippled gold
Where guitars
Lift the bars
Of a love song to the stars.
Out—oh, you yet are hale!
Out—to battle with the gale!
Out—to parry foeman's thrust!
Waken!" sings the wanderlust.

See where scarlet sinks the sun.
Slave of poisoned city dust?
Far beyond is where there's life,
Where the reckless deeds are done.
Stolen kiss and gleaming knife—
(Would you rot?
Would you rust?)
Ha, the glint along the gun!
"Waken!" growls the wanderlust.
—Thomas R. Ybarra in New York Times.

It May Be a Mass of Steel Some 5,580 Miles In Diameter.

Various conjectures have been made from time to time by geologists as to the possible condition of the center of the earth. One of the most popular impressions seems to be that the earth's center, or core, is a flaming furnace. At a meeting of the Seismological association at The Hague Professor Weichert asserted that his studies of the varying velocity of earthquake tremors passing through the interior of the globe have led him to the conclusion that the earth consists of a central core of iron or steel, about 5,580 miles in diameter, surrounded with a stony shell 980 miles in thickness. Between the outer solid rind and the inner layer of rock, covering the metallic core, he thinks there is a layer of liquid or plastic material, lying a little less than twenty miles below the surface of the earth.

Men sometimes dream of enormous wealth stored deep in the earth below the reach of miners, but experts now aver that there is little or no ground to believe that any valuable metallic deposits lie very deep in the earth's crust regardless of Professor Weichert's beliefs to the contrary. Such deposits, it is said, are made by underground waters, and owing to the pressure on the rocks at great depths the waters are confined to a shell near the surface. With few exceptions ore deposits become too lean to repay working below 3,000 feet. Nine mines in ten, taking the world as a whole, are poorer in the second thousand feet than in the first thousand, and poorer yet in the third thousand than in the second.—New York World.

A Line on Mother.

"I don't see how I'm ever to get a chance again with this boy around," wailed the little widow with the small son. "The other day a man I like awfully well asked me how old the town was that we came from. The boy spoke up without giving me a chance to put in a word:

"'I don't know just how old it is,' he said, 'but it must be pretty old because mamma was born in it.'"—New York Press.

A JAGUAR HUNT.

British Guiana Man Tells of Struggle That Cost Him Two Dogs.

The following account of a jaguar hunt in British Guiana is contained in a letter to a friend written by Mr. C. J. B. Monypenny, of Endeavor, Demarara River, British Guiana, and appearing in The Field:

"You will, I am sure, be very sorry to hear that I have lost poor Ronald, the half-bred hound! He got killed by a large tiger (jaguar) on Saturday while I was out hunting, accompanied by an Indian and four dogs. I started from Christianburg at 6.30 a.m. to hunt maipouri (tapir), which are said to be fairly plentiful in the back country. We went further than we generally do, as I was determined to try over new ground, having had a lot of black days lately. After walking till 10 a.m. without finding fresh tracks we came out on the railway line about five miles back, where we met some coolies who are employed cutting wallaba wood. These men informed us that they were very much troubled by a large tiger which prowled around their camp at nights, and pointed out the fresh tracks where the brute had crossed the line about five o'clock that morning.

We at once took up the track, the dogs paying great attention to it. It led us up an abandoned timber path and across a creek, and then on to some high land, where the Indian could make nothing of it and the dogs seemed to lose the scene. While casting about we came across fresh signs of maipouri, and, from the excited way in which the dogs took up the trail, was sure of finding the animal. Suddenly the dogs dashed off full cry, and we, being sure they had started the maipouri, followed as fast as we could run. After running for some distance we heard the dogs giving tongue as if they had something at bay, and getting up to them we found they had stopped the tiger in a deep gully with fallen trees lying about, under one of which the brute had lain hidden and attacked the dogs.

A charge of buckshot through the shoulder at ten paces bowled him over but not before he had killed two of the dogs, poor Ronald and the brindled bitch Trial. Both were bitten through the brain. The tiger, a full-grown male, measured just under seven feet, and weighed between 160 and 170 pounds, the largest I have seen up this way. As it was a fine specimen, the Indian and I carried him as far as we could on the way home, but as it was getting late, and we were still over four miles back, we left the beast and came on to get men to assist in bringing him in. When about three miles from Christianburg, the remaining two dogs, Arawak and Comet, started hog, one of which we blocked up in a sand hole (where the dogs had brought him to bay) till we could send for him next morning.

I am convinced that the tiger had been following us, keeping out of sight, with the hope of picking up one of the dogs, and had just crossed the trail of the maipouri which the dogs were working. But for the fact of the brute bolting down into the gully I believe he would not have killed the two dogs. The hound when he took the descent must have run right on to him."

THE CAMPHOR LANGUAGE.

Used in Johore Because of a Malay Superstition.

In Johore, on the Malay peninsula, there is employed one of the strangest languages in the world, used for a most curious purpose. This tongue is called Pantang Kapor or "camphor language," and is a medium employed by natives and others engaged in gathering the product of the Malayan camphor tree, but only when they are at work.

It is a superstition of these natives that should they use the language of the district, the Malay or the aboriginal Jakun, they would be unable to obtain their camphor.

The Malay natives firmly believe that each species of tree has a spirit or guardian angel that presides over its affairs, this spirit being known by the name of Bisan. This divinity's resting place is near the trees. Then, too, the spirit of the camphor tree is held to be extremely jealous of the precious gum, so that it becomes necessary to propitiate her, inasmuch as she would, should she learn that hunters were in quest of it, endeavor to interpose obstacles to their mission. Accordingly the natives speak in a tongue that the tree spirit may not understand. It was for this purpose that the mysterious "camphor language" was invented, and it consists of an odd mixture of Jakun and Malay words that have been curiously altered and reversed.—Harper's Weekly.

Many Historic Customs Dropped Since George IV.'s Coronation.

The crowning of the King of England has usually been accompanied by what was regarded as the still more solemn rite of anointing with oil, which dates from the days of the ancient Hebrews. And in England, before the Norman conquest, the term used was "hallowing," of consecration, rather than that of coronation.

But from old records it seems that the ceremony as then performed at Winchester was in all essentials the same as that which now takes place in Westminster abbey. Few people seem to be aware that the coronation ceremony was the only religious rite of the Anglican Church which escaped the pruning policy of the reformers; hence its impressive ritual and gorgeous pageantries.

The last coronation at which every old world ceremony was duly performed was that of King George IV. At his crowning a coronation banquet took place, there was a procession of peer, the herb strewer scattered flowers, and the challenge of the champion of England was included in the ceremony. But at the coronations of William IV., Queen Victoria and King Edward these old customs were for various reasons omitted.

However, much remains that is of deep interest and stately splendor. The dean and chapter of Westminster claim the right to instruct the sovereign in the duties of this solemn service, and on coronation day the regalia are delivered into their custody.

According to old records, $500 is paid for the anointing oil supplied by the royal apothecary. The coronation chairs are of interest. That of the King is the chair of Edward the Confessor, used by every British sovereign since the time of Edward II. It is of oak and is recovered with fresh crimson velvet on each occasion. Beneath it is placed the stone of destiny, an ancient relic which came originally from Ireland.

The Married Voice.

A dramatic critic has been saying that our most accomplished players cannot reproduce on the stage the "married voice," even when they are married. There is a peculiar domestic note—used at home—which cannot get over the footlights and was never meant for publicity.—London Chronicle.

Soporific.

"I heard one man," said the playwright, "who attended the premiere of my new play last night complain that it was so late when he got out."

"Yes?" queried the critic.

"Yes, and yet the final curtain fell before 10:45."

"Ah, perhaps he overslept himself!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

In Half Mourning.

"I don't understand you, Linda. One day you're bright and jolly and the next depressed and sad."

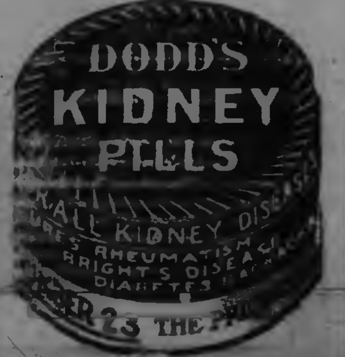
"Well, I'm in half mourning; that's why."—Fliegende Blatter.

Lost Both Ways.

"Did you get in without your wife hearing you last night?"

"No, and I didn't get in without hearing her, either."—Houston Post.

Between friends frequent reproof makes the friendship distant.—Confucius.



Long Training and a Ceaseless Grind of Hard Work Are Theirs.

The modern imperial ballet schools of St. Petersburg and Moscow are under government control, forming, with the theaters and dramatic schools, a department of the ministry of the court. Pupils, both male and female, are entered at the early age of ten years—seldom older. After the necessary nomination has been obtained—by no means an easy matter nowadays—a stringent examination regarding health, strength, beauty of form and natural gracefulness has to be passed before the child is finally accepted. From the time it becomes an inmate the whole of its education, secular and artistic, is taken in hand, and some years of training are necessary before it is considdred ripe to appear in public.

The dancer's life is a ceaseless round of hard work. All, even great artists, when at home take regular daily lessons in addition to the daily rehearsals for the next performance which are demanded, however old and well known the ballet. Thus an average of five to six hours' dancing a day is rather the rule than the exception, popular ballerinas in demand at charity performances and artistic at homes often dancing as much as eight hours in the twenty-four.

Trained artists are kept to design in every detail of period and subject, the dresses, scenery and accessories—a task obviously requiring much imagination and much knowledge—and often as many as 150 personages appear on the stage at the same time. Even the orchestra leaders qualify especially for ballet music, having no place in the orchestra at any other time.—London World.

MacMahon's Epigram.

When Marshal MacMahon in the Crimean campaign took the Malakoff by storm and wrote his celebrated dispatch, "J'y suis; j'y reste" ("Here I am; here I stay"), these words made him famous all over the world. Yet his friends said that the worthy soldier had written them in the most matter of fact manner, with no thought of phrase making. The most surprised person over the success of this epigram was MacMahon himself.

A Charming At-Home:

A very charming function was held at the residence of Inspector and Mrs. Mowat, Brock street, on Saturday afternoon. The function referred to was an at-home for which it is understood 150 invitations had been issued. The hostess, Mrs. Mowat, becomingly attired in black and old rose, received her guests and was assisted by a number of ladies.

A Vesper Service.

Yesterday afternoon a well attended Vesper service was held at the Y.W.C.A. with Mrs. Grey, the efficient secretary in the chair. A charming musical program was rendered, among those contributing to the program were Mrs. Sanderson and Mrs. Ellis, who gave vocal solos, and Miss Laura Logan in a well rendered violin solo.

Milkman Has a Bad Fall.

On Friday Mr. Clifford Curtis, a local milkman, had the misfortune to fall from a windmill in Otonabee. As he fell some 30 feet he sustained some bad bruises. He was, however, we are pleased to note, doing as well yesterday as could be expected in the circumstances.

An Appeal in McClay Case.

A motion for the appeal of the John McClay case was made on Saturday morning by Mr. D. O'Connell, counsel for McClay, who was found guilty by Judge Huycke recently on the charge of supplying drugs to a girl. The appeal will be heard after the sentence of the court has been delivered by the judge, Tuesday morning.

Did He Steal Cutlery?

Saturday's police court Darcy Dunlop was charged with stealing a number of knives, forks and spoons from the Montgomery House. He pleaded not guilty. Dunlop's arrest was caused by Mr. Montgomery who missed some of the knives and forks off the tables at his hotel. P.C's Reid and Hayward brought to light facts that seem to have incriminated Dunlop. His arrest followed.

What promises to be a musical treat is to be given in the Salvation Army Temple to-night. A long varied program will be given by the largest number of musicians that has ever taken part in such a meeting the taken part in such a meeting in the Temple. The band with 44 players, will be assisted by the songsters and the boys' band and the Corps' latest departure, an orchestra.

Poor School Conditions

Lindsay Post: The report of Inspector Stevens was read at Thursday's County Council Session and contained much valuable information. Vast improvement in school buildings and conditions had been made and the average attendance for the year was 6 per cent, but about 20 per cent 19 of the children attended less than 50 percent of the time. Mr. Smale wanted to know the reason of the 20 per cent staying home so much. Mr. Broderick said that it was an appalling state of affairs. The above refers to Victoria County.

Our Lady Curlers.

The local lady curlers have arranged a competition for this week, in which three rinks will participate. The first game will be played to-day between Mrs. Travers and Mrs. Matthews rinks. SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE

Warden Shaw says that something should be done to secure a free market in Peterborough.

On Saturday afternoon the Y.W.C.A. Board spent a very charming "social" hour in that building.

It will interest local housewives that a big drop in the price of cattle is expected soon.

$20,000 is included in the Dominion estimates for improvements to Lindsay's postoffice.

Part of Lindsay's experimental farm is to be sold to Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay.

Eggs sold on the market Saturday at 35 cents a dozen. One matron was heard to say, "Thank the Lord, the farmers are coming to their senses!"

Mr. N. Wilson, inspector for the Underwriters' Association, completed his work of inspecting the local fire fighting equipment on Saturday.

Four building permits have been issued during the past month, aggregating in valuation the sum of $27,900.

Local poultrymen have returned from Gananoque, where they exhibited a number of their birds at the Poultry Show. They made a splendid showing.

"CASCARETS" CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Women will find more news of interest to them in The Times' magazine page every morning than in any other paper.

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable, Depressed?

WHEN THAT LANGUID, LAGGY, EASILY-TIRED FEELING COMES, YOUR LIVER IS SLOW.

Tells How to Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those full feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, langour and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in cleaning up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all others, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

$100 REWARD $1.00

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, there destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WARD NAMES

Suggestions from correspondents regarding names for city suburbs.

(Editor Morning Times)

Dear Sir.—I note that a number of the electors are being interested in your suggestions to give the various sections of the City special names. There have already been some very excellent names suggested, from which a good choice could be made. As you ask for public expression. I would submit the following.

In the South end are situated some of our largest manufacturing plants. How would "Industrial Centre" do for that district?

North, say west from the river to Jackson's Park and North from Inverleigh Park, "Kawartha Gateway." The Kawartha Lakes are known all over this Continent and are visited by thousands every summer. It occurred to me, as Peterborough is the magnet that attracts most of the tourists and excursionists to these waters. And as our City is the nearest point on the Kawartha waters how would it do for Peterborough to show its appreciation of this fact by naming the section of the City refered to "Kawartha Gateway"?

THE LAW ON WILLS

(Editor Morning Times)

Sir.—Will you please let me know what the law is about a man's money when he dies without making a will and leaves a wife, but no children?

Reader.

Reply—A man dying without a will leaving widow but no children, the widow is first entitled to $1,000 out of the estate, then one-half of the rest of the estate and the rest goes to his natural heirs, as mother, brothers, sisters, etc. If his estate, after paying expenses, does not exceed $1,000, the widow takes all.—Ed.

OUR SNOW PLOUGHING

(Editor Morning Times)

Sir.—Of late I have noticed many complaints as to the way in which the snow ploughing is done on our side walks. I am out fairly early, and up to the present I have had no reason to complain of the work of the snow ploughs. What I have noticed is that on streets where the trees are close to the pavement, part only of the snow is removed, which makes it difficult at times to keep on the walk. Where these conditions exist I don't think it would be very much of a hardship for the tenant to remove the small amount of snow that is left on the inside of the sidewalk. It seems to me that if the proper officials would look into this and see that the occupant of homes where these conditions prevail would remove the snow the cause of most of the trouble would be removed.

ASKS $10,000 FROM CITY FOR TUBERCULOSIS SANITARIUM

City's Assessment in Five Years Increases $2,000,000, of This Schools Get the Rate on $1,500,000, the City But $500,000, Says Ald Anderson—Sale of Cigarettes to Be Licensed

The City Fathers met in regular monthly session last night, his worship Mayor Buller presiding. There were also in attendance Aldermen McIntyre, Anderson, Langford, Johnston, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Stratton, Duncan and Saunders.

Relief Officer F. W. Miller's application for increase in salary was referred to the Finance Committee.

The 57th Regimental Band's request that their annual grant of $500 be increased to $700 went to the Finance Committee.

WOMEN'S FRANCHISE.

The married Women's Municipal Franchise Association, of Toronto, wrote asking Council's expression in favor of married women holding property being permitted to vote at municipal elections, a resolution to this effect to be forwarded to the Legislature. Referred to the Legal Committee.

A representative deputation from the Peterborough Health Association was introduced by Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., president of the Association, who asked that the city contribute $10,000 toward the cost of a hospital in which tuberculosis can be treated. The association guarantees to raise a similar amount. Experience show, said Mr. Peck, that tuberculosis cannot be stamped out by isolation and special treatment. Hence the Peterborough Health Association has concluded that a sanitarium for the treatment of this disease in this district is badly needed. He was optimistic that were such a sanitarium erected under the auspices of the Health Association—not a municipal institution—benevolent contributions to such an institution would be so large that the municipality would be called upon for but very little assistance toward its maintenance.

Rev. Mr. Webb enthusiastically endorsed the proposition, and incidentally remarked that were the city to contribute the $10,000 asked, the collection of same could be extended over 10 years—$1,000 each year.

Dr. Neill delivered a clear and concise address on tuberculosis, in the course of which he stated that during the last four years 118 deaths in Peterborough City had been due to this dread disease; and of all deaths between the ages of 20 and 30, one out of each three is due to tuberculosis. The average age at which males die from tuberculosis is 37½ years, females 33 years. Dr. Neill emphatically asserted that tuberculosis is communicable, and advanced sufferers should be isolated; it is however, curable. Hamilton, in its campaign against the disease has reduced its mortality 50 per cent. To Ald. Gordon, Dr. Neill replied that the careful and educated consumptive is not dangerous, from a point of contraction to fellow citizens.

Ald. Gordon moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton,—That provision be made in the city's bill to go to the Legislature, asking permission for the city to contribute $10,000 towards the erection of a tuberculosis sanitarium, at such time as Council by by-law may direct, should the Health Association then have $10,000 in cash and assurance from the Ontario Government of another $4,000.—Carried.

This matter will be more fully discussed in Committee of the Whole.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S GRANT.

President Harry Beal asked Council for as liberal a grant as possible this year. In 1913 their grant from the city was $900. This request went to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Cowan stated that the Horticultural Society is considering advance operations in the direction of beautifying Peterborough, including a civic driveway throughout the city. Hence a $1,000 this year would be much appreciated.

SCHOOL BOARD'S DEMANDS.

Dr. Morrison, W. Eastwood and J. J. Turner, jr. were present and explained the reason for the increased demand this year of $8,200, as published in report of Board of Education's last session of 1913.

Dr. Morrison contended that when the School Board fails to ask an increased demand it will be a dark day for Peterborough. The increase in pupils last years was 224, calling for five new rooms; the increase in pupils since 1908 has been 473. In 1908 there were 70 teachers and officials on the school's staff at a total salary of $31,578; in 1913 teachers and officials numbered 90 with a total salary of $50,048. In 1908, the city's rate was 17 mills, of which 6.16 mills were for school purposes; in 1913 the city's rate was 25 mills, the rate for schools being 7.74, which makes in five years an increase of but two mills for educational purposes, including 68 mills for sinking fund.

Dr. Morrison offered the foregoing in answer to previous criticisms by Council of the School Board being answerable for a very large proportion of the increase in the tax rates.

In reply to Dr. Morrison, Finance Minister Ald. Anderson, credited the members of the School Board with being men of keen business acumen, and working faithfully and acceptably in the educational interests of this city. Still, as Chairman Dr. Morrison of the School Board in his inaugural address had taken exception to his (Ald. Anderson's) contention that the School Board was responsible for a big amount of the increase in taxation, he must reiterate his contention, and point out that Dr. Morrison's figures presented to Council do not fully answer the expenditure controversy "City Council re School Board. It is worthy of note that all criticism of Council and the tax rate seems to hinge on the wonderful year 1908, when the rate was 17 mills. Well, if the Council of 1913 had folded their arms, made no public improvements; closed the fire hall and the police station, and refused all demands for expenditure on the streets, etc., the tax rate would then have been 20 mills the $. And this year, when people are clamoring for economy, it might be as well to sound a note of warning to the many bodies seeking grants and appropriations that Council must cut wide and deep to keep down the rate, as already there are demands in sight that would more than eat up our increase in revenue. In reply to Dr. Morrison's presentation of the School Board's responsibility for increase in the rate, Ald. Anderson went on to say that in 1908, the school Board's rate was 7.93, the city's rate 9.27 mills; in 1913 the Board's rate was 9.99 mills the city's 15.01, an increase in five years of 2.22 mills for school purposes and 5.74 for municipal requirements. But that is not all! The School Board has kept apace with the assessment. In 1908 the city's assessment was eight and a half millions, in 1913 ten and a half millions; an increase in five years of two million dollars. $2,000,000 assessment produces $50,000 revenue, of which the School Board has received $36,625.95. That is to say, if the $2,000,000 increase in assessment in five years school requirements have eaten up the rate on $1,500,000; leaving the city the revenue on but $500,000 to meet its increased municipal calls. While handing out bouquets to the School Board for their executive ability and fruitful work in educational matters, Ald. Anderson reiterated his contention that school demands have been responsible for a large proportion of the big jump in the tax rate since 1908. The city has been working practically on an increased assessment the past five years of half a million bucks, and the school board on a million and a half dollars. And the Finance Minister respectfully offered that a reversal of these figures might reasonably have been expected. If all other civic departments were treated as liberally as the Board of Education there would be a very much higher rate than 25 mills. "The Board say they are bound down by the legislature as to school conditions and expenditure. If that is so, Council, should seek legislation to restrict that expenditure where considered practicable and advisable.

Dr. Morrison and Ald. Anderson here measured briefly swords on the above figures, the former intimating than an oversight had been made in their application, in the city's favor.

Ald. Anderson did not admit this, claiming that the same rule had been applied to both administrations alike.

Ald. Johnston thought the discussion in a friendly way, well timed, as throwing light on the situation. However, the School Board's demands are provided for in the Finance report and the matter might as well drop.

In contradistinction to Mr. Eastwood's contention that the Board's expenditure is governed by legislation, Ald. Gordon pointed out that no legislation applies to the Board's schedule of salaries.

Ald. Anderson also questioned if the Board may not be paying for higher qualified teachers than necessary to teach some of the forms. Naturally the higher qualification a teacher possesses the more salary expected.

Dr. Morrison replied that Peterborough must have a good teaching staff, and in order to get them salaries commensurate with those paid in comparative cities must be provided. A salary schedule to this end is in force. Naturally, some teachers have reached the maximum rate, while others grade teachers than necessary for requirements are employed.

This ended the discussion.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE REPORT

Ald. Langford submitted the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Property Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

That the final payment on the Incinerator contract be not made until the building is left in a finished condition according to the specifications and a surety bond satisfactory to the City Solicitor is furnished.

That the Chairman of this Committee get a description of the land on Gilmour street at the corner of Fabb's Lane and report to this committee.

That the owner of the house on Sherbrooke street on the lot purchased by the city, be notified by the Clerk to move the house off the lot and that R. Sheehy be notified to move his material off the lot purchased from him, on instructions from the Chairman of the Board of Works.

That this Committee look into the feasibility of establishing a municipal milk depot and report to Council.

That the licensing of scavengers be considered and that the licensing of the milk vendors and the boarding houses be referred to the Sanitary Inspector before the licenses are issued.

That the matter of a small-pox hospital and a municipal abattoir be further considered by this committee.

The report was adopted.

THE CIGARETTE QUESTION.

Ald. Anderson gave notice that at next Council meeting he would introduce a by-law to regulate the selling of cigarettes by imposing a license of $40.

READJUSTMENT.

Ald. Stratton gave notice that at next meeting he would move a resolution for readjusting the staffs of the City Clerk, the Treasurer and the Engineering Department so as to bring them under the supervision of the City Council. Also to provide an assistant for the City Clerk.

MEMBER OF CITY TRUST.

Ald. Johnston moved that Mr. Jas. Kendry be appointed a member of the City Trust.

In amendment Ald. Gordon moved that Mr. W. H. Bradburn receive the appointment.

The appointment went to ex-Mayor W. H. Bradburn on the ground of his intimate association with the city's business.

Ald. Johnston and Langford moved a resolution in appreciation of Mr. Burnham's (West Peterborough's representative at Ottawa) success in securing from the Government the expenditure of so much money on public work in Peterborough, and also sufficient appropriation for the completion of the Trent Valley Canal.—Carried.

MAY NOT INCREASE SALARIES

Ald. Gordon suggested that the Medical Health Officer's salary be increased $200 and that of the Sanitary Inspector by a like amount. The former gets $900 a year, the latter $700.

Ald. Anderson drew attention to the fact that this year the increase in revenue will be $16,000. The increases against this already are $8000 for schools, $4000 for debentures, $3000 or $4000 for the Fire Department and an increase for the police department. These will more than eat up the $16,000 additional revenue.

In connection with demands for increases in salaries, his worship remarked that if the rate is to be kept down to 25 mills, Council will have to stand firm and keep salaries where they are this year. "So far as I am concerned, I am not going to endorse increases in the salaries of higher officials at the expense of the workingman, in whose interests I am going to advocate to the best possible advantage."

This question was left in abeyance.

ATLANTIC RATE WAR IS EFFECTIVE TO-DAY

Reduction is $4 a Ticket—Kaiser's Intervention Vain.

New York, Feb. 2.—Attempts to heal the breach between the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-American Lines having failed, and the period covered in their agreement having expired on Saturday, Jan. 31, the rate war for the steerage traffic on the trans-Atlantic lines may be said to be on.

The first move in the war, effective to-day, is the reduction of steerage rates by the Hamburg-American Line to $25 flat for all classes of vessels, a reduction of more than $4 a ticket. This cut will probably be promptly met by other lines.

UNIONISTS PLAN TO KILL LIBERAL LAWS

London Times Writer Resigns and Discloses Scheme to Nullify Legislation.

London, Feb. 2.—Somewhat of a sensation has been caused in political circles by the resignation of A. P. Nicholson, who for many years who has been Chief Parliamentary correspondent of the Times. Nicholson has given up one of the prize positions in the London press because he was unable to accept certain methods whereby the Unionist party in Parliament intend to carry on their campaign against the Liberal Government, and which method as a writer for the Times he would have been required to present in a favorable light.

From the Times Nicholson has gone to the Daily News, in which today he writes on the Unionists plans in a way calculated to stir up considerable dust in the political arena.

Much Cotton Lost.

Italy, Texas, Feb. 2.—Four thousand bales of cotton were burned here yesterday in a fire that destroyed a cotton compress and fifteen box cars. The loss was estimated at $350,000, covered by insurance.

SIR JAMES IS RESTLESS, SIR GEORGE UNCHANGED

Physicians, However, Take Premiers Condition as Evidence of Returning Strength.

"Sir James Whitney passed a somewhat restless night, but is in a good condition. There is no change in the condition of Sir George Ross."

Toronto, Feb. 2.—After enjoying several nights of uninterrupted rest without the use of hypnotics, Sir Jas. Whitney passed a restless night. It was stated at the General Hospital to-day, however, that his condition is good, that he has shown marked improvement, and is steadily gaining strength. It was even hinted to-day that within the next ten days Sir James may be back in his own home.

The fact that he did not sleep through the night as he had been sleeping, is taken as an indication of returning strength.

Across the corridor there was no noticeable change in the condition of the General Hospital's other distinguished patient, Sir George Ross. He slept fairly well through the night, is resting quietly, and appears to be in good condition.

WAVE OF IMMORALTY IN TOWN CALLS FOR DRASTIC ACTION

To the City Council, last night, Ald. Gordon suggested an avenue for expenditure for the Aldermen's earnest consideration. Referring to the moral conditions of the town, he said there are to his own knowledge four or five young girls who have been betrayed, and who have neither money nor place of refuge in their trouble. In some cases, the girls should not be left in their own homes; in other instances the girls have no homes to go to. Most of them are not church attenders, and cannot expect aid from that source. Consequently something must be done. The Police Commission will probably appoint a morality officer instead of a woman police official, at a saving of expense, and he suggested that an appropriation of $300 be made, which will be privately supplemented to provide assistance where needed to assure these unfortunates Christian treatment. Such fund to be dispensed by the Mayor, Chairman of the Finance Committee and the Adjutant of the Salvation Army. There is not a doctor in town who will not give his assistance free; and to assure such a fund for assistance to the girls not being taken as an incentive to immorality, there is not a lawyer in town who will not freely offer his services to force the parties responsible for the girls' condition to assume the fullest measure of responsibility according to law.

This question was left in abeyance till another meeting.

Roger Inglis, of Maple Hill, was kicked by a colt and had several ribs broken.

WEALTHY HUSBAND SAYS WIFE DRINKS

Burnside Charges Social Belle With Being Addicted to Alcohol

Gulfport, Miss., Feb. 2.—Charging his wife with habitual drunkenness and cruelty, J. T. M. Burnside, today filed suit here for divorce.

His wife was formerly Stella P. Langham, society beauty of Louisville, Ky., and widow of Arthur Langham, wealthy insurance agent who was killed several years ago when a giant firecracker exploded in his hand. Mrs. Burnside's sister-in-law, Lillian Langham, is the widow of Count Speck von Sternberg, former German ambassador to the United States.

After Langham's death, Mrs. Langham traveled extensively. She met Burnside, who was a mining expert and athlete. They were married at Newark, N.J., on December 14, 1911. Since then they have traveled in nearly every country in the world. Both Burnside and his wife are millionaires.

According to his complaint, Mrs. Burnside has become so addicted to drink that he finds it impossible to continue living with her. At the Great Southern hotel, it was said this afternoon that Mrs. Burnside was ill and could receive no callers.

Mrs. R. C. Bryden, wife of the first clerk of Markdale, died at the age of 86.

REDISTRIBUTION IS FACING DEATH WITH SENATE AS HEADSMAN

Ottawa Says Liberals Have Decided Further to Restrict the Session

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 2.—It is understood to-day that the Liberal leaders have already decided to kill the redistribution bill in the Senate, despite the fact that the details of the measure are not yet available and that the bill will be sent to a committee for drafting.

The bill will be introduced by the Premier this week, but the schedules will be left in blank and the measure will at once be sent to a committee of the House, as was done in 1903.

It will likely be a small committee composed of four Conservatives and three Liberals. The names of H. B. Ames and Hon. Geo. Clare are mentioned for the chairmanship.

Follow County Boundaries.

The first act of the committee will be to lay down general principles for its guidance, and it is expected that as in 1903, it will be agreed whenever feasible to follow county boundaries, except in constituencies where there is a pronounced inequality. The Ontario ridings, it is not expected, will be greatly disturbed.

In Western Ontario, the Hurons will lose one seat, Middlesex one seat and Grey one seat. There will likely be a North and South Huron and North and South Middlesex, likewise in North and South Grey.

Toronto will probably get three new seats, while South York will probably disappear, leaving an East and West York. The two Northumberlands will be combined, the two having but sufficient population for one riding.

Murphy's Seat to Disappear.

One of the Lanarks will also disappear, and it is probable that Russell, the constituency of Hon. Charles Prescott, Stormont, will likely be merged into Dundas and Glengarry, while Brockville will be divided between Leeds and Grenville.

New Ontario will be recognized with two brand new constituencies, but the big fight in committee will likely hinge around changes that are contemplated in Quebec.

BIG PROGRAM AT THE SALATION ARMY TEMPLE

Last night an extra large and most interesting program was run off at the popular Temple of the Salvation Army. In connection with the big event, it might be explained that Adjt. McElhoney had taken great effort to make the function a success. The Adjutant and the Army "won out" in the success demonstrated. The entertainment was given under auspices of the Temple Band, Songsters, Orchestra and Boys' Band. Over 150 took part in the entertainment.

KING AND QUEEN CHEERED "LOOP-THE-LOOP" AVIATOR

Windsor, Eng., Feb. 2.—Looping the loop fourteen times in midair, Aviator Gustav Hamel to-day was vigorously applauded by King George and Queen Mary, who saw his performance. Afterward he was the guest of the royal pair at luncheon.

Hamel began his flight from Brooklands, on a royal command, and when directly over Windsor Castle turned his machine earthward and road head downward many times, while the King and Queen and their suites looked on. Thousands of the townsfolk watched the daring exhibition with the royal family.

ENGLAND'S KING CUTS OFF EX-KING MANUEL'S INCOME

Deprives Him of $50,000 Annual Income and the Title of "King."

New York, Feb. 2.—A cable to the Tribune from London this morning says:

Ex-King Manuel of Portugal has just lost $50,000 a year from his income. Until Saturday last—the last day of January—this sum was furnished to him from the private purse of King George of England, and at the same time he lost the title of "King" in England, also, by order of King George.

The same event which cost Manuel the title of king caused the former Anita Stewart the bitterest disappointment, as it took from her all hope of ever being the wife of an official pretender to the Portuguese throne with the courtesy title of "Queen." This event was the formal renunciation by Manuel of all claims to the Portuguese throne in favor of the Braganzas, which took place a fortnight before the marriage of Manuel and Princess Augustine of Hohenzollern at Sigmaringen.

Manuel Not For Battles.

The father of the princess refused positively to allow the marriage of his daughter with a man who might be mixed up with such bloody affairs as the Portuguese revolutionists have staged within the last few years, and Manuel, who had already earned the contempt of King Alfonso of Spain, by his refusal to take part in plots for a restoration of the monarchy in Portugal, and who is not the more liked by the royalists on account of his refusal to contribute money to the royalist cause, readily fell in with his prospective father-in-law's desires, and a fortnight before the marriage, by formal contract, resigned all pretensions to the throne of Portugal in favor of the Braganzas.

DUKE IS PLEASED WITH GROWTH OF OUR NATIONAL SPIRIT

Reminds the Boys At St. Andrews That They Must Think Imperially

Toronto, Feb. 2.—"No part of the proceedings here has pleased me more than the references to the development of a national spirit in Canada, and in this young country there is nothing more important, I venture to believe, than education. The responsibility falls upon the schools of the Dominion to teach the youth of the country so that they may enjoy their great heritage. But they must be taught to think not only legally, but to quote the words of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, 'to think imperially.' The material benefits of life under the Union Jack may be, and indeed are very great, but greater still is the fact that British boys inherit the British Empire, the greatest instrument for good in the world to-day."

Thus, in effect, his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, addressed the boys of St. Andrew's College, and their parents and friends in the assembly hall of the school at noon to-day. This followed addresses by Principal D. B. Macdonald, and the chairman of the Board of Governors, Mr. J. K. Macdonald, and was itself followed by the giving of the prizes to the boys who had distinguished themselves during the year.

Odd Hobby of Secretary to the Mayor of Indianapolis.

Hairpins are the special hobby of Luman K. Babcock, private secretary of Major Shank of Indianapolis. Mr Babcock has hairpins by the hundreds and thousands—from the ordinary little wire affair that can be bought two dozen for 5 cents to the more elaborate tortoise shell effects that can be bought at a price as high as the buyer wishes to go. For years Mr. Babcock, who is a modest young bachelor, has been collecting hairpins until now he has approximately 3,000.

"I always wanted to make a collection of some sort," he says, "but I did not wish to collect something every one else was interested in. So far as I know there is only one other man in the country who collects hairpins, and he lives in Grand Rapids. My collection is probably the largest of its kind in the United States."

Included in the collection are 535 hairpins that he found in the streets during a tour of Europe in 1903. Every pin is labeled to show when and where it was found.

Handsomest Actor on the stage.

Although he modestly disclaims any such distinction, it is nevertheless a fact that Mr Bertram Wallis, who is appearing with such success in "Beau Brocade" at the Globe Theatre, London, has more than an average share of good looks. A big-framed, athletic looking man, standing 6 feet 3 inches, he created quite a flutter among the matinee maidens when he appeared in the title role of the "King of Cadonia" at the Prince of Wales Theatre. "I was overwhelmed," he once remarked to the writer, "with requests from ladies for my autograph, and handsome presents—photograph frames, silver ornaments, cigar-holders, and flowers—were showered upon me. I am afraid there are some people who think that an actor is something superior to the ordinary man. As a matter of fact, anyone who knows how to use sticks of grease paint can make himself handsome on the stage."

Feet of the Nations.

Anthropologists assert that the Frenchman's foot is long and narrow and well proportioned. The Scotchman's foot, according to these authorities, is high and thick, strong and muscular and capable of hard work. The Russian's foot possesses one peculiarity, the toes being generally "webbed" to the first joint. The Tartar's foot is short and heavy, the foot of a certain type of savage, and the toes are the same length. The Spaniard's foot is generally small, but finely curved. The Englishman's foot is in most cases short and rather fleshy and not, as a rule, as strong proportionately as it should be.

Stamps in Rolls.

English stamps are to be issued in rolls as well as in sheets as at present. Ribbons of postage stamps wound on a reel are expected to save time for business men, and the stamps need be perforated only on two sides.

THE SARGASSO SEA.

If You See It Lying Around Loose Notify the Geographers.

If any one has seen anything of the Sargasso sea he will confer a great favor upon the geographers by reporting his discovery, says a writer in Success Magazine. For some time there has been a suspicion that this prominent feature of the Atlantic ocean maps and of the stories of old sailors is largely mythical.

A recent Norwegian expedition sent out to search for the Sargasso sea reports a great deal of sea, but very little sargasso. It is true that they discovered a place in the north Atlantic where seaweed is rather common, but as for a mass of marine plants so dense that sailing vessels are held fast in it while the mariners die a lingering death of starvation—there is nothing in it. In fact, these meddlesome Scandinavians hint broadly that there has never been any such place.

If any one will kindly return the Sargasso sea to its proper place in the Atlantic ocean all will be forgiven and no questions asked; otherwise nothing can save this well known phenomenon from going the way of the sea serpent, the mermaid and Dr. Cook's great discovery.

A Bismarck Story.

Lord Ampthill once found Bismarck reading Andersen's story on the "Ugly Duckling," which relates how a duck hatched a swan's egg and how the cygnet was jeered at by his putative brethren, the ducklings, until one day a troop of lordly swans floating down the river saluted him as one of their own. "Ah," observed Bismarck, "it was a long time before my poor mother could be persuaded that in hatching me she had not produced a goose."

Growth of Indian Races.

The Indian has at least paused in his passing from the face of the earth if the statistics concerning births and deaths among about one-third of the Indian population in the United States which have just been compiled by the bureau of Indian affairs can be accepted as a criterion of the general condition of the red race. During the fiscal year 1909 there were 3,296 births and 3,178 deaths among 101,717 Indians. It was estimated there were 300,845 Indians in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, during the last fiscal year.—Washington Post.

OUT FOR THE FEES.

Corporation Directors Want Their Rights and Usually Get Them.

A large corporation held a directors' meeting a few days ago. As the meeting was coming to a close one of the directors, reputed to be worth $10,000,000, ran in all out of breath. Just as he entered the other directors were making their exit, says the Hartford Courant.

"Look here," the incoming director shouted to the chairman, "I want to know why I haven't received notice of this meeting."

"I am sure I don't know," the chairman said. "Notices were sent to all directors. You surely must have received one."

The director finished up an excited tirade by saying, "I want my rights."

Just then the secretary was brought into conference, who in turn handed the late director an envelope. He departed with a smiling countenance.

This recalls the story of a New York corporation where $20 for each director was laid on the table and those who attended divided the whole pile. If half came each got $40. The members were men far advanced in years and in riches. One day it stormed violently when a meeting was to be held. The executive officers did not believe a single director would be there, but every man of them was on hand, each having figured out that nobody else would appear and that he might swipe the entire allowance.

On a Grain of Wheat.

Prayers have been written and engraved on many small objects, but only one person ever has been patient and painstaking enough to inscribe a complete prayer on a grain of wheat. One day Sir Moses Montefiore received a small tin box in the mail. On the cover of the box was written, "A prayer for Sir Moses Montefiore, by Bauch Mordecai, son of Zebi Hirsch Scheinemann of Jerusalem." The box contained a single grain of wheat, on which were inscribed in characters so small they could only be read with the aid of a powerful microscope the [illegible] Hebrew letters of the prayer and the date of the year (Hebrew reckoning), 5645. Sir Moses kept the prayer in his private desk until he died, and it is preserved with religious care by one of his friends.

They are not all fired with the new Imperial war spirit in Australia. Replying recently to a deputation of Quakers who desired to secure exemption for their sons from the provisions of the Defence Act in regard to compulsory service, the Victorian Prime Minister said there were only two courses open to the Government. One was to leave Australia at the mercy of an enemy; the other to defend it. The voluntary system had failed, and the Government was forced to see the people were properly trained to protect their homes. The proposed training would be of physical benefit to the boys. It would render them fit to serve their country in case of necessity. The training need not mean that the young men would be compelled to fight in spite of religious scruples, but they would not be exempt from non-combatant service.

Passing It On.

The clerk filled out the marriage license and handed it over.

"Thank you," said the young man.

"Hold on! That's $2."

"Two dollars!"

"Yes. Did you suppose we gave those things away?"

"I certainly did. Charging a man $2 for a sheet of paper that didn't cost the county more than a nickel at the outside is robbery. Have I got to pay it?"

"You'll pay it or you'll hand back that document."

"All right," said the young man, taking a bill out of his pocket, tendering it to the clerk and waiting for his change, "but I can tell you right now you ain't robbin' me. You're robbin' the preacher. He'll get just $2 less than I was goin' to give him."

Pocketing the change and tilting his hat back on his head, he stalked out of the office with the air of a man who had been imposed upon, but who knew how to get even.—Chicago Tribune.

The Cat Came Back.

Bacon—Did you ever try to lose a cat?

Egbert—Oh, yes. I hit upon a plan which I thought would work. I wrote a note, inclosing $10, and tied both about the cat's neck. The note read, "Finder may keep both the cat and the money."

"And how did it work?"

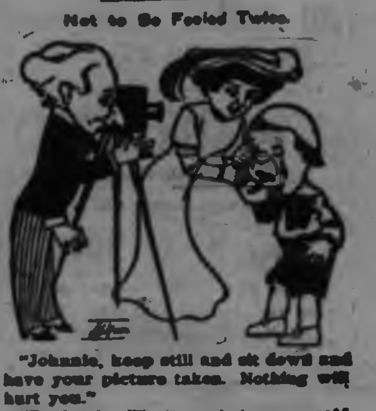
"The cat came back the next day with another note tied to its neck. The note read: 'Don't need the cat, but can use the money. Please send $10 more.'"—Yonkers Statesman.

The Pleasure Site.

Willie—Father, is it true that riches do not bring happiness?

His Pa—Quite true, my son. If you doubt it observe how much more the people in the bleachers seem to enjoy themselves than those in the grand stand.—New York Telegraph.

Not to Be Fooled Twice.



"Johnnie, keep still and sit down and have your picture taken. Nothing will hurt you."

"Boohoo! That's what you said when we went to the dentist's."

Afterward.

He was not great in any way,
He did not do a noble deed
Nor lend a helping hand to aid
A luckless creature in his need.

Yet he was missed far more than if
Mankind was better for his ken,
Since, though his way led through the world,
He never bored his fellow men.

A FAD OF THE MOMENT IS THE SHORT COAT

The short coat is favored in Paris by the leading gown and suit makers and promises to be a feature of the spring styles. Many of them are belted, others are on the bolero order. The bolero is charmingly suited to the new skirts with their ruffled and draped hips and is far too becoming a mode not to "catch on". If the hip trimmed skirts continue popular and every indication is that they will, the vogue of the short coat is assured.

The modish suit sleeve is three-quarter or full length although we glimpse here and there a short sleeved model that is decidedly smart.

Number 8140 is an unusual little coat in embossed velvet. It has a three-quarter kimono sleeve, a rolled collar and smartly cut revers which may be rolled back as illustrated, or closed and buttoned on the side front.

The skirt (8148) is a peg-top, draped in pannier effect in front. It is made up in black chiffon velvet.

A smart feature of number 8158 is the raglan effect in the back of the blouse. The sleeve is a full-length design; the shaped peplum and the small sailor collar are effective touches. A two-piece skirt completes the costume.

Dull green duvetyn is the material used with a narrow strip of skunk edging the blouse. Collar and cuffs are of brocaded velvet in soft colors.

Number 8140—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 8148—sizes 22 to 30.
Number 8158—sizes 14 to 18.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 6 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits, destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the grandest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease, B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. OUR POINT OF VIEW

The Toronto World says: "A successful physician can take life easy." Of course he can and as a rule without fear of punishment.

◆

Many defenders of the tango say that dancing is all right if properly done. Quite true, but the same may be said of drinking whiskey.

◆

The number of persons who have fallen off the water wagon since the first of January convinces us that the vehicle ought to be equipped with Ben Shortley's strap holds.

◆

A woman near Toronto was fined $10 because her cattle were hungry, but it is not likely that anybody will be fined because men, women and children are going hungry in, the same town.

◆

Indianapolis has a chief of police who is enforcing the curfew law which prohibits people from being out after midnight. From all accounts it is interfering seriously with the courting industry.

◆

Premier Borden's action in carrying out the pledges on his party's platform is regarded by some Grit newspapers as revolutionary. Probably it is revolutionary because it has never been done before.

◆

A short time ago Mr. Frank Short, of Albert street, lost his dog, and advertised in The Times. He probably also advertised in the Examiner, as a matter of business pride. But The Times restored the dog to the owner, and long may his tail wag. All of which goes to show that The Times is the champion dog catcher of Peterboro.

THE ATTACK ON TITLES

J. H. Burnham, M.P. for West Peterborough, will introduce in Parliament, for the second time, a bill providing for the abolition of titles. The bill will, of course, find little favor in the House, says The Montreal Mail. Even if it had the good fortune to become a parliamentary enactment, it would not be effective, because conferring titles is one of those peculiar privileges which the Crown enjoys without being answerabl to Parliament

This at least is the strict interpretation of the consitution. In practice the Crown usually acts on the advice of responsible ministers, though it is not required to do so.

Mr. Burnham's efforts are, therefore, doomed to failure before he introduces his bill in the House. Still, it may be assumed that a debate which developed substantial support of Mr. Burnham's designs on knighthoods and similar honors would not be without effect in restricting a practice which is not in harmony with the spirit of the Dominion and which has been sufficiently abused to bring it into popular disfavor.

One thing the discussion should bring out and that is an authoritative pronouncement as to the manner in which these royal honors are awarded and inspired. Who is responsible for the selections and to what extent is the government responsible for them? These are questions which in the light of certain events demand an answer. If the government is responsible the people should be in a position to pass on the merits of the judgment in this, as in all other public acts. If the government is not responsible it ought to be. A condition of affairs in which the public is left to guess the origin of nominations for titles is far from desirable. The subject which Mr. Burnham is opening up has more in it than appears on the surface. It deserves serious discussion and a frank official statement which will give these titles a definite parentage.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment

"SUFFERERS FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tooker, of Monson, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years indeed, with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 25c at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

DEATH OF GEORGE S. THOMPSON

Former Lumberman, Well Known in Peterborough, Dead.

There passed away at Copper Cliff, Ontario, on January 19th, Mr. George S. Thompson, aged 62 years. Mr. Thompson was well known in this district, having for many years been associated with the late J. M. Irwin, in the lumbering business. He lived in Lindsay and in Haliburton for considerable periods, having charge of Mr. Irwin & Boyd's business at the latter place. Rheumatism, which attacked the heart, was the cause of his death.

The funeral took place on January 23rd to the Church of England cemetery, Copper Cliff.

Mrs. Thompson and family have the sympathy of a large number of friends in their bereavement.

Stadler sold the flow from his first well to the East Ohio Gas Co., a Rockefeller corporation for $20,000 a month.

WOMEN'S PROGRESS IN THE UNITED STATES

A woman lawyer in Boston tried and won a case in court. Her partner, also a woman, sat in the bar enclosure, ready to render assistance if needed Competent witnesses pronounced it the second time a Portia had appeared in the divorce court.

From a different quarter comes the announcement that a woman has been appointed first secretary of the Norwegian legation in Mexico. She is first in more than one sense. The dispatches relate that she is the pioneer of her sex to take up diplomatic service as a profession.

Chicago sends word of the election of a woman as director of the Austin National Bank. She is the first of her sex in the windy city to be entrusted with the duties and responsibilities of a bank directorship.

Reports from New York of the progress of Dr. Katherine B. Davis as Commissioner of Correction, continue reassuring. She has gone to the heart of some problems with solutions that seem obvious. Yet generations of men who preceded her had eyes and they saw not.

So that the advance of woman in the various paths of endeavour is steady and inspiring. She does our citizenship proud. And while the suffragists and antis find in her every achievement argument for their respective causes, the progress remains a glory to both — and to mankind.

THE DOG NUISANCE

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—I have read letters in your papers recently, re dog nuisance on our streets. I am one of the "timid ones," having been attacked by a dog when I was young. I do not wonder my children fear them more than I could wish they did.

Hoping you may find space to copy article from "Mail & Empire" enclosed.

Yours truly,

A Mother

Toronto, Jan. 28.—Francis Stewart, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart, 155 Roslin Avenue, died yesterday in the Hospital for Sick Children. Seven weeks ago the little girl was bitten on the face by a dog, thought to have been owned by J. J. O'Hearn, 3 D'Arcy St. The child's mother and Dr. Bond, of North Toronto, cauterized and washed the wound with carbolic acid, and in a week the child was able to play with her companions again.

Saturday evening, however, she became feverish, and later delirious. She was at once taken to the hospital, where she exhibited practically all the signs of hydrophobia. The doctors were unable to do anything for her, and she gradually became worse, dying shortly before six o'clock last evening. As the dog had been destroyed shortly after it had attacked the little girl the authorities were unable to make an examination for rabies. The body of the little girl has not been removed to the Morgue, and the chief coroner has not yet decided whether an inquest will be held.

POET'S CORNER

Readers are invited to contribute to this column. Matter to be either original or otherwise.

IS IT TRUE?

Is it true, O Christ in Heaven,
  That the highest suffer most?
That the strongest wander farthest
  And more helplessly are lost?
That the mark of rank in nature
  Is capacity for pain?
And the anguish of the singer
  Makes the sweetness of the strain?

Is it true, O Christ, in Heaven,
  That the fullness yet to come,
Is so glorious and so perfect
  That to know would strike us dumb?
That if ever for a a moment
  We could pierce beyond the sky
With these poor dim eyes of mortals,
  We would just see God and die?

A MODERN PRESS

The Times To Be Greatly Improved in the Near Future

A Web Perfecting Press to Be Installed, the Circulation Having Outgrown Present Facilities—A Machine That Will Turn Out 5,000 Copies of the Paper Per Hour Has Been Purchased.

The rapid increase in the circulation of The Times during the past few months has made it necessary for the proprietor to instal a modern web newspaper press, which will print and deliver 5,000 folded papers per hour. This machine will be installed in about three weeks, and it is expected will be in commission by the end of the present month.

A night telegraphic service has been arranged, which will be in operation at an early date. It is our purpose to make The Times as near equal to the Toronto morning daily newspapers as possible, so that it will be in demand everywhere throughout Central and Eastern Ontario.

The Times will continue its policy of fearlessly advocating Equal Rights with special privileges to no church or creed. The time has arrived, we believe, when the press of Canada should take a decided stand against anything that savors of priestly or ministerial interference in political matters. Protestants are willing that their Roman Catholic fellow citizens should have every privileges that they themselves enjoy—but no more. The Roman Catholic hierarchy should and must be content with this, if harmony is to prevail.

The new equipment above referred to will add strength to our arm, and will enable us to battle more effectively for the principles above referred to. In the meantime we ask our friends to assist us by speaking a good word for the paper whenever they can, and thus increase our circulation. We want to add a couple of thousand new names to our list during the coming spring.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, there destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Vogue Laughs at Fate Peacock Plumes Presage

By MADGE MARVEL

THE time-honored superstition of bad luck attached to the wearing of peacock feathers seems to have been overcome. Or else the modern woman defies such silly hoo-doos. At any rate, one notices a great many smart hats trimmed with the lovely iridescent plumage.

One milliner assures her patrons that the only bad luck that can possibly come from wearing peacock feathers is that the wearer will not marry for a year. As so many of the up-to-date girls are indifferent about marriage anyway, they shrug their shoulders and order the feathers.

One or two or, at the most, three long and perfect feathers are all that are usually used. They wave on high, full length, at the side or back of trig little hats. Or else they are slanted and reach out into the faces of the neighbors in the particularly unpleasant manner of some of the hats of the season.

One sailor hat had the crown encircled with eight of the loveliest of these blue and bronze and green feathers, the ends of four meeting at the side, where they formed a little side fluff.

I have noticed several sailors in the mid-season hats that have a narrow band of fur and several big and bright flowers such as roses or velvet poppies or poinsettias arranged about the crown. The high draped turban of black velvet, quite devoid of trimming, is ever so much worn, but I would warn the woman who adopts it to be sure it is large enough for her face, for the narrow, high effect on a full face is not attractive.

Many women with time and knowledge of sewing at their command prefer to make their own lingerie. Here is a hint which may prove interesting. There is a revived interest in Irish lace for trimming, and the newest way to use it is to set the scalloped edge into the material and then finish with beading and ribbon.

And while on the subject of lingerie I would say to the girl who loves daintiness—and where is there one who does not?—that she will find use next summer for all the filmy underbodices or camisoles she can make. The little touch of color showing through dress bodices or blouses is going to last through this season I am sure.

Butterfly bows are growing in popularity. A year ago all the little girls were crowned with them quite out of all proportion to their size. Now their older sisters have usurped the fad and are splashing them on their evening frocks. There is the butterfly bow worn in front at the waist line, and its duplicate worn at the back of the next waist, and there is the big bow catching the ends of the sash at the back of the gown or at the side, and sometimes there is the bow at the waist and the end of the sash extended to the knees and caught there at the side or back with another and bigger bow.

All this fancy for bows and sashes has given no end of impetus to the ribbon makers, and there were never such wonderful things in ribbon land. The gold and silver backgrounds with enormous tropical blooms rioting over them seem too gaudy for real use, but when they are made part of the gown they lose all that appearance and become just rich and sumptuous.

I saw a moiré gown at tea the other day trimmed with bands of broadcloth on the tunic. It was novel, but seemed rather out of keeping.

Great Novels in a Nutshell

"Around the World in 80 Days"

Condensed from the VERNE novel by ANITA VON HARTMANN.

PHILEAS FOGG had just discharged his old valet and was interviewing his new one, a stout young Frenchman named Jean Passepartout.

"What is the time by your watch?" Mr. Fogg asked the man.

"Eleven twenty-two," replied Passepartout.

"You are four minutes slow," said Mr. Fogg. "Now, from this moment, eleven twenty-nine A. M., Wednesday, Oct. 2, 1872 you are in my service."

So saying, Mr. Fogg unhurriedly proceeded to his club. He found some friends discussing how long it would take to go around the world. Most of them thought three months. Phileas wagered $100,000 that he could make the tour in 80 days.

He coolly finished his game of cards and returned home.

"We leave in 10 minutes for Dover," he told Passepartout. "We are going to make a tour of the world."

Mr. Fogg carried a passport that he had witnessed at every important city along his route to show that he made the journey.

Twenty days after starting Mr. Fogg, with Passepartout and Sir Francis Cromarty, a fellow-traveller, left Bombay on a new railway which was reported to extend to Allahabad.

But the railway was not finished, it seemed, and the train stopped 50 miles from Allahabad. An hour after arriving at the end of the railway the little party were again travelling on through the Indian forests on the back of an elephant purchased by Mr. Fogg.

Suddenly they were halted by a great funeral procession of a dead rajah, whose young wife was being dragged along by the priests.

"If we could only save the young woman," murmured Mr. Fogg. "I have still 12 hours to spare. I can devote them to her."

"Why, you are a man of heart!" exclaimed Sir Francis.

"Sometimes," replied Phileas, "when I have time."

Armed with only pocket knives the party crept on foot to the place of sacrifice, determined to rescue the girl. At daybreak the priests dragged forth the young woman and laid her on the funeral pyre. A torch was applied and the wood, soaked with oil, caught fire.

Suddenly a terrified cry arose from the priests, and they cast themselves upon their faces.

The dead rajah had risen up and was descending the pyre through clouds of smoke, carrying his bride in his arms. He hurried to Mr. Fogg. It was Passepartout, who had hit upon this plan to rescue the young woman.

Mr. Fogg arrived in London at ten minutes to nine. He was five minutes late and his fortune was lost.

Aouda, the Indian girl, longed to comfort her benefactor.

"If you are going to be poor," she told Phileas, "you will need some one to comfort you. Will you have me for your wife?"

"I love you," Phileas said; "yes, in truth, by everything most sacred in the world, I am yours." He rang for Passepartout.

"Arrange for our marriage tomorrow, Monday," he said.

Passepartout, delighted, hurried away. In three minutes he was back.

"Master," he stammered, breathless, "marriage—impossible—tomorrow—Sunday!"

"Monday," corrected Mr. Fogg.

"No—today—Saturday!"

"Saturday! Impossible!"

"Yes, yes, yes, yes!" shouted Passepartout. "We lost one day going round the world! It is Saturday and not Sunday, as we thought!"

Passepartout seized his master by the collar, dragged him to the street and hurried him into a cab. It was quarter to nine when Mr. Fogg appeared at his club.

"Gentlemen, here I am," he said to his friends.

He had accomplished his tour of the world in 80 days after all, and had won his bet of $100,000.

That Chesty Bird

By Tom Jackson

THE ROOSTER is a chesty bird, stuck on himself, and proud. All that he does is strut about, and crow, both long and loud. Now and again he finds a worm, and almost throws a fit—in calling hens to hurry up—then he eats all of it. He looks upon the hens with scorn, and thinks he is their pet. In spite of all his feathers fine, he isn't in their set. But when a hen has laid an egg he crows to beat the band, and struts around as if he was boss of the barn yard land. Meanwhile, the hen that laid the egg—to whom the credit's due—is lucky if she can get in a modest cluck or two.

The Rooster is full of conceit, and sometimes full of corn. He eats until he goes to roost, and starts again at dawn. We have had roosters at our home, for fricassee or stew, who must have fed on paving stones, and on barbed wire, too. Sometimes a Rooster will get gay, and go look for a fight; but once he's licked, he flies the coop—then for him it's "Good night." The hens give him the frosty claw, by goslings he is hissed. Sad is the Rooster who is put on the boycotted list.

Throughout the merry summer months, the Rooster has the call, but there's an axe behind the barn that meets him in the fall. With roofing gravel he is filled, then shipped away as freight. In life he was chock full of pride, in death chock full of weight. But mostly all the hens remain. So would the Rooster, too, if he could furnish nickel eggs—which Roosters cannot do.

BEAUTY DEMANDS PATIENT STUDY

"Margaret Greene Possesses What We Might Call a Wonderful Complexion"

Road to a Good Complexion Well Defined

By MAGGIE TEYTE

Prima Donna of the Chicago Philadelphia Opera Company.

MAGGIE TEYTE

EVERY woman owes it to herself, her family, her friends and the world at large to be as beautiful as she can. If she will spend half the time finding out how she can be attractive that she does wishing she were a famous beauty the result would be most gratifying.

The only thing I know of that can be successfully wished on one is trouble.

One has to work and study to become a beauty.

As the face is the most noticeable, it should receive the most attention. And while I mean complexion, features and expression when I speak of the face, it is too big a subject to treat all at once, so this talk is all about the complexion.

We of the stage appreciate this fact and many actresses are famous for their complexions as well as for their acting. Margaret Greene, of the Cohan forces, whose photograph is reproduced here, possesses what we might call a wonderful complexion. She aids nature, however, in the care she takes of her attractive features. And so must we all.

I have less patience than sympathy for the woman with a bad skin. If her health is even fairly good and her skin remains spotted and muddy and unwholesome then she is either ignorant or lazy. There is small excuse for the former with all the advantages of the present day. There is none for the latter. A lazy person is an abomination in the sight of all right-minded persons.

If you want to improve your complexion, I say to you: Wash it. Then wash it again. Then clean it with cold cream. And when after all that has been done and the last dab of absorbent cotton is unsoiled after it has travelled over the face, we are ready to begin.

All faces will not respond to the same treatment, for some skins are oily and some dry, some are thick and some are thin. But absolute cleanliness is suited to them all.

If you are troubled with pimples and they don't disappear after a few days of thorough cleanliness, then you want to look within for the cause. Regulation of the bowels frequently corrects complexion faults.

To wash the face, use the best soap. Oatmeal is valuable as a cleansing agent and it whitens. Use hot water and wash carefully, removing the dirt from every pore. Remove all traces of soap. Dash on cold water to close the pores and stimulate the skin. Then use the cold cream.

Don't buy something the druggist tells you is the best. Don't use a cream because some one else uses it. Find out what cream best suits you and stick to it.

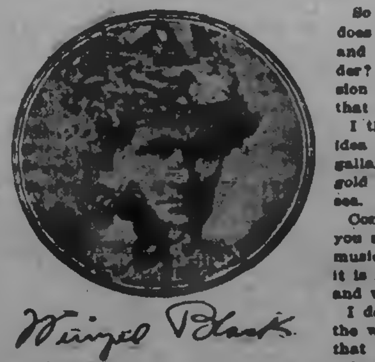
Massage is not so much favored as the patting of the cream into the face. Tap it lightly into the pores. It will stimulate the circulation and strengthen the muscles. Pay particular attention to the long lines by the nose, the fine lines that are prone to creep about the eyes and the forehead wrinkles. Give them a light, upward, rotary motion, between a rub and a dab.

Carefully remove all the surplus cream. Then use a lump of ice enclosed in a bit of sterilised gauze to act as a tonic and astringent.

What the Gilt Prophet Says

By WINIFRED BLACK.

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service.



Winifred Black

THE little gilt horse on the weather vane rides high above the storm today.

I lived here quite a while before I knew he was there at all—the gay little gilt horse with his arched neck and his waving tail.

He was hidden by a tall tree which stands like a kind of ragged sentinel at the bottom of the garden.

It is a California garden and so it is green and smiling now, though the flowers are not quite ready to bloom as they should, for flowers do not love the driving rain, whether it comes in June or January.

Yesterday the wind came screaming in from the ocean with great tales to tell of wild adventures on the salt, salt sea.

I knew in the night that there would be a storm, for I heard the ships come bawling up the bay like great calves lost from their mothers, and the storm sirens called across the wild waters in a kind of ecstasy. In the morning I looked to see what the little gilt horse thought about it.

The ragged eucalyptus at the bottom of the garden was in a great state of mind over the weather. He threw up his great arms wildly, like a picturesque beggar tossing his rags in some fantastic dance, and between the branches I caught a glimpse of my friend—the little gilt horse—riding high and free and looking bravely out to sea.

So the wind sets in that direction, does it—Pegasus of the gilded mane—and what do you think of it, I wonder? What is your idea of your mission in life? Do you imagine perhaps that it is you who make the weather?

I thought I saw something of that idea in your pose as you galloped so gallantly high in the air, with your gold head turned to the wild, wild sea.

Come wind, come storm, come rain—you seemed to cry above the strange music of the elements. Come, come, it is I who calls, the golden prophet, and when I speak you must all obey.

I don't believe you know that it is the wind that rules you and not you that rules the wind.

Are you not something like many of us who live here so far below you on the green slope of the hill?

The winds of destiny, how far they blow us and what wild songs they sing sometimes in our affrighted ears. And even while we cower before them we think, poor, vain, deluded beings, sometimes we think that we have called the winds and that they have answered to us.

Ride on high above in the clear, clear air, oh, little horse of gilt—and if it pleases you to think that it is you who have called to the trade wind to gather up the waters like a tent, who are we, or any like us, that we should dare to smile.

Trying to Dodge.

She—Are you in favor of votes for women?

He—I am in favor of whatever you are prepared to advocate.

The Ideal Husband.

"An ideal husband," said the thoughtful girl, "would be a poet and a millionaire."

"I think," said the more thoughtful girl, "I would marry the millionaire first."

No Possible Treatment

"If you are not feeling well why not see a doctor?"

"What's the use? My vermiform appendix has already been removed."

One Boss Enough.

"The chap was right who said that no man can serve two masters."

"Yes?"

"Surest thing you know. That's the reason it is foolish for a married man to try to boss himself."

Disproved.

"So you don't think my ancestors came over in the Mayflower?"

"Certainly I don't. The Mayflower carried no steerage passengers."

Between Bases.

"So Dodger is to be married after all these years. How do you account for it?"

"I understand two widows got him between them and he was run down between bases."

Secrets of Health and Happiness

To Protect Your Hair "Cultivate" Your Head

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg

DR. L. K. HIRSHBERG

SCIENCE will tell you that hair is so much vegetation. The poet will tell you that it is "woman's crowning glory"—leaving you to assume that it is of some use and an ornament to men also.

Whatever may be said by either science or sentiment, it is quite beyond dispute that it is most ardently appreciated by those who have lost it, in which respect it is entirely like the other blessings that "brighten as they take their flight."

Bald heads are not a new invention. Caesar is understood to have been bald, though he was not an old man when this condition was noted, and there are vastly older allusions to a hairless or relatively hairless condition.

Yet we are living in an age when baldness, like other undesirable physical shortcomings, is described from day to day as "on the increase." The eminent German life-insurance actuary, Dr. Moll, declares emphatically that, both in men and women, there is a steady decline in the human output of hair.

Just how different from our ancestors we may be in respect to hair is by no means a matter of common accord. All ages seem to have agreed in admiring hair, and in regretting its loss. All ages seem to have agreed also in associating it with physical vigor. The tradition of Samson's loss of power by the loss of his hair has a certain point to make with regard to the wicked Delilahs of the world, but it emphasizes also the popular feeling that plenty of hair and power go together. The king of beasts has a splendid mane. A bald hero is out of the question. Fortunately for the afflicted, bald-headed wisdom is accepted without complaint.

Hair Is a "Crop."

This feeling of resentment against baldness has expressed itself specifically in wigs, which have filled a decorative and perhaps useful function in the history of the race. Men and women from the beginning of time have used artifice to cover individual defects once these defects are commonly recognised as such. A good wig is, ethically speaking, no infringement on morals.

It is, however, more to the point to ask why does hair fall out? Can it be made to grow again when it has fallen out?

He would be a beneficent physician who could answer these questions to everybody's satisfaction. The prevailing superstitions about falling hair are as numerous as motes in the sunbeam. Commonly it is supposed that a fine tooth comb, a hard-bristled brush, eternal vigilance and violent cleanliness are excellent means of cultivating a substantial crop of hair. The answer is not so easily given. True enough, if you care for your hair in the days of your youth you will be acting as wisely as the farmer who practises scientific agricultural methods. Hair is undoubtedly a "crop." The secret and the solution is to keep up the quality of the crop. You cannot rotate your crops like the farmer, but you can, like the farmer, keep healthy the soil in which your crops grow.

The soil in which your hair grows is an individual soil. Just as the soil in which one farmer ploughs and plants is different from that in which another farmer ploughs and plants, so the health, the fertility of the scalp on which your hair thrives, is different from another's. It is these differences that complicate the reasonable explanations for the loss of hair, as well as the exercise of those possible precautions which every man and woman would wish to use.

No Magic Formula.

The average amateur beauty doctor knows no more about the preservation of hair than the average farm hand does about farming. They are as much in the dark, and as credulous as the person who consults a chance pharmacist as to a cure. Druggists are taught how to make drugs, combine drugs, mix drugs and flavor drugs. To them it does not fall to deal with the influence of drugs upon ailing conditions.

Druggists are not taught to distinguish between hair that falls out and inevitably returns without medical aid—as, for example, after typhoid fever—and hair that is gone forever. Nor is the druggist able to tell you whether your falling hair is due to ringworm, dandruff, a favus fungus, an exema or an anaemic, inactive scalp.

Let it be said without equivocation, there is no magic formula either for the saving or the restoration of the hair. Nevertheless, there are plain, practical facts that meet the requirements of reason, borne out by experience. The general health of the body and mind will always favor the health of the hair, however the effect of this general health may be modified by inherited tendencies or special conditions. If you live sensibly, temperately, moderately, you have better chances of a good coiffure and plenty of hair than if you pursue the opposite habit. Too much washing and drying of the hair is undoubtedly injurious. Anything that injures the scalp, whether debility of the system, intemperate habits or other abuse from without injures this delicate and priceless growth.

Your particular needs with regard to your hair are no more to be met by any general prescription than any other of your individual physical needs are to be met in the same way. The counsel of your own physician, the advice of an expert, is your wisest recourse.

Answers to Health Questions

C. C.—My eyes are beginning to ache and I often see things in a confused jumble. Shall I consult a jewelry optician?

The best eye specialists devote from five to ten years of day and night study and experimentation to the attempt to understand all about the eyes. Then they do not know all. The optometrist and jewelry opticians rarely devote the full days and nights of three years to this vital matter. With these facts before you I shall leave you to choose the guardians of your precious eyesight.

* * *

B. G.—Will you please tell me what to do to keep my hair in its natural color? I have blond hair, but it is beginning to turn dark.

Which is the better to take off freckles, buttermilk or lemon juice? I have tried the latter for some time, but with no results.

Lemon juice applied to the blond hair will keep it light. The juice is put on the hair before the final rinsing.

Both the milk and the lemon juice are good in particular cases. If the latter failed to help you, you should try the buttermilk. Should this prove ineffective try the remedy "Obstinate Freckles":

Oxide of zinc	½ dram
Subiodide of bismuth	½ dram
Dextrine	1½ drams
Glycerin	1½ drams

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

MR. RACCOON put Brer Rabbit to bed after he had fallen in the hole in the ice, and no sooner had Brer Rabbit fallen asleep than there was a great knocking at the door.

"Come in!" shouted Mr. Raccoon.

"Oh! Mr. Raccoon, Brer Rabbit is drowned!" exclaimed Mr. Squirrel. "We fished for him everywhere and can't find him."

"Ha! ha!" laughed Mr. Raccoon. "It's a good thing he has gone. We will not miss him."

"How can you talk like that?" whined Mrs. Squirrel, the tears falling all over her white muff.

That moment Brer Rabbit poked his head out from under the bed clothes and said:

"Who says I am drowned? I am very much alive!"

"Oh! we are so glad to see you," said Mrs. Squirrel. "Be careful and do not freeze to death going home!"

Soon there was a knock at the door.

"Come in!" shouted Mr. Raccoon.

"Mr. Raccoon, my poor husband is drowned," said Mrs. Rabbit.

"You don't tell me! you don't tell me!" exclaimed Mr. Raccoon.

"I do tell you," sobbed Mrs. Rabbit.

"Well," said Mr. Raccoon; "it's a good thing he is gone! Now we won't be bothered any more. He was a big nuisance."

"Don't talk that way about my dear husband!" answered Mrs. Rabbit. "I loved him—yes, I did!"

Brer Rabbit couldn't stand it any longer, so he jumped out of bed and threw his arms around his good wife's neck.

"I thought you were drowned!" exclaimed Mrs. Rabbit.

"It's worth being drowned to find you love me so," said Brer Rabbit, as he gave his wife an extra hug.

SEVEN AGES OF BASEBALL.

All the world's a ball field
And all the men upon it merely players.
They have their innings and their goings out.
And one man in his time makes many plays
At bat and on the diamond. At first the kiddet
Hitting the ball about the vacant lots,
And then the "semi-pro" with fierce ambition
Some day to be as great as Hanus Wagner
And draw big coin, and then the minor—
The minor leaguer—seen by scout discovered,
Bought and given a tryout; then the major—
The major leaguer—idol of the bleachers,
Quick on bases, snappy and sure in fielding,
Seeking the slugger's reputation
Bell—against "Three Fingered" Brown;
then—pouf—bench warming!
His leg goes bad, his arm or eye or something.
He bats 'em out before the game and coaches,
In sweater clad, at first or third. The papers
All fear he "can't come back." The sixth age shifts
To minor leagues again, and there he is.
He says he's just as good as e'er he was,
But even here too fast's the company
For his bad leg or arm. His manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, blames
It on the umpire. Last scene of all,
That ends his strange, eventful history,
Is bush league hopelessness and sure oblivion,
Sans speed, sans arm, sans eye, sans everything!

—Puck.

Mr. C. Lewis Hind draws a striking picture of the artist's vision in the English Review, especially of those whom he calls "The Unafraid," such as Seurat, Signac, Van Gogh, and Gauguin.

"How can I hope to illustrate the intensity of their achievement in a few pages? We who sit at home in ease constructing arm-chair theories can hardly realize their white-hot, fever-tossed mania for expression. It is well. Goya looked into gulfs. Van Gogh strained into the furnace and was scorched and shrivelled. But the flame of their lives enables us to understand why the New Movement in Art has prospered and spread, seeing how fierce were the pioneer fires.

"In the background the lonely and majestic Cezanne, a kind of Moses, looking within him-elf for the promised land; in the foreground, in the midst of the battle, Van Gogh and Gauguin, with their elemental craving for expression, their passion for creation, for seeing, for living, and—

. . . . I had ended there.
But a great wind blew all the stars to flare.

"The great wind! Those stars blown to flare! Who knows what suns of the future these men with their great wind of creation and vision may not fan into being."

Told Who He Was.

Dr. Beadon, a former rector in Eltham, Kent, England, one Sunday preached from the text "Who art thou?" After reading it he made a pause for the congregation to reflect upon the words, when a man in military dress who at that instant was marching very sedately up the middle aisle of the church, supposing it a question addressed to him, replied, "I am, sir, an officer of the Sixteenth regiment of foot on a recruiting party here, and, having brought my wife and family with me, I am come to church because I wished to be acquainted with the neighboring clergy and gentry." This so deranged the divine and astonished the congregation that the sermon was concluded with considerable difficulty.

Strange Death of Rival Stags.

Many records exist of the way in which rival stags have met their death when fighting for supremacy. Probably none is more strange than that described by Herr C. Drathmore of Charlottenburg in the Deutsche Jager-Zeitung. In 1908 the keepers on the Gelbensand shooting in Mecklenburg-Schwerin found a fine twelve pointer lying dead, apparently from antler thrusts and with both beams close together. Not far off was a smaller stag, a ten pointer, still living, but as its back was broken it was put out of its misery. On examination it was found that the antlers of the larger stag were torn out of the skull and the frontal bone was broken. The back of the smaller stag must have been broken in the struggle.

The Cat Came Back.

Bacon—Did you ever try to lose a cat?

Egbert—Oh, yes. I hit upon a plan which I thought would work. I wrote a note, inclosing $10, and tied both about the cat's neck. The note read, "Finder may keep both the cat and the money."

"And how did it work?"

"The cat came back the next day with another note tied to its neck. The note read: 'Don't need the cat, but can use the money. Please send $10 more.'"

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

There is one man in Germany who invariably accompanies the emperor wherever he goes, whatever the occasion. His name is Francois Haby, his majesty's barber, the man who has made the fortune of caricaturists in two hemispheres by inventing for his imperial master the upturned mustaches made famous by the kaiser. Once, however, his majesty in his search for absolute privacy even relinquished the services of his Figaro. This was during his visit to England in 1907. But Herr Haby was spared the pain of seeing another take his place, for the emperor shaved himself

SIM SIMPKINS.

Sim Simpkins don't believe in things;
His fancy never spreads its wings.
He says that "two an' two is four
An' so shill be forevermore."
When Morse got up the telegraph
Old Sim read of it with a laugh,
And then says he:
"Huh! Needn't tell me.
I don't believe what I can't see."

And when 'twas said electric lights
Should gleam and glimmer through th nights
Old Sim said: "Shucks! How'll ye send fire
A-scootin' through a solid wire?"
He proved that it could not be done
By argument that weighed a ton
When "Humph!" said he.
"You needn't tell me.
I don't believe what I can't see."

When Bell announced the telephone
Old Sim read of it with a groan
And wiped his specs and slowly said:
"Th' feller's plainly off his head.
Th' idy! Talk an' I could hear
Ten miles away all plain an' clear!
Huh! No, sir-ree;
You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

The wireless telegraph made Sim
Deny its truth with language grim.
"It's nothin' but a pesky sham.
Now, who could breathe a tellygram?"
And when the Wrights got up and flew
Old Sim just took another chew,
And "Umph!" said he.
"You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

Don't think this shaft is aimed at Sim
And that there's only one of him.
Oh, gentle reader, you and I
Learn of some truths, but do not try
To make them true, but wisely frown,
And arguments we try to drown
With "No, sir-ree;
You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

How Purple Was Discovered.

The discovery of purple was achieved by a very humble boy, a fisherman named Alonso. His master, also a fisherman, left him in the boat, telling him to watch the nets. While Alonso did this he also did something else, his master one day discovered. He marked pieces of linen with letters and designs. A ring which he had found one day upon the shore served as a stamp for these designs, but what attracted the attention of Alonso's master was that they were made in a color not then known—purple.

The master inquired how this color had been obtained.

Alonso could not explain any better than by showing how it was done. He dropped the ring into the slimy matter of a shellfish. The mantle of this creature had been torn in some way, and the slimy matter was oozing from it. This made marks on the linen which when dried by the sun turned into purple. This color was adopted by the king of the country where Alonso lived as the color of royalty and has thus remained to this day.

SOME BISLEY HEROES

STORIES OF THE REDOUBTABLE SHOTS IN GREAT EVENTS.

Only Two or Three Men Have Won the King's Prize Twice and Among Them Is Lieut. W. T. Davies of the 8th Welsh Regiment—Two Youths of 21 Have Carried Off the Big Trophy—Thompson's Boast.

Since the splendid shooting of Canadians at the great Imperial rifle meet in England the subject of the annual contest for the chief shooting prizes at Bisley must be more than ever attractive and interesting. Hence a few words about some of the more famous marksmen who have won the $1,250 and the premier prize of shooting in past years may be interesting.

Lieut. W. T. Davies, of the 8th Welsh Regiment, is one of the two or three men who have won the medal twice. His last occasion was in 1903, and his former one in 1898. Moreover, in 1897 he ran the actual winner very close; and in 1903, besides winning the $1,250 and the gold medal, he tied for the silver one with three other shooters. He is a Llanelly man, and, owing to his striking success, may be regarded as the finest marksman who has taken part in the great contest, or at any rate the most consistent one.

Lance-Corporal Ommundsen's name is one well known as Bisley, where he ahs taken prize after prize for years. He is of Scandinavian descent, as his name implies, and he was the hero in 1901 of one of the most sensational finishes in the records of shooting. Everybody was already congratulating Sergt.-Major Burr, of the Hants Regiment, on being the winner, for it seemed as if he must carry off the prize. But he was so upset with their congratulations and the excitement of the moment that he missed the target altogether with his last shot, and thus finished equal with Ommundsen. In firing off the tie Ommundsen easily beat his rival, scoring two bulls to the latter's two magpies; and so he came out a most sensational winner of the blue ribbon of marksmanship.

We have also Private George Gray—not the celebrated billiard player, by the way—who astounded everybody in 1903 by bearing away the premier honors of the classic struggle, though less than twenty-one years of age at the time! George Gray belongs to the 5th Scottish Rifles, had only been shooting for three years ere he won the $1,250, and is in business with his father at Glasgow. When asked how he came to be such a first-class shot, the Caledonian George Gray replied, naively, "By practicing with a miniature rifle in my father's back garden at Helensburgh!"

Lieut. Addison, who is a South Australian, was another noted winner. For his father won the Queen's Prize in Australia in 1894; the son followed up this by taking the King's Prize at Adelaide in 1903, and again in 1904. This double feat was very clever, when one remembers how finely Australian troopers shoot as a rule. But the lieutenant's supreme performance was when he came off first at Bisley in 1907, amid the plaudits of the Antipodes, who had waited eagerly to learn how her best representative would succeed against the Mother Country's picked marksmen. Addison, then thirty-two years old, fully justified their confidence.

Rennie, of Glasgow, bears a name well known to most good shots. Curiously enough, when asked how he came to be such a marksman as to be able to beat all comers at Bisley for the $1,250, he put it down to a coal strike! This strike was in 1894, and it threw him out of employment for the time being.

"Having nothing to do, owing to the strike, I simply lived on the range, in order to pass the time usefully," Mr. Rennie said. "I was always practicing shooting, and this undoubtedly made me so proficient that in my great year of success at Bisley I won no less than $1,800 in hard cash, beside several medals."

Sergt. Reid is another frequent attender at the camp, and a shot whom all intending winners of the chief prize have to watch closely. He carried off the chief event in 1889, and is in the general postoffice, London. He lives at Ealing, and he can boast of what few noted marksmen can—viz., that he has during his career as a shooter carried off no fewer than 600 valuable prizes as mementoes (very useful and solid ones, too!) of his success. The sergeant has other claims to special fame in the competition, for he was the last winner under the old regime, when the shooting took place on Wimbledon Common. Moreover, he had made the record score up to that time with the Martini-Henry.

Major Thompson has a unique boast. He can claim that his name has appeared six times in the last hundred for the great prize, and of these four were in consecutive years. It is questionable if any other marksman but Thompson has ever done this. As a striking example of his consistent shooting, we may mention that in 1895 he was eighth, in 1896 he was first, and in 1897 he was second, only beaten on the post by Ward, a Devonian who made a most remarkable succession of bull's-eyes right at the last minute.

The major's fateful position, however, is second; for he tells how, in the year he won the $1,250 and the gold medal, he was second for the silver medal, second for the bronze medal, second for the Barlow Cup, and second for the Volunteers' best aggregate! As if this were not enough, the major has also on three separate occasions been second for the Caledonian Shield and the Championship of Scotland. So no wonder he regards "No. 2" as his fateful number on these occasions.

A Bird's Curiosity.

Professor Guy A. Bailey, a member of the faculty of the Geneseo State Normal school, relates a little incident which might be doubted were it not for the fact that he has the proof to show for the story. Mr. Bailey was on Temple hill with his camera attempting to get a picture of a horned lark. The lark evidently thought that Mr. Bailey was providing it with a bird house, as it hopped on to the camera, back into the trees and then back on the camera again. The bird repeated this performance several times, refusing to remain in the trees long enough to be snapped. Finally Mr. Bailey left the camera where he had located it, went and got another camera, and when he returned he secured a splendid picture of the bird perched on camera No. 1. Curiosity got the best of the bird, and the result was a novel picture.

When Mark Twain was an editor in Hartford he was considered a formidable opponent at skittles. His favorite resort was a bowling alley in a cellar on State street not far from the steamboat dock. While the celebrated humorist was under Major Pond's management he was billed as one of the features for an evening's entertainment at the Young Men's Christian association hall at Newark. There was a bowling alley immediately underneath the lecture room. As Mark Twain was on his way upstairs with the major he caught a glimpse of it.

"What's going on in there—bowling?"

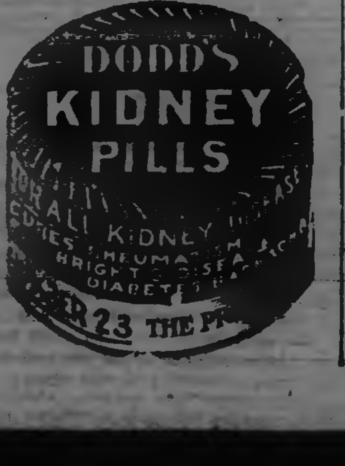
"Yes," replied the major, who knew his weakness, "but never mind that now. You're due on the platform."

"Run in somebody else for ten or fifteen minutes," said Mark Twain. "I shall do ever so much better after a little exercise."

And he did.

The Chicken Oath.

For the first time in the history of the Vancouver courts the chicken oath was administered recently to Mah Quang, a Chinaman, who was a witness in the case of seven men charged with rioting at Nanaimo. After the oath was administered a young white cock was procured, its head placed on a block of wood, and chopped off by the Chinaman. The ceremony was witnessed by a large crowd of persons.



DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

The daughter of one of Glasgow's wealthiest merchants recently eloped with a skating rink instructor.

Some time ago she went on a visit to a distinguished Ayrshire family, and first met her lover at a skating rink at Ayr, where he was employed as an instructor.

The attraction was mutual, and during the remainder of her stay she was a constant visitor at the rink. In due course she returned to her home in the west end of Glasgow, and shortly afterwards the young man secured a situation as instructor at the Victoria road rink, the first skating pavilion opened in Glasgow.

At last they made up their mind to elope, and a few weeks ago, in Edinburgh, the couple, duly accompanied by two witnesses, were united in matrimony by a sheriff. On the following day they set off for London to spend their honeymoon. The father followed, and after a stormy interview, the young wife returned to Glasgow with her father. The husband followed later, and the next chapter of the romance has yet to be written.

Before becoming a skating instructor the husband was employed in an insurance office. He is said to be a son of the proprietor of an hotel in Paisley, and is of the same age as the bride.

Besides being an heiress, the young wife is understood to possess already a small fortune, which rumor puts at $40,000.

Crowing.

Patience—I see Peggy has got one of those chanticleer hats.

Patrice—And she's crowing over it, I suppose?

"No; under it."—Yonkers Statesman.

Not Cometeering.

Marsh—Have you seen the comet?

Mallow—No; I haven't kept any hours like that since the first of the year.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Romantic Career.

Kaid Belton, the young English officer who, at the age of twenty-six, became commander in chief to Mulai Hafid and helped him win the throne of Morocco, has had a stranger than fiction career. At nineteen he received his commission for bravery in South Africa, soon after achieved his captaincy in Somaliland, entered Mulai Hafid's service in 1908, and now everybody in Morocco calls him "the kingmaker."

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor

THAT PLAYED-OUT FEELING WAS QUICKLY REMEDIED AND HEALTH RESTORED

Story of a Merchant Who Almost Lost His Business and His Health Through Neglecting Early Symptoms of Disease.

"My life for years has been of sedentary character," writes T. R. Titchfield, head of a well known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family. I grew thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced — eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfitted for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxatives medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was forcibly struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect.

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Fire From Spontaneous Combustion

Lindsay Post: Shortly after five o'clock last evening the fire brigade was summoned to a fire in a pile of soft coal north of the coal chutes in the G.T.R. yards. A fire had been smouldering in the coal for some days, caused by spontaneous combustion.

Chicago Increases School Hours

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Beginning this week the number of school periods in the high school will be increased from six to eight, thus adding one hour each day to the afternoon session, making it possible for high school pupils in the future to graduate in three years instead of four.

An Early Spring

Yesterday was Candlemas Day, when popular superstition has it that if the bear, crawling from its hibernating quarters, sees his shadow he goes back again to sleep for months. As there was no sunshine yesterday, Bruin could not have seen his shadow. Hence we may look for an early spring.

Improvements to National

Yesterday a procession of sleighs owned by the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co. took their turns at the east side of the National Hotel, taking away loads of earth in turn. This earth was thrown out of the hotel cellar which is being mae much deeper.

Farmers' Institute.

The short course in judging held by the Farmers' Institute, was commenced at the armouries yesterday afternoon, with Mr. G. A. Gillespie exhibiting in Holsteins, dairy cattle, and S. F. Redmond, Otonabee, in Shorthorns, beef cattle. Mr. Harding of Thorndale, was the judge.

Life Problem Club

There was arecord attendance at the Y.M.C.A. Life Problem Club, when Dr. Moir gave a most interesting address on "What a Young Man Ought to Know." The affair was of an informal character. The speaker for Sunday, Feb 7th, will be Mr. Edgar S. Webb, physical director of Orillia Y.M.C.A.

A Self-Confessed Murderer.

Yesterday afternoon, a self-confessed murderer walked into the local police station. He is an Englishman about 30 years of age, who gave his name as Alfred Kimberly. The self-indicted prisoner said he was concerned in the murder of a woman in Wiltshire, Eng. some seven years ago. The prisoner will appear before the Magistrate this morning.

Victoria County Engineer

The question of retaining the services of a County Engineer was brought up by Victoria County Council. Mr. Robertson said Engineer Smith was not engaged at a yearly salary. A letter was read from Mr. R. H. Hopkins asking for consideration for the appointment of County Engineer as he understood the present engineer was resigning.

Reduces Express Rates

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 2.—The new schedule of express rates promulgated by the railway commission, which became operative to-day, provides as follows:

Where the rates per 100 lbs. are 90 cents, the reductions in the present minimum charges are 2-lb parcels, 5 cents; 3 lbs., 15 cents; 4 lbs., 20 cents; 5 lbs., 25 cents; 6 and 7 lbs., 23 cents. The reductions and the longer hauls are slightly less.

Lakefield Girl in Trouble.

Belleville Ontario: A girl named Bertha Bell, was placed under arrest on a charge of vagrancy last night. This morning she was remanded to jail until Monday, February 9th. The girl comes from Lakefield. She has worked until Monday last, but since has been sleeping in porches at night. A clergyman noticing her predicament notified the authorities to see that she was given care, for fear she would be exposed to the weather.

Local Police Praised.

"I cannot express myself too deeply in praising the good work of the Peterborough Police Department," said Inspector John H. Boyle, of Springfield, Mass., yesterday afternoon. Mr. Boyle is the Chief Inspector of Detectives of the Springfield Department, and was here in company with Inspector Quilty to take back to Springfield, Arthur H. Brodeur, the man arrested by the local police, and who is wanted on the other side for murder. The prisoner was taken back during the afternoon.

Blacklister Gets Memory Cure.

At yesterday's police court, Robert Irwin, appeared charged with being drunk while on the blacklist. He admitted that he had a drink, and that he was on the blacklist. He refused to tell who supplied the liquor. On entering the witness box he seems to have found it occupied by a tagless dog. When the dog was made vacate the premises, Robert still refused to tell where he got the liquor. He got a two weeks' memory cure in Castle Nesbitt.

A Too Youthful Marriage

Port Hope Guide: Eugene Lovelace, of Verona, a mere child, who will not be fourteen years of age until March 19th, next, and Laura Richardson, who is 18 years old, and lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Richardson, 235 Wellington street, were married by Rev. Mr. Campbell, of Queen street Methodist Church, a week ago Saturday night. As a result of this it is not improbable that the government officials will be called upon to take some action in the matter in view of the very tender years of the participants

SEE IF THE CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

Mother! Don't hesitate! If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly, on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Women's Chambray and Percale Blouses in a Grand Clearance at 49c

Being of American Chambray and Percale, they possess the inestimable virtue of laundering successfully, besides retaining a fresh wholesome appearance until completely worn out. While for these very reasons, no other garment could be more perfectly adapted for wear around the house, or more easily slipped on, seeing that most of them button down the front. There are three lines in this clearance for Wednesday, and they comprise many different designs which all show taste and neatness in their make-up. One style is made with high collar, while another popular pattern has the convenient and easy fitting low Dutch collar, the sizes ranging 34 to 42. Particular emphasis however, should be laid upon the price, which cannot be accepted as any comparison of the value, because these are all 75c to 98c Blouses, when sold in the usual way. This is just another instance of the splendid buying opportunities the Annex offers to its patrons. Wednesday's price for these handy Blouses being ... 49c

BOMBAY FACTORY COTTON, 9c YARD

Here is a firm, clean cotton that is fully a yard wide, and which will bleach to a perfect white. This is a new line for the Annex which is offered at a very saving price. Wednesday, per yard 9c

Scotch Fingering, Per Skein 4c

Beehive 4 Ply, 2 Skeins 15c

KINGCOT SHIRTINGS, 11c YD.

Being our standard 15c line you will find these Shirtings to be of very satisfactory quality, and procurable in dark blue stripe and check patterns. The width is 29 to 30 inches; and the Annex price, per yard 11c

LEATHERETTE HAND BAGS, 25c

Particularly cheap at this price, because they are of good, roomy size in a black leatherette, having a gilded frame, while the handles are similar to the bag. They are lined with moire and were originally worth three times the figure at which we are now clearing them. Wednesday 25c

LACES and INSERTIONS, 2c YARD 20c DOZEN YARDS

Valenciennes and Torchon Laces in scores of different and pretty designs. They are 5c to 8c lines, useful in many ways, and undeniably cheap on Wednesday at, per yard 2c

20c DOZEN YARDS

Kimono Cloths of Rare Value at 10c

THIS IS LESS THAN HALF PRICE in many instances, because these English and German Kimona Cloths have been 15c to 25c the yard in our regular stock.

Amongst them you will find excellent patterns and colorings, and the soft yet strong texture that is so necessary for the successful making of Kimonas. While at 10c a yard they are a marvel of cheapness.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time it! — "Pape's Diapepsin" makes your upset, bloated stomach feel fine in five minutes

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that — just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

New York Detectives Have Arrived in Quebec to Testify To-Day

Quebec, Feb. 3.—Although J. O. Mousseau, who has resigned his seat in the Legislature, with Hon. Achille Bergevin and Hon. L. P. Berard, the members of the Upper House, in the face of alleged graft exposures in The Montreal Daily Mail, will be unable through nervous breakdown to attend the session of the legislative committee inquiring into the charges, it is altogether likely that a small sub-committee will be formed to visit the patient at his home in Montreal and take a statement from him when he is well enough to give it.

Mousseau Should Answer.

The feeling among members of the committee to-day seemed to be that Mr. Mousseau should make some kind of a statement or other, as otherwise there would be only one side of the charges, that of the Burns' detectives who worked up the case, and the publishers of the Mail.

The members of the committee feel that this is the better course to pursue as it will save Mr. Mousseau the humiliation of answering the charge in public.

Attempts will also be made to bring Messrs. Berard and Bergevin before the Lower House Committee and their appearance and evidence is being eagerly awaited.

The Burns' detectives headed by Guy Buhlinger, First Deputy Commissioner of the Police of New York, will reach here this evening as it was announced that they had reached Montreal. There was a belief around Parliament buildings this morning that Legislative Council inquiry could be rushed through without the evidence of the Burns' detectives, and the lawyers for The Mail Publishing Company were greatly perturbed, as they held their testimony is most necessary to substantiate the allegations published. It was at first thought the Council probe would go on this morning and Mr. L. T. Marechal, for The Mail, protested to the Lower House Committee that he had not been notified.

Upper House Probe to Begin.

Ultimately it was decided to start the Upper House probe this afternoon and the evidence of Mr. Edward Beck, late editor of the Herald, who superintended the alleged graft exposure, will be repeated, and Messrs. Berard and Bergevin called. When the two last named give their testimony they will supply the first light of the legislators' side of the case. Mr. Berard has already contended that any money received in connection with the passage of the Montreal Fair bill came in the form of legitimate legal expenses. So far Mr. Bergevin has made no explanation which hinted at the Parliament Buildings that he had a surprise up his sleeve.

MAY DISCOVER THE COMBINE THAT KEEPS FOOD PRICES UP

Royal Commission Will Try to Get at Root of High Cost of Living Question.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—The Government commission investigating the high cost of living held another session at the Queen's Hotel this morning. The members would not divulge the nature of the proceedings.

It has been learned through an authentic source that the commission will ask prominent business men of the city, particularly those identified with the meat trade to appear before it and give evidence. Should any request be refused it lies within the power of the commission to exercise their royal jurisdiction and summon anyone who they believe can give evidence bearing on the case.

It is quite possible that the commission will try to discover if there is any combine to keep up the price of foodstuffs and for this purpose all witnesses will be cross-examined in addition to being allowed to offer any suggestions. Should such a combine or monopoly of any trade exists it will undoubtedly be kept under cover by those interested and the commission may have to adopt extreme measures to get at the root of the trouble.

The commission have not as yet arrived at any definite course in which they would go about their task of collecting evidence. Ottawa was the first city where evidence was taken and then the commission came to Toronto. When one or two other cities have been visited enough data will have been gathered on which to work and thereafter inquiries will be more minute and directed at the exact cause of the high cost of living.

Several weeks will be taken up in hearing the testimony of men supposed to be connected with the problem.

It is understood that magnates interested in other products than the meat trade will be requested to attend or summoned if necessary. By this means the commission hopes to get valuable knowledge.

After taking the evidence here the commission will go to another city and take evidence there. It is possible that they will again visit Toronto and recall some of the witnesses.

BRIDE SINCE DEC. 9 BUT NO ONE KNEW

Young Bride Just Couldn't Help Exhibiting Wedding Ring to Her Girl Friends

New Orleans, Feb. 2.—If pretty Mrs. Wilbur Campbell could only have refrained from exhibiting that wedding ring to the girls at Fuerst & Kraemer's candy store—well, no one would yet know that she was a Mrs.

She did mighty well at that, in face of her sex's traditional inability to keep a secret. She never whispered a word—only that ring did look so nice on her tapering finger! And it took from Dec. 9 to Feb. 1 to leak out!

Dec. 9 was the date that Wilbur Campbell, a young theatrical man, and Miss Malvina Kraemer, formerly a candy salesgirl at Fuerst & Kraemer's, stood before Judge Maher of Algiers and were made one, who had been twain.

They had permission of Mrs. Josephine Kraemer, mother of the girl, and it was all over in a minute, with the little wedding ring, which was to betray their secret later, shining on the bride's third left finger.

LITTLE BAND OF GOLD LETS OUT SECRET.

And then the couple came back to New Orleans and separated, with the terrible responsibility of keeping the secret, on their hands. It would never have got past Mr. Campbell. Even his own relatives didn't know. And little Mrs. Campbell would never have openly confessed, either. But there was the tell-tale ring, shouting and shouting, for someone to run and tell the newspapers. And finally someone did.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell only wanted to keep the marriage secret until the close of the theatrical season. If anyone believes they didn't do mighty well let them get married and try to keep it quiet.

A Little Mistake.

There are plays and plays. Most Peterborough people would not lend his countenance to the following snappy little one-act drama:

The play opens with a man and a woman side by side on a sofa, embracing each other passionately.

Into the drawing room stalks a man with a grip and an umbrella—of course, the husband, unexpectedly returned.

The husband no sooner sees the couple on the sofa than he whips out a revolver and kills them both—her first, him afterwards.

Then he puts on his glasses and, looking about him, suddenly gives a great start.

"Good heavens!" he exclaims, "I'm on the wrong floor."

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Cooler with snow flurries.

COBEQUID'S CAPTAIN CENSURED AND LET GO

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—The court therefore severly censures the master, but on account of the very efficient and satisfactory manner in which everything was carried out on board his ship for the safety of the passengers and crew after the stranding does not deal with his certificate.

Such is the finding of the board of inquiry into the wreck of the Cobequid, which, under Captain John Howson, was lost on January 13 by running into the end of Nova Scotia, while trying to enter the Bay of Fundy for St. John from Bermuda.

ASQUITH ANXIOUS NOW TO CONCILIATE ULSTER PROVINCE

London, Feb. 2.—John E. Redmond Irish Nationalist leader, and Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, were closeted with Premier Asquith at his official residence in Downing street this afternoon, and it was understood that the Government had determined to make another effort to conciliate Ulster before the heated debates in Parliament fan into flame the admittedly dangerous situation in the northern province of Ireland.

It is generally thought that Mr. Redmond holds the key to the position and it is pointed out in some quarters that if he is willing to go to the same lengths as Premier Asquith and the members of his Cabinet are ready to advance in order to placate the north of Ireland, the threats of civil war in that country can be averted.

Unionists say they would not be surprised to see Premier Asquith riding for a fall before the Home Rule bill is again reached, in case the Irish leader should refuse to make the concessions considered necessary by them. They say that if Mr. Redmond should agree to the exclusion of Ulster even for a specified term of years, an agreement might be reached.

Asiatics Are Openly Denounced in Congress at Washington — Want Japs Excluded.

(Special to The Times.)

Washington, Feb. 3.—Omission of Asiatic exclusion from the Burnett immigration bill precipitated lively discussion in the house today, the debate extending into a night session.

"Loose morals," declared Representative Carry, of California, "are universal among Japanese men and uncondemned among Japanese women; their daughters are sold without shame into immorality and there are 2,000,000. The idea of marriage between whites and Asiatics is revolting and menacing in problems of a mongrel racial degeneracy.

"The Japanese are driving the American farmer out of business in California," he said.

Representative Baker, of California, whose bill for exclusion and certification of Japanese and other Asiatics will be brought up later, quoted Thomas Jefferson as having said he wished there was a sea of fire separating the old country and America.

JUNIOR CITY LEAGUE.

Last night Brock street rink was well filled with an enthusiastic audience, who enjoyed a splendid exhibition of hockey. There were two game played, the first between the Boston Exploits and the Y.M.C.A., which resulted in the following score, Exploits 6, Y.M.C.A. 1.

The game was fast from start to finish, especially the Boston Exploits' forward line which is, without a doubt, a hard bunch to fight against, they are working all the time. It would be hard to pick a star last night as everybody was working their heads off, even to goal minder Grant Latimer, who played a brilliant game. Fred Graham, the famous little Lakefield rover, was again on the job, his stick-handling was nice to watch. Capt. Butcher was again in the limelight, being always in on top of the Y.M.C.A. goal. Wolff and Rose on the wings played fine hockey. Phelan and Regan on defence played a good game, breaking up rush after rush that looked like sure things. After the game, Mr. Peter Gettas gave the boys a banquet—Thanks to you Mr. Gettas.

The second game was between the Alerts and Wanderers, which resulted in Alerts 5, Wanderers 0.

W. J. GAGE GIVES $100,000

Makes a Total of Quarter of a Million From Him to Fight White Plague.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—The national sanitarium has received from Mr. W. J. Gage a contribution of $100,000 which will assist in providing for the maintenance of needy patients in Muskoka. This contribution makes Mr. Gage's total gifts to the cause total over $250,000.

Mr. Gage is practically the founder of the Sanitarium Treatment of Tuberculosis Movement in Canada and as a result of his efforts the movement has become nation wide,, sanitaria being thickly scattered throughout the Dominion.

"KING PIN" BOOK SWINDLER HELD

Charged With Plot to Steal $87,075 From Mrs. Mary Rogers

Boston, Feb. 1.—After a search lasting 13 months, and during which, the cities of Boston, New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago were "combed," Samuel Rosenfield, under indictment for conspiracy to steal $87,075 from Mrs. Mary L. Rogers of 906 Beacon street, by means of "de luxe" volumes of books, was arraigned yesterday before Judge Chase and held in $10,000.

Rosenfield pleaded not guilty, and his attorneys, Lewis Marks and Chas. S. Hill, asked for a reduction of bail on the ground that their client had come to Boston for the purpose of surrendering. Inspector Silas P. Waite, who made the arrest with Inspector Pierce, declared Rosenfield had no such intention, and Judge Chase refused the request.

The police claim that Rosenfield sold the "de luxe" books to Mrs. Rogers on the understanding that they were to be bought by the Chinese dynasty at a greatly increased price. When the alleged fraud was discovered Rosenfield was indicted, in December, 1912.

The search for him has included constant espionage on his Chicago home, where he has a wife and child; the following of various "de luxe" book salesmen plying a lucrative trade in Pittsburg; the frequent "drag-netting" of New York, and many trips back and forth between Boston and New York.

On Sunday night Inspector Waite learned that Rosenfield was at the hotel Oxford, where he had not registered and had asked for mail under another name. Rosenfield is the latest, and it is alleged, the "king pin" of a series of de luxe book men who are charged with having secured thousands of dollars from wealthy New England men and women—mostly women.

ANTI CIGARETTE LAW NOW BEFORE HOUSE

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—If Andrew Broder, member for Dundas, has his way, good-bye to the cigarette in Canada. Mr. Broder intends to introduce a resolution asking the Government to prepare legislation to prohibit the manufacture and sale of "coffin nails" in the Dominion. Several years ago Mr. Richard Blain (Peel) introduced a similar resolution, but it did not meet with approval in the House and died a natural death.

Last year a deputation representing the W.C.T.U., headed by Mrs. Gordon Wright, of London, waited upon the Premier asking that the Government introduce such legislation. The Premier was sympathetic but suggested that it would be much better to have the measure introduced by a private member so that every member in the House might feel perfectly free to express his view irrespective of party affiliations. Mr. Borden intimated that in his opinion education in the home on the subject at the present time was rather neglected, and said he could remember well what would happen to him if he, as a boy, had been caught smoking a cigarette

NUDE PHOTO CAUSE OF SUIT

Waltham Father Incensed at Discovery of Picture of High School Girl

Boston, Feb. 2.—Charging that his 16-year-old daughter was induced to pose in the nude and that photographs of her undraped form have been sold on trains, William A. Graham, a clockmaker, of 10 Harvard street, Waltham, yesterday filed in the East Cambridge court a $10,000 damage suit against Henry O. Ryder, aged 45 years and single, an artist and phorohrapher, living at 36 Islington road, Auburndale.

Graham's suit is the result of the discovery three weeks ago by his wife of a nude picture of their daughter, Helen Z. Graham, a sophomore in the Waltham high school, under the girl's bed. The daughter, according to her father, confessed that Ryder, by whom she had been employed since last summer, had induced her to pose in the nude on more than one occasion. She is alleged to have said that at one time she posed undraped three hours, and received $2 therefore.

Soon after the girl's alleged admission to her mother, Mr. Graham retained Atty. Bernard Murphy, after the suit was filed late yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Graham was bitter last night in denunciation of Ryder. Ryder has admitted that Miss Graham was in his employ, but denied that she ever posed for him in the nude.

Miss Graham is credited with being one of the prettiest girls in Waltham High school.

GERMANS LANDED IN FRANCE

Nancy, France, Feb 3.—Another German military aeroplane alighted to-day on French territory near the village of Croismare, six miles inside the frontier in the department of Meurthe-Et-Moselle. The two aviators, Lieutenants Prieston and Gemmer, of the German army, finding themselves in France, immediately called on the Mayor of Croismare. As they were in their German uniforms they created considerable excitement in the village.

The two officers explained that they had left Strassburg for Metz, but had lost their way in the fog and had to descend to find out where they were. Their machine was damaged during the landing.

Two generals of the French army have been ordered to proceed from here to Croismare to investigate the incident.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY MAY SOON LEAVE HOSPITAL FOR HIS HOME

Expects to be Convalesent in a Fortnight--Sir George Ross Condition Unchanged

Toronto, Feb. 3.—Information was received to-day that within a fortnight at the latest Sir James Whitney will be in condition to permit of his being removed to his home. Yesterday he was allowed to sit up for a short time and his condition is quite satisfactory to his physicians. The Premier is partaking of plenty of nourishment and there has been no recurrence of the bad attack which threatened him some days ago. Sir James is enjoying plenty of sleep and is steadily gaining strength.

There is but little change in the condition of Sir George Ross. He is resting quietly, but, it is understood has expressed the wish that he might be allowed to be removed to his own home. This, however, under the present circumstances, is not considered advisable. Sir George, while any change in his condition for the better is not noticeable, has suffered no relapse or change for the worse.

MEXICAN REBELS WINNING IN MANY PARTS OF THE COUNTRY

Mexico City, Feb. 3.—Federal troops are being rushed from Saltillo and San Luis Potasi to Torreon to assist in its defence. Gen. Jose Refugio Velasco's command there is said to number 5,000.

General Blanquet, the War Minister is authority for the statement that the Federal force sent southward has checked the advance of the rebels from Durango and the force under General Orozco which has been sent north it is expected to hold back Villa's men.

The rebel movement in the State of Oaxaca is becoming more active, and the Fifth Regiment was despatched from here last night to that section of the country.

Jose Luis Requena and Petro Villar, who recently were arrested in connection with an alleged plot against the Government and later were released, will leave Mexico on Thursday.

Vera Cruz, Feb. 3.—The American Consul at Tampico reports by wireless that the rebels have attacked the defeated them at Altamira, fifteen miles north of this city. The Federals retreated to the south. It is believed that the rebels are in strong force and intend to renew their attack on Tampico.

OUR EDUCATION BOARD HOLDS REGULAR SESSION

Last night the local Board of Education met in regular session with Dr. Morrison in the chair. A number of accounts were presented.

There were present Messrs. Smith, Hill, Crane, Miller, Burnham and Hayes.

The minutes of the last meeting were confirmed.

A circular letter was read from Major Gillespie of Kingston.

Mr. Perks has resigned as has Miss King from the local teaching staff.

A report of the local school attendance was then read.

A report of monies received was next read.

A number of accounts were recommended by the Finance Committee to be paid.

Mr. Crane then presented Miss Kennedy's report, which seemed very satisfactory. It was referred to the Property Committee.

Mr. Crane presented a report by Mr. Mowat regarding the price of text books, which demonstrated that our text books are not too expensive. The report however, has no material effect on the cost of books. Mr. Mowat showed how, in recent years the number of text books used here has been greatly increased.

Mr. Hill moved that the Committee on appointments nominate successors to Mr. Perks and Miss Kennedy.

The matter of a child suffering with "mumps" was brought up. Inspector Mowat said that if one child in a family had mumps, this did not debar the rest of the children of the same family from attending school.

Report of Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Hill submitted the following report

Gentlemen,—Regarding the matter of the form of Teachers' Contract, your committee after a very full consideration, recommend that Clause 6 be amended to read as follows:

"That the Board of Education and the Teacher may, at their option, respectfully terminate this engagement prior to or subsequent to the expiration of said year, by giving notice in writing to the other of them at least two calender months previously, but so that such engagement may terminate on the last day of December or August."

That Clauses 8 and 9 be eliminated and that the following clauses be embodied therein.

(8) "Said salary may be increased from year to year, according to the schedule adopted by the Board from time to time."

(9) "This Agreement shall also be construed to continue in force from year to year unless and until it is terminated by the notice hereintofore prescribed."

That the Secretary be instructed to have new forms printed and a copy forwarded to the Principal of the Collegiate Institute and the Inspector of Public Schools advising them that all the members of the staff will be required to sign the same on or before the 30th of June next.

He Was Right.

"How old are you?" asked one of Jim Lewis' barbers the other days, of a patron who was having his hair trimmed.

"Thirty-nine last Tuesday."

"Have you been long bald?"

"Lemme see. Ah, yes, I was quite bald thirty-nine years ago."

NEW PLANS TO IMPROVE POTATO, EXPERTS DECLARE

French Scientists, by Vegetable Sex Hygiene, Plan to Develop Tubers

Paris, Feb. 3.—Race betterment among potatoes is promised by three French experts who have succeeded in producing potato-bearing plants from seeds. The leaders in this new vegetable sex hygiene are M. Sartory, Graliot and Thiebbut, who declare that many centuries of sexual cultivation of potatoes has so enfeebled the present race of roots that they easily fall prey to various potato disease which a young and healthy race of plants would be able to resist.

Potato seed planted in the ordinary way fails to produce plants with potato-bearing roots, but the experts found that in conjunction with certain ground mushrooms the potato seed would produce as desired. The mushrooms, by attaching themselves to the young plant, provoke the formation of potatoes.

The 1913 crop from sixty plants consisted of potatoes about the size of a walnut, though some ran larger. The best of these roots were again planted in 1913, and it is announced that they have produced vigorous fruit-bearing plants entirely free from any of the common potato ailments. Much importance is attached to the discovery, which not only provides a means of rapidly regenerating the potato, but makes it possible by crossing and selection to develop a number of different varieties possessing qualities which it may be desirable to cultivate in the potato either from the commercial or the elimentary point of view.

The assignment of Professor Klepfel of the University of Paris to fill the chair of French learning founded at Dartmouth college by Edward Tuck has been made by the newly created national office of universities and schools in connection with the ministry of public instruction, and it is expected that the scheme of exchanging professors with foreign countries will be extensively developed. Professorships have already been exchanged between France and Germany, Russia, Roumania and other European countries as well as with the United States.

The United States at present holds first place in the number of professorships exchanged with France and this will be increased during the year. Professor Abel Lafranc of the College de France has undertaken a series of lectures at the University of Chicago and he will be followed by other French savants as a result of negotiations between the new office of universities and schools and several American universities.

Our National Game.

"The raw American citizen," says Ellis Parker Butler in Success Magazine, "who takes his seat at a ball game for the first time feels as he would should he drop into the Metropolitan Opera House and find himself hearing Wagnerian opera from a seat in the midst of seasoned German opera goers. He hears a language that is new to him. The man at his right can tell more about the first baseman's peculiarities than he could tell about the manners of his own wife. The man at his left has trouble remembering the size collar he wears, but he can name every man in every club of both major leagues, tell the age of each, give the complete table of batting records offhand and recite, item by item, every feature of every game played on the home grounds during the last five years. That is why baseball is our national game. We love the game not because we are Chicagoans and the Chicago nine wins nor because we are Pittsburgers and the Pittsburg nine is winning, but because we are educated in baseball and like to see a good game played by the best men in their field that can be found in the world."

Her Father's Job.

The young daughter of a popular Chicago clergyman some time ago manifested a quick wit. Her father had gone on a brief holiday with a business parishioner and associate, and the talk of the children turned on the problem of which father needed the rare rest most sorely.

"Well, I think my father works the hardest," said little Miss Business, "and his work keeps him stirred up and anxious most of the time."

"Your father may work the hardest in one way," was little Miss Clergyman's answer, at once thoughtful and diplomatic, "but I think he gets more rest as he goes along. You see, he can let down a little evenings and Sundays, and if he gets cross and nervous nobody says anything. But my daddy has to be better than ever Sundays and evenings, because then everybody's taking notice and the whole lot of us children are around."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Moving Sermon.

"I once had a parishioner who was a miser," said an English clergyman. "For this man's benefit I preached one Sunday a strong sermon on the necessity of charity, of philanthropy—a sermon on the duty and the joy of giving. The miser, at whom I gazed often, seemed impressed.

"Next day I met him on the street.

"'Well, John,' I said, 'what do you think of yesterday's sermon?'

"'It moved me deeply, sir,' he answered. 'It brought home to me so strongly the necessity of giving alms that honestly, sir, I've a great mind to turn beggar.'"

LAUGHTER AND TEARS.

A Comedy Scene In Which Grief Played a Leading Part.

"Stage fright is not one of the emotions which get across the footlights," writes Miss Alice Crawford. "Audiences are for the most part as serenely unconscious of it as they are of other individual sentiments in the actors having no relation to the incidents of the play.

"I shall never forget an instance of this curious insensibility of the crowd. Once when I was touring one of the most charming and popular girls of the company died after only a few days' illness. She was one of those sweet, tranquil natures and had endeared herself to us all. Her death in lodgings in the small provincial town had an element of real tragedy in it.

"The news that she was dead reached the theater in the evening just as two of the actors and I were about to go on for a scene of broad comedy. We went on the stage with tears in our eyes, and I can still see the face of one of these comedians with the great tears glistening on the paint. He was dreadfully affected. Try as he would, he could not control his voice, and the tears kept choking him as he rattled off his lines.

"The audience were convulsed every time his voice broke, and it made me cry more than ever to see the grief shaking him as he grinned and chaffed through his tears. Yet that comedy scene never went so well before. The audience never guessed."—Exchange.

Censure and Curiosity.

"Mr. Johnson," says Mr. Miggles, "I don't want to hurt your feelings, but that story you started to tell at my house last night was one no gentleman of refinement would have told in mixed company. I feel that it is my duty to express my disapproval of such conduct."

"I'm quite sorry," says Mr. Johnson. "I should have thought before beginning it. Halfway through I realized what I was telling, and, you remember, I did my best to end the thing at once."

"Yes, I noticed it fell pretty flat, and everybody could see that you were terribly ashamed. Er—how does the story finish, Johnson?"—Chicago Post.

THE ARTIST'S IDOL.

She Didn't Know Anything About Music; She Only Loved It.

The incident happened upon one of the great ocean liners during an autumn trip when a famous violinist was among the passengers. At first he firmly refused to play, but was finally persuaded, and upon the appointed evening the salon was crowded with eager passengers.

It was a most enthusiastic audience, intelligent, sympathetic and appreciative, yet as the evening wore on people began to notice that the violinist's glance went always in one direction, and after a time others followed it.

They saw a plain little woman, plainly dressed, with no marks of wealth or culture. But she was looking at the master with shining eyes, her face wet with tears, unmindful of everything except the magic of his violin. When the program was ended, pushing his way through the people who would have detained him, the musician went straight to the little shabby figure.

"Madame, I congratulate you—you are so great artist!" he cried.

She looked up at him almost in alarm.

"I—oh—I cannot play a note," she stammered. "I don't know anything about music. I only—love it."

The violinist shook his big shaggy head impatiently.

"Is it not what I say? You have ze artist soul—ze artist to listen. What good to play to ze deaf—like ze rest?" with a disparaging gesture toward the crowded room. "It is to ze one wis ze heart to listen zat we masters play."—Youth's Companion.

AN OLD TIME EXPLOSION.

Its Curious Phases Told by a Seventeenth Century Scribe.

An old chronicler tells a curious story of an explosion which occurred in London Jan. 4, 1649. A ship chandler, it seems, "about 7 of the clock at night, being busy in his shop about barreling up of gunpowder, it took fire and in the twinkling of an eye blew up not only that, but all the houses thereabout to the number of fifty or sixty. The number of persons destroyed by this blow could never be known, for the next house but one was the Rose tavern, a house never (at that time of night) but full of company. And in three or four days, after digging, they continually found heads, arms, legs, etc." The most interesting part of the account comes further on:

"In the digging they found the mistress of the house of the Rose tavern sitting in her bar and one of the drawers standing by the bar's side, with a pot in his hand, only stifled by dust and smoke, their bodies being preserved whole by means of great timbers falling across one upon another.

"There was also found upon the upper leads of Barking church a young child lying in a cradle as newly laid in bed, neither child nor cradle having the least sign of fire or other hurt. It was never known whose child it was, so that one of the parish kept it for a memorial, for in the year 1666 I saw the child, grown to be then a proper maiden."

Funny In the Wrong Place.

That Prussian police officials are devoid of humor is the firmly rooted opinion of a traveler for a Berlin cotton firm. His business took him to the little town of Nordenburg. When the hotel register was placed before him he filled in the various columns and when he came to "Aim of the Journey" he wrote, "The wide, wide world." Fourteen days later he was charged with having committed a public outrage, for which he was fined six marks, one day's imprisonment being the alternative.

Pumice Stone.

Pumice is an acid volcanic rock, which may be in either massive or finely comminuted form. It owes its peculiar porous, vesicular or pumiceous condition to the rapid expansion of included moisture or gases, due to sudden release of pressure at the time of its ejection from the volcano. This expansion may be carried to such an extent that the rock is completely shattered, and the resultant finely powdered material may be carried to unknown distances by wind and air currents and then deposited in beds several feet thick.

Who Wins?

"Dear philosopher," writes a correspondent, "will you please settle a dispute for us? A and B make a wager as to which can 'shoot' the most rabbits. The contestants take different territories and hunt all day. At the time appointed they meet. A has no rabbits at all, but B has an animal which proves to be A's pet cat. Who wins?"

It is hard to decide this bet. In view of the fact that B gets not only A's cat, but his goat, we should say that A should buy the cove oysters.

One Consolation.

During the time he acted as United States consul in Glasgow Bret Harte occasionally indulged in a day's sport with the gun, and it was during one of his shooting excursions that the humorist met with an accident which might have disfigured him for the remainder of his life, his face being badly cut through the recoil of an overloaded gun. Fortunately the doctor's skill prevented him from being permanently marked.

Writing about the occurrence to his friend, T. Edgar Pemberton, who quotes the letter in his "Tribute to Bret Harte," the novelist concludes his letter by telling of an amusing effort which was made to console him on account of the accident.

"When the surgeon was stitching me together," he wrote, "the son of the house, a boy of twelve, came timidly to the door of my room.

"'Tell Mr. Bret Harte it's all right,' he said. 'He killed the hare.'"

Kept Him Guessing.

"The course of true love never does run smooth."

"Well, it's a good thing. When a young man finds things running too smoothly he is apt to get bored and wander away."—Kansas City Journal.

A Poor Recommendation.

"He means well," she said.

"Say no more," he replied. "I know now exactly what sort of a fool he is."—Detroit Free Press.

THE NEW COATS ARE SHORT—MANY FLARE SLIGHTLY AT THE BOTTOM

With the increasing popularity of the draped and be-ruffled hip the short coat naturally follows. Many of them terminate at the waist, others come slightly below. It is quite a fad to have one of these smart little coats made up in velvet, brocaded or plain, to wear with a light weight frock. Often the color is in decided contrast with the gown. Trimmings are usually of fur. Number 8133-8082 shows one of these new little coats with a three tiered skirt. Dark blue velours de laine is used with a vest of brocade. A smart feature of the coat is the rolled collar and the sleeve which is in raglan effect without a seam at the center back. The tunics on the skirt are pointed in back.

This suit may be copied in size 36 with 2¾ yards of 42-inch material for the coat and 4⅞ yards of 42-inch material for the skirt.

The second frock illustrated is a coat dress for a girl of from 14 to 18. Dark blue serge is the material with a belt and collar of white ratine. It is one of those novel youthful designs so charming for the school girl.

It will require 4⅝ yards of 36-inch material to copy this frock in size 16.

Number 8133—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 8082—sizes 22 to 32.
Number 8161—sizes 14 to 18.

Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

[illegible] IT WON'T WORK

Sir Oliver Lodge, an English scientist, says that things will soon be so arranged that rain may be obtained at any time desired by merely pressing a button. But he ought to know that it will be dangerous to monkey in this way with the celestial arrangements. Some man is bound to want a rainstorm on the same day that his wife is scheduled to give a lawn party, and the farmer who wants hot, dry weather for his grain will go gunning for his neighbor whose alfalfa needed wetting. The button business won't do at all. If it is not cut out some jealous woman when there is a millinery parade on Easter Sunday will press a button and start Jupiter Pluvius working double time on the job.

Stuffy Feeling About the Nose Relieved at Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wassan, of Blair, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrhozone set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people began to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Medium size 50c; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Hon. Mr. Pelletier is said to be exceedingly hopeful that the parcel post will become at once a very material link between producer and consumer and that shipments of farm produce to towns and cities will be entirely feasible. He is, no doubt, aware that experts of the United States postoffice and agricultural departments are now investigating, in order to discover how that link can best be provided. The most important step in their opinion is the development of a comprehensive system of informing consumers where they can purchase what they want within reasonable distance and incidentally the experts are seeking to evolve satisfactory containers for the conveyance of dairy and farm products. Mr. Pelletier's cheap local zone provision should lend itself to the same objects. Much can also be done by the formation of associations in the centres of population and provision of distributive services.

$100 REWARD $1.00

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, there destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Sir,—I saw in your paper of Thursday a report of the City Council's meeting at which the 57th Regiment Band asks for an increase of $200 in the city's grant. I consider this would be a wise move. WARD NAMES

Suggestions from correspondents regarding names for city suburbs.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—As an old timer and seeing the ideas thrown out by your various correspondents in reply to your enquiry asking suggestions for names for the different sections of our city it has appealed to me as a good idea. From the very fine lot of names you have been furnished with, most appropriate selection can be made.

I would name the following as my preferences: For Ward 5—The good old name of "Ashburnham" cannot be bettered.

Then north east of the river, the present name of "Auburn" has always been a favorite with our citizens.

The name "Kawatha Gateway" suggested by your correspondent appeals to me as the best advertisement for our city of any name that could be given to that district. As everyone knows the beauty and growing popularity of this wonderful chain of lakes.

Change the name of Jackson Park to "Vale of Aroca." It would be more interesting to strangers and a better drawing card, than the present name, for the street railway. It has the hills, dales and water, which make it the most attractive spot inside the corporation.

"West Side," the names given by the people who have opened up the new building section. "Victoria Heights" could not be bettered.

South of the General Electric to the river, from the boundary to the river, "River Side."

THE GREEN PLOVER

Every "man on the land" knows the lapwing, or green plover, though he may not know that this bird is one of the very best friends of the farmer and literally worth its weight in gold several times. It takes its proper name, lapwing, from the regular, slow flapping of the long, rounded wings. Because of its peculiar cry it is popularly known in England as the peewit and in Scotland as peesweep. The Germans call it kiebitz. The French say that it can count "eighteen" (eighteen in French is dixhuit, which is pronounced deeseweet). The peewit is found in every country in Europe and Asia. In Great Britain it was once very common, being chiefly found in marshes, moors and meadows, but its numbers are gradually decreasing because its eggs are collected and sold as "plovers' eggs," for which there is a large demand during the proper season.—Smallholder.

Inertia of the Nerves.

The researches and experiments of a French scientist have led him to the conclusion that the cerebral nervous system is incapable of perceiving more than an average of ten separate impressions per second. After each excitation of the nerves a period of inertia follows, lasting about one-tenth of a second, and during this period a new impression cannot be made. According to the investigations of this scientist a person cannot make more than ten or at the most a dozen separate voluntary movements of any kind in a second, although the muscles, independently of the will, are capable of making as many as thirty or forty.

DAILY SHORT STORY

FLOOR PRIVILEGE

Congress Guards It Jealously In Both Houses.

RARELY USED IN THE SENATE

Former Members of That Body, While Free to Attend Its Sessions, Prefer to Shun the Scene of Their Splenic Efforts—A Story of Evarts.

What is known as "the privilege of the floor" in congress is the right to go upon the floor of the senate or house when either body is in session.

Although the right to go upon the floor of a legislative body is not so exclusive a privilege in some of the state legislatures, it is a great privilege and an exclusive one in congress. The doors are carefully guarded while congress is in session, and it is sometimes exceedingly difficult to have access to senators or representatives when public business is being done.

Senators and representatives have no regular or rigid rule on the subject, but it is known in Washington that the statesmen feel that their constituents or others who desire to see them privately should endeavor to do so in their offices, their committee rooms or at their residences.

To former members of the senate and house "the privilege of the floor" is given, but they do not often avail themselves of that right. This, however, is in strong contrast to the customs of twenty years ago and longer, when it was not uncommon to see former members moving about on the floor of the house when it was notoriously known that they were lobbying for some private claim or public graft.

Speaker Reed found this condition so obnoxious that he issued orders that no ex-members should be permitted to pass the doorkeepers without written authority from the speaker. Subsequent speakers have not found it necessary to draw the lines so rigidly, because the abuse has almost entirely ceased.

There is an unwritten law, however, governing the privilege of the floor of the senate, and it is the unwritten law of good breeding, good manners and common sense. Every ex-senator has the privilege of the floor, but it is so seldom exercised that its abuse has never occurred, nor is it ever likely to occur.

Former members of the senate are never seen there unless it is well known that they have proper business calling them to Washington, such as appearing before the supreme court as attorneys for clients in great cases, and even then it seldom happens that an ex-senator thus engaged ever enters upon the senate floor, although in going to and from the room of the supreme court they are obliged to pass by its doors.

After James G. Blaine ceased to be a senator he avoided the senate chamber forever. After resigning from that body Senator Roscoe Conkling of New York never entered the senate chamber, although he was often in the capitol on business before the supreme court. There was an exception, however, in one instance. By invitation he was one of the pallbearers of Senator Logan of Illinois, who was buried with obsequies from the senate chamber, and on that occasion Senator Conkling was present. Senator Benjamin Harrison upon leaving the senate never crossed its threshold until he went there to be inaugurated as president. Senator Dawes of Massachusetts, Senator Blair of New Hampshire, Senator Don Cameron of Pennsylvania, Senator Thurman of Ohio and Senator McDonald of Indiana are examples of distinguished senators who remained away from the senate after their terms expired. During the period of four years when he was in retirement Senator Gorman of Maryland never availed himself of the privilege of the floor, and during the two years he was without election Senator Quay of Pennsylvania absented himself from the senate chamber.

From a veteran employee of the senate there is gleaned an unusually interesting story concerning the late Senator Evarts of New York. This senator was one of the greatest intellects in public life for many years, but he was absentminded in small things. On one occasion he overlooked the rule about the privilege of the floor. He was entertaining Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes at his Washington home and invited his guest to accompany him to the capitol. Together they walked along the capitol corridor, and when they came to the door of the senate they entered together.

There was a copy of the senate rules on each side of the doors, but Senator Evarts did not look at them, nor, of course, did his guest. The doorkeepers did not interfere or ask any questions.

Well, Senator Evarts gave Dr. Holmes a seat in the rear of the desks of the members and proceeded to bring Senators Hoar, Quay, Hawley and others to introduce to him. Quite a levee was held there, and Dr. Holmes was gratified with his reception.

After awhile Senator Hoar went to Senator Evarts and, calling his attention to the rule concerning the privilege of the floor, asked, "How did you get him in?"

"He is my private secretary," said Senator Evarts quickly, with a boyish twinkle in his serious eyes. At that time private secretaries of members were allowed the floor privilege.—Smith D. Fry in Washington Star.

Inherited.

Knicker—Jones is all the time wanting more money. Bocker—No wonder; his father was a college president and his mother was a woman.—New York Sun.

He only confers favors generously who appears, when they are once conferred, to remember them no more.—Johnson.

A MODERN PRESS

The Times To Be Greatly Improved in the Near Future

A Web Perfecting Press to Be Installed, the Circulation Having Outgrown Present Facilities—A Machine That Will Turn Out 5,000 Copies of the Paper Per Hour Has Been Purchased.

The rapid increase in the circulation of The Times during the past few months has made it necessary for the proprietor to instal a modern web newspaper press, which will print and deliver 5,000 folded papers per hour. This machine will be installed in about three weeks, and it is expected will be in commission by the end of the present month.

A night telegraphic service has been arranged, which will be in operation at an early date. It is our purpose to make The Times as near equal to the Toronto morning daily newspapers as possible, so that it will be in demand everywhere throughout Central and Eastern Ontario.

The Times will continue its policy of fearlessly advocating Equal Rights with special privileges to no church or creed. The time has arrived, we believe, when the press of Canada should take a decided stand against anything that savors of priestly or ministerial interference in political matters. Protestants are willing that their Roman Catholic fellow citizens should have every privileges that they themselves enjoy—but no more. The Roman Catholic hierarchy should and must be content with this, if harmony is to prevail.

The new equipment above referred to will add strength to our arm, and will enable us to battle more effectively for the principles above referred to. In the meantime we ask our friends to assist us by speaking a good word for the paper whenever they can, and thus increase our circulation. We want to add a couple of thousand new names to our list during the coming spring.

pleasing variations of costume not otherwise possible.

In the illustration an example of the skilful combination of plaids is shown to advantage. In this case the skirt is of one of the tartan plaid serges, in fine weave, and dull blues and greens with the thread of yellow and red which gives life without being obtrusive. It is made in the modified peg-top style. The tunic is of plaid silk in the same colorings but a very different plaid. Indeed, so narrow are the dividing lines that only close scrutiny makes them apparent.

At first glance the effect is of stripes running around the figure on the skirt of the tunic and biased on the bodice.

In this silk the widest stripe is blue, which is the strongest color in the plaid of the skirt, and the revers and sash are of satin in the same shade. A frill of cream lace finishes the neck. The cuffs are banded with the ribbon tied in a prim little bow.

The gown on the other figure is charming in its simplicity, and is beautifully suited for the same young schoolgirl for whom the plaid is intended.

It is pink silk mulle, the skirt having a tier of four ruffles, the upper and deeper one being the skirt of the tunic. Each ruffle is slightly lifted at the side and caught with wreaths of tiny pink chiffon roses. If a contrast is desired these rose garlands may be of pale blue, as the use of pink and blue is one of the season's fancies.

The bodice could not be more simple with its surplice closing, and is finished at the neck and elbow sleeves with a double ruching of the mulle. Where the surplice crosses there is another of the rose wreaths. The sash is of a deeper pink moire ribbon. A narrow band of the same ribbon divides the ruche of the sleeves.

Great Novels in a Nutshell

"The House of Seven Gables"

Condensed from the HAWTHORNE novel by HELEN S. GRAY.

SEVERAL houses in Salem have been pointed out with insistence as the originals of "The House of Seven Gables," but, while they doubtless contributed to the picture Hawthorne drew, he says himself that he built the mansion of material long in use for constructing castles in the air.

The book deals with an hereditary feud between the Pyncheons and the Maules dating back about two hundred years. Matthew Maule had cleared a patch of ground and built him a hut. Some forty years later Col. Pyncheon, a prominent and powerful personage, laid claim to Maule's clearing, together with a large tract of adjacent land, on the strength of a grant from the Legislature. Maule stubbornly maintained his right to his homestead until executed on the charge of witchcraft. From the gallows he hurled a curse on his enemy, who sat watching the scene and who, it was hinted, had helped secure his condemnation.

Col. Pyncheon then built a fine mansion with seven gables on the site of Maule's cabin. His enemy's son was head carpenter. When the mansion was finished Col. Pyncheon invited his friends and neighbors to a house-warming. When they came they found him dead in his big armchair. A vast tract of land in Maine, it was understood, had just been granted to him, but no trace of any deed could be found among his papers.

Nearly two centuries later the Pyncheon family was reduced to five members and, so far as known, there were no Maules. After a brief history of the Pyncheon family the scene of the story shifts to the opening of a shop for the sale of small wares in the old family mansion by Miss Hepzibah Pyncheon.

She was a "mildewed piece of aristocracy," who, like all her predecessors, cherished "an absurd delusion of family importance," based chiefly on shadowy claims to princely territory. Driven by stress of poverty Miss Hepzibah took a lodger named Holgrave and opened a shop. She was a gaunt, sallow, stiff-jointed woman of sixty, of unwholesome appearance and with a scowl due to near-sightedness, but which her neighbors thought indicated an ugly disposition. When disgrace fell upon her brother, in her grief and wounded pride she divested herself of her friends and held herself aloof as much as possible from her neighbors.

One day a young cousin, Phebe Pyncheon, came to visit Hepzibah. As her mother had remarried, Phebe arranged to live in the mouldy old mansion. Her presence was a great comfort to the elderly spinster and to the brother of the latter, who had just returned. Phebe assisted Hepzibah and went about her work singing.

Clifford Pyncheon had a sensitive, delicate, finely constituted nature such as artists and poets have, but his tendencies had all been hideously thwarted. He had spent thirty years in prison for a crime he did not commit. The experience had left him partly imbecile and at times partly crazy. His sentence was life imprisonment, but through the influence of his cousin, Judge Pyncheon, he had been released for the reason that he thought Clifford had some knowledge of the long lost deed and his memory might be revived regarding it.

Judge Jaffrey Pyncheon was a massive, imposing person, who always carried a big gold-headed cane. He resembled his ancestor, Col. Pyncheon. He always wore a benevolent aspect, but it veiled a guilty heart. In his youth he had been wild and in debt. One night he ransacked his uncle's papers and his uncle caught him in the act. It gave the old gentleman such a shock that he died then and there of apoplexy. Jaffrey continued his search and found two wills, one in his favor and a later one in favor of Clifford, which he destroyed. Circumstances pointed to murder, and Jaffrey allowed it to be thought so and Clifford to be punished for the crime. Judge Pyncheon was highly esteemed in the community. On the eve of his nomination as Governor of Massachusetts he died in the same manner as did Col. Pyncheon and in the same armchair.

The next ship from Europe brought news of the death of his only son. So Hepzibah, Clifford and Phebe inherited his large fortune. Just prior to the news of the death of the judge's son Holgrave and Phebe became engaged. Then he confessed that he was a Maule. The Maules all along had known the whereabouts of the missing deed, now worthless. It had been hidden by the carpenter Maule in a recess he had constructed behind Col. Pyncheon's portrait. In the marriage the ancient feud was ended.

On His Dreary Way

By Tom Jackson

THE PESSIMIST is one who views all earthly things with fear, whose system is all full of rust, unoiled and out of gear. He looks upon affairs of life with solemn face and grim, while indigestion seems to play a top-line part in him. If one should say, "It's a nice day, the sun is shining bright," the Pessimist would answer, "Yes, but it will rain by night." And when he eats a dinner fine he never can refrain from saying, "Oh, what is the use! I'll have to eat again." When e'er he sees a happy man he whispers, "Don't be gay, because you may be laid up sick before another day. But what's the use in living, pray? Oh, why do people try, when it is an established fact that they are bound to die?" There's no cure for the Pessimist, whose mind is full of doubt. When he approaches, if you can, just dodge behind a fence. He throws cold water on our smiles, he wears an icy mitt, and ev'ry jolly thing on earth he loves to smite and hit. He's never in a cheerful mood, except when he is sad; he's never feeling good at all unless he's feeling bad. We cannot teach the Pessimist to happy be and gay, or look upon the brighter side—he isn't built that way. So he goes on his dreary path and woe on sorrow piles, until he has his funeral, when everybody smiles.

"BEAUTY MUST BE INTELLIGENT"

Teresa Maxwell-Conover

Work, Hard Work, the Best Rule

By TERESA MAXWELL-CONOVER

BEAUTY is merely a letter of introduction—to your social world or to your audience, if you be an actress. You present it, and you are classified at once. You have afterward no prejudice to overcome, and the way is clear; but it is for you to find out what you are going to do with that introduction. That, in itself, is only an opportunity, an open gate.

The intelligent woman is not always physically beautiful, but the beautiful woman must be intelligent.

In regard to intelligence, one is never in doubt. You do not hear, "Is she intelligent?" for you know whether the person under consideration is of the elect or not. But when it comes to beauty——

I am reminded of what Clyde Fitch said when he dramatized "The House of Mirth." Many people remarked to him after the play the first night "Oh, that wasn't my idea of Lily Bart!" "If I had pleased every one," he answered, "I should have had to have as many Lilys as there were people in the house."

We rarely agree as to the ideal beauty, the exact composition of features, coloring, the ensemble, so to speak, but I believe we do agree that the highest type of beauty, the beauty that remains, the beauty that accomplishes great things, is always the beauty that has intelligence as its sister.

There is the beauty that strikes your new acquaintance, or the set at the shore, or your audience almost speechless. They say: "Isn't she lovely!" and then—they wait. If the first impression you make is not followed by an intelligent interpretation of your role as hostess or guest, or character in a play, your fall from grace is inevitable. It may not come at once; friends, acquaintances, the public, all are loath to turn the back on so much promise. But, unless you lock yourself in a showcase beyond the reach of our modern life your beauty cannot stand alone.

The beauty that cannot talk, that has no savoir faire, that knows nothing of the arts and artifices which must make the setting for the picture, that can take no interest except in its own physical perfection, that knows nothing of ambition, of work—for such beauty one can have only pity after the first admiring glance.

To be beautiful one must be human, and to be human means that you are in touch with the minds and hearts of those in your world. Living, as well as acting, is just dramatised understanding.

I think the only recipe for real beauty is work, intelligent work. One cannot stand still in this life. To stand still mentally means that beauty goes backward, too.

Whether you play the role of beautiful woman on the stage or in actual life you must remember that the part is only as strong as its weakest link. That you must strengthen by the only possible aid—intelligence, which means work.

One Unhygienic Day

By WINIFRED BLACK

opyright, 1914, by [illegible] ure Service.

Winifred Black

MR. and Mrs. Michael Shirley of Sonoma county, California, celebrated the 66th anniversary of their wedding the other day and Mrs. Shirley made the cake for the party.

Mrs. Shirley is something over 85 years old. I wonder what sort of a cake she baked.

I'll warrant it wasn't one of these little, niminy-piminy affairs with about a spoonful of jelly between the layers and a thin scattering of stingy sugar across its poor forlorn—this-beautiful-cake-for-59-cents and a half bakery window sort of top.

I'm willing to wager that that cake had five layers in it and every one of them was so full of jelly, good old-fashioned jelly at that, that you had to eat it with a spoon. And I'll bet that none of he wedding guests at that particular wedding celebration thought you ought to use an ice cream fork to do it.

Frosting—the frosting on Grandma Shirley's wedding cake—was half an inch thick and as smooth as the pond where she and Grandpa Shirley went skating——66 years ago, when her cheeks were red and his hair was black as the crow's wing.

I suppose none of the little great-grandchildren got a bite of that wedding cake—not a single, horrifying, unhygienic bite.

If they were nice, proper modern little children, they brought boughten wafers to the party and ate them instead and wished they were like grandma and had been born 85 years ago, when people ate what they wanted to and let the doctors worry about it.

I'd go half across the continent to be the guest of honor at such a party as that and leave all my new fangled ideas about hygiene and digestion and proteids and calories at home on the top shelf of the darkest closet in my perfectly new scientifically hygienic house.

Let's see—fried chicken—no, not broiled, thank you—fried, and fried brown—hot biscuits, potatoes mashed with cream—I do hope they brought them to the table in a blue dish with a big silver spoon standing straight up in the middle of them like a flag-staff. Succotash and hominy and sweet pickles and sour pickles and mixed pickles and preserved peaches and canned cherries and apple sauce with cinnamon in it and apple sauce without it, and quince jelly, pale and tinged with a geranium leaf—however did you get it so perfect, Aunt Mary—apple jelly as pink as the heart of an apple blossom in May, currant and grape-red and purple as the jewels Queen Esther wore at her coronation——

Pies—every kind you could think of, from lemon with whipped cream on top of it, browned just right in the old oven that could bake all around the new ovens—to fried apple, made specially to please Uncle James, and to vinegar pie, which was there to show what Grandma did when fruit was scarce in the early days and her man got pie hungry.

Indigestion—headache, the blues—never in the wide, wide world, not after that party, not even if you were the worst hygienic crank in the world.

Here's looking at you, Grandma Shirley, and at you, too, Grandpa Shirley—66 years married and not a divorce lawyer in the family records. When you looked across the table, Grandpa Shirley, at the withered face of the woman who has loved you so dear for these many years, I hope she looked as pretty to you the very day of that anniversary dinner as she did when you kissed her first, 66 years ago, in the old apple orchard, when the Early Junes were just beginning to ripen.

But, whisper—I hope neither of you told your guests that you'd never had a single quarrel in all the 66 years. If you did, every one who heard you tell it knew that you were either fibbing furiously or that one of you didn't amount to very much.

Happy days, old people—and many of them even yet.

Not Wealthy.

"Her face is her fortune."

"Then I suppose she was in earnest when she said she would be contented with love in a cottage."

Perhaps.

"I wonder why they call this the palm room?"

"Why, there are three or four palms here."

"Yes, but the waiters in the cafe and the other dining rooms exhibit theirs just as often."

Possibly.

Fijjit—What is meant by "initial velocity?"

Wijjit—That is the speed with which a man signs checks.

Two Real Advantages.

"He expects to make his fortune out of a combination of the phonograph and the moving picture."

"Oh, that idea is old."

"But he has a scheme for you to see the phonograph and hear the movie picture. Eh, what?"

Keeps Her Busy.

"Your wife says that she always speaks her mind," said John Doe.

"She does," assented Richard Roe, "and she has an active mind, too."

One Use for It.

"My ability to do tricks with cards," said the amateur prestidigitateur, "often proves quite handy."

"So I should think," said a solemn man. "Now I don't reckon you ever have any trouble getting a good sandwich at a railway lunch counter."

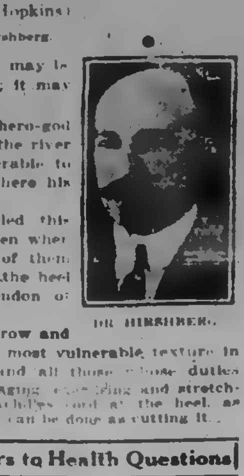
Secrets of Health and Happiness

Weak Achilles Tendon Cause of "Tired Feet"

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg.



DR. HIRSHBERG.

WHERE is your most vulnerable part? It may be your solar plexus; it may be your eyes; it may be your supersensitive feelings.

Do you recall the beautiful myth about the hero-god Achilles? He, when an infant, was dipped into the river Styx by his mother. Hence he became invulnerable to spears, knives, or death, except in his heel, where his mother held him.

Greek physicians and later anatomists called this part of the human body "the Achilles heel." Then when the tissues inside the heel were dissected one of them which stretches from the calf to the bottom of the heel like a bass violin string was named the "tendon of Achilles."

There are three muscles of the leg which narrow and fuse together as the "tendo-Achilles." Housewives, maids, salespeople, letter carriers and all those whose duties limit their walking and standing to a routine habit.

The aches, pains and tribulations of these victims of weak feet and "flat" feet are often beyond the endurance of a Job.

"O little feet! that such long years
Must wander on through hopes and fears,
Must ache and bleed beneath your load;
I, nearer to the wayside inn
Where toil shall cease and rest begin,
Am weary thinking of your road!"

"It is a modern conception," according to Dr. Emil S. Geist, the orthopedic surgeon of the University of Minnesota, "that flat foot is primarily caused by a loss of balance of the muscles of the leg and foot."

Abuse, disuse, accidents, clumsiness, faulty shoes, ailments and sprains throw the pedal machinery out of gear. The disturbances which follow cause the agony of "tired," "sore," "aching" feet.

A discovery of the greatest importance has just been made about these conditions, and Dr. Geist lays a just emphasis upon it.

The tendo-Achilles, it has been found, in a great proportion of foot defects, deformities and diseases has shrunken and become shortened.

Briefly, a whole host of young surgeons maintain that one in every five examples of weak feet show upon examination a contracted, short tendon of Achilles. Of these almost all of them are women.

It cannot be due so much to the high heels of women as to the traditional and faulty feminine shoe lasts which shoe manufacturers persist in making. This is a most vulnerable texture in

By massaging, exercising and stretching this Achilles cord at the heel, as much good can be done as cutting it.

Answers to Health Questions

1. L.—What is neurasthenia? Professor of Toronto University says I have it.

"Neurasthenia" means nervous weakness, but it is only a conglomeration of symptoms. It has taken the place of the medical fallacy of our fathers, to wit, "uric acid." Like the latter, it is an absurd cloak to cover a multitude of sins.

Usually "neurasthenia" is actually a form of muscle weakness or muscular "blindness."

That is to say, your muscles of precision, skill, agility, gymnastics and adaptability have become partially defective, "hard of hearing" and "near sighted." Proper muscular training will help your "neurasthenia."

PLUM PUDDING

E. PANCHARD

PLACE in a vessel one pound of beef kidney suet, very dry, free of fibres, and chopped very finely; one pound of seeded Malaga raisins; one pound of currants cleaned and washed in plenty of water; one pound of bread crumbs, sifted through a sieve; a quarter of a pound of candied lemon peel, chopped up very fine; one pound of powdered sugar, four tablespoonfuls of flour; a quarter of an ounce of nutmeg and allspice; a pint of brandy and six eggs. Mix the whole well together.

Dip a strong cloth in cold water and wring it out to extract all its moisture; spread it open on a table and butter it liberally with butter softened to the consistency of cream, dredge over with sifted flour and shake the cloth to remove the excess of flour that has failed to adhere to the butter. Lay in the centre of this cloth the above prepared mixture, form it in the shape of a ball, raise up the edges of the cloth bringing the four ends together and all around so as to enclose the preparation well, then tighten and tie firmly.

Place on the fire a high sauce pan filled to three-quarters of its height with water. Have it stand for five minutes before cutting the string; undo the cloth carefully and invert the pudding on a hot dish; besprinkle it with sugar, pour over some brandy or rum and set it on the fire, serve immediately. Have a separate sauce boat of frothy vanilla and rum sauce to be made as follows:

Chop up half a pound of beef marrow, melt it in a bain-marie, then strain through a napkin into a bowl and whip it until it begins to froth; then add four ounces of fresh butter broken in small parts, four ounces of vanilla sugar, and lastly, half a gill of rum. Serve.

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

"DO YOU know," began Judge Bear, talking to Mrs. Bear, "I feel as if I want to go down by the brook and talk to the fishes. It rests me."

"Then why don't you go?" asked his wife.

Judge Bear put on his hat and started for the brook. He sat down on a mossy bank and waited for a little fish to come along. He waited and waited and no one came. Finally he heard a voice saying:

"My, but I am glad to get here!"

Looking down in the water, Judge Bear saw Mr. Eel peeking straight at him.

"Why are you glad to get here, Mr. Eel?" asked Judge Bear.

"Because I have come a thousand miles," answered Mr. Eel.

"The brook isn't a thousand miles long," replied Judge Bear.

"How do you know?" asked Mr. Eel.

"Because Mr. Cat Fish told me," answered Judge Bear.

"Well," began Mr. Eel. "He is right, but I came from the bottom of the ocean, many, many miles out to sea. I was born there."

"Why do you come up the brook?" asked Judge Bear.

"There is not so much danger here," said Mr. Eel. "My brothers and sisters and I go along the seashore until we find a river. We go up the river until we come to a brook and then we swim up it as far as we can go."

"Don't you get tired?" asked Judge Bear.

"No," said Mr. Eel, "for there is always something to see. Lazy folks get tired."

"I see," said Judge Bear, as he went up the bank. On the way home he began to look at the flowers, the birds and the trees. "I guess Mr. Eel was right," he said to himself. "I'm going to watch everything after this."

Salt and Tobacco.

Many smokers have adulterated their own tobacco. Parr sprinkled his pipeful with salt to make it last longer. And it does. Parr, one of the most [illegible] of smokers and longest of livers, made his salted pipe last an hour. There is a faint crackling as the salt burns, but no difference in the taste. Stamp Portraits.

"Echo de la Timbrologie" is the title of a French journal which is published in the interests of philatelists; and, as the result of the enterprising editor's investigation, we are enabled to state that Queen Victoria's portrait appeared on 3,188 issues and King Edward's on 1,088. The late King Carlos of Portugal and the present King of Spain follow with 849 and 685 respectively; and outside the list of royalty Bolivar heads the list with 213 stamps, while Columbus has been represented 129 times.—Tit-Bits.

A Quaint Inscription.

An old churchyard near London is famous for the inscriptions on its tombstones. There is one on the memorial of Susannah Barford, died 1652, aged ten years and thirteen weeks. The concluding lines beneath the skull and crossbones on her monument are:

Her stage was short, her thread was quickly spunn,
Drawne out and cutt, got heaven, her worke was done.
This world to her was but a traged play,
Shee came and saw't, dislik't and passed away.

HARD TO PLEASE.

The Country Visitor Decided After All to Go Elsewhere.

A London clerk, on a holiday tour in the country, called at a farmhouse and asked if he could be taken in as a boarder for a few days. The farmer shook his head.

"I'd be glad to oblige you," he said, "but you London people are too hard to please."

"I am not at all exacting," the tourist replied; "you will find no difficulty in pleasing me."

"That's what the last man who came along said, but it wasn't true. In fact, nothing pleased him. His first complaint was about sleeping in the same bed with a hired man, and we gave him a bed to himself in a room with four of the children, but that didn't satisfy him. Next he grumbled about being awakened at half-past four in the morning by the men getting up to go to work—said he wasn't accustomed to get up before half-past seven. Then he objected to go to the pump, like the rest of us, to wash — actually wanted a washbasin to himself in his own room! He was upset because the servant girl rubbed his boots with cart-grease, which keeps 'em nice and soft, instead of polishing them with blacking, as he said they did in London. The food didn't suit him. At breakfast he wanted coffee and bacon and eggs, or kippers, or smoked haddocks, as though we could get such things in these parts. Boiled skimmed milk and bread and treacle, same as we had, weren't good enough for him. Dinner came, and he turned his nose up at bacon broth, pilchard pie, boiled bacon and cabbage, with nice apple pie or rhubarb pie to follow. He would like to have had ox-tail soup and boiled fowl, and roast beef and mutton, and potatoes, and milk pudding or roly-poly, and cheese and fruit. Our supper is generally boiled milk and bread or bread and cheese and onions, with a mug of cider to wash them down; but this wouldn't do for my gentleman—fried fish or cold meat and a drop of whisky were his fancy. And, last of all, it upset him to have to go to bed before it was dark, we are never up after eight. Couldn't he have lights, and sit up until eleven or twelve, as he did at home? Did you ever hear of such things? I don't know if you would be so hard to please or not?"

"Well," said the tourist, "perhaps, after all, I'd better not trouble you to try me."

Pleasant For Shaw.

For Madox Hueffer, in his "Memories and Impressions," says that on his first coming to London Bernard Shaw wrote a pamphlet called "Why I Am an Anarchist," which was published at the Torch press. "Some time later," relates Mr. Hueffer, "when Mr. Shaw, having advanced a stage further toward his intellectual salvation, was addressing in the park a Socialist gathering on the tiresome text, 'The Foolishness of Anarchism,' the young proprietors of the Torch walked round and round in the outskirts of the crowd offering copies of Mr. Shaw's earlier pamphlet for sale and exclaiming at the top of their voices, 'Why I Am an Anarchist! By the Lecturer!'"

Shortened His Wait.

"Experience," said Mark Twain once, "makes us wise, but it also makes us hard. Consider the old, experienced man in the busy restaurant. He took a seat, looked round him and, pointing to a well dressed gentleman who had not yet been served, said to the waiter:

"'Waiter, how long has that gentleman been here?'

"'About twelve minutes, sir,' the waiter answered.

"'What's his order?'

"'Porterhouse and French fried, sir, with mince pie and coffee to come.'

"The old man, hardened by experience, slipped a quarter in the waiter's hand.

"'Waiter,' he said, 'I'm in a hurry. Put on another porterhouse and bring me his.'"

Fresh Discovery of an Old Truth.

Helen's enjoyment of the party given in honor of her ninth birthday was nearly spoiled by the ill tempered outbreaks of a very pretty and well dressed little girl who was among her guests. A peacemaker appeared, however, in a plain and rather shabby child, who proved herself a veritable little angel of tact and good will.

After her playmates were gone Helen talked it all over very seriously with her mother. She summed it up in this piece of philosophical wisdom:

"Well, I've found out one thing, mamma. Folks don't always match their outsides."—Woman's Home Companion.

Salt and Health.

Few persons understand the therapeutic value of salt. A little salt in one's drinking water is "good medicine." Salt applications to the skin are wonderfully soothing and wholesome. There is nothing better as a wash for the throat and the nasal passages to prevent or to cure catarrhal troubles than a solution of common salt in plain water—the cheapest remedy one can find. Many persons give their eyes a daily bath of cold salt water with satisfactory results.

A Statesman's Queer Ambition.

The great Lord Grey had an ambition far above politics. He had passed the reform bill, but that did not satisfy his soul. There was talk of Taglioni, and Grey said quite earnestly, "What would I give to dance as well as she!" The statesman who had been Prime Minister and had left an indelible mark on the history of his country was envious of an opera dancer!—London Saturday Review.

One of Mark Twain's Jokes.

Mark Twain played a practical joke on the first audience he addressed in England. This was in 1872, when his reputation was already high in that country, and the announcement of his lecture filled St. George's hall, London, to overflowing. Few if any of those present had ever seen the humorist. He came on the platform in evening dress, with the crestfallen air of a manager announcing a disappointment. "Mr. Clemens had landed at Liverpool and had fully hoped to reach London in time, but unfortunately missed his train." The audience started booing, but the boos changed into cheers and laughter when he added that, fortunately, Mark Twain was present and would do his best to fill the place of the defaulting Clemens.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for 2nd Extension of New Breakwater, Port Arthur Harbour, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4 p.m., on Monday, March 2nd, 1914, for the construction of an Extension to what is known as the "New Breakwater" in the Harbour of Port Arthur, Thunder Bay and Rainy River District, Ont.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of the District Engineers, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., Port Arthur, Ont., Post-Office, Montreal, and Post-Office, Quebec.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to five per cent (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, January 27, 1914.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

The Hawaiian Language.

The language of Hawaii is very simple. To one who hears it for the first time comes the conviction that the aborigines expressed their sentiments in primitive vowel sounds, to which some consonants have been added. Each vowel is sounded as in Latin, and the words are easily pronounced by one who is patient and wishes to speak distinctly. The pronunciation will be all the better if the speaker will draw out, almost drawl, the vowel sounds, for which reason the language is well suited to the doleful Hawaiian wail Boo-hoo-oo-loo-loo and let the word sing itself.—Rockery Magazine.

HEALTH AND FOOD.

A Doctor's Idea of a Perfectly Balanced All Year Round Diet.

That every one is more or less susceptible to tubercular trouble is a matter on which all old fashioned medical authorities are agreed. They tell us that we may pass through a phase and out again without knowing it. According to Dr. T. Y. Hull in the Dietetic Gazette, there is only one thing very certain, and that is that if we keep in good health or adapt ourselves to a perfectly balanced diet the danger is slight.

He advocates a reduction of vegetable food, relying more upon butter, meat and nuts. Here, of course, one has to face the increased danger of tubercular meat, itself probably a large contributory cause of consumption.

This is Dr. Hull's idea of a perfectly balanced diet, calculated to keep the average individual in perfect health all the year round: The basis for the diet is found in meat, eggs, milk, butter, bread, potatoes and fruit. It consists daily of two quarts of milk, five eggs, four ounces of beef, one and one-half ounces of butter, two ounces of nuts (pecan), four ounces of bread, three and one-half ounces of rice, three ounces each of potatoes, peas and oatmeal, one ounce sugar, one ounce raisins, one apple and one orange.

Both Stung.

Some time ago an eminent London physician requested an equally eminent surgeon to accompany him to see a distinguished but slippery patient. The patient was exceedingly polite to both the medical gentlemen, shaking hands with them and bowing them out of the room in the most affable manner. Soon after this professional visit the same physician called again on the surgeon, requesting him to accompany him to see another patient. On their way thither the surgeon observed, "I hope this patient will behave more liberally than the last did."

"Why?" said the M. D. "Did he not give you a fee?"

"Not a shilling," was the reply.

"Indeed!" said the eminent physician, with a toss of the head. "Why, he borrowed 2 guineas from me to give to you!"—Tit-Bits

Connaught In Africa.

Here is a pleasing little picture, furnished by a correspondent who accompanied the royal party: The tour of the Duke of Connaught through South Africa, has assumed the character of a triumphal progress. At every tiny station in the vast expanse of the brown Karroo there was a gathering of farmers, many of whom had driven twenty and thirty miles in wagons drawn by twelve or fourteen mules or oxen. British and Dutch were equally eager to see the duke and duchess, and the duke sent them away proud and pleased and brimming over with loyalty after chatting with them, showing his interest in their affairs, shaking hands all round, and finally waving farewell from the window as the train moved on. Natives, in a great state of excitement, chanted wild songs of welcome.

A Wedding Ring Superstition.

Although there was a lifelong friendship to back up their business deals, the jeweler was not surprised when his old customer who had married a second time bought the wedding ring at another shop.

"If he should take a third wife he would buy the ring at still another store," the jeweler said. "That is one of the superstitions of the trade. A man may have the marrying habit ever so bad and require several wedding rings in his time, yet he never buys any two of them from the same place. Jewelers do not expect it. They don't want to sell two wedding rings to the same man. Bad luck would surely light on all concerned, and there is enough trouble in the world anyhow without deliberately inviting more of it by defying a good old wedding ring superstitution."—New York Times.

Her Recommendation.

A woman prominent as a social worker was in the city to engage a new girl the other day. She visited an employment agency which makes a specialty of finding places for country housemaids and was much pleased with one from the country.

"Why did you leave your last place?" asked the woman.

"I didn't have no last place," answered the girl, "because I ain't had no last place to leave, and I'm still working at it, being for myself that I've been working, and I'm sure I'm a good servant, and I can recommend myself to you, ma'am."—Exchange.

A Long Scold.

Brewster, who was returning late from his club, was received by his wife on entering the bedroom with a well rehearsed curtain lecture. Fortunately he had not turned up the gas, and as the door was not closed he quietly slipped out and rejoined his friends at the club. Two hours later he again wended his way home and picked up his ears on reaching the bedroom door.

"H'm! She didn't notice it!" said he, chuckling to himself. "She's still scolding!"—Glasgow Herald.

And a graduate is happy
O'er the knowledge he's acquired,

A Romantic Career.

The romantic career of a very remarkable man, John Gully, who seconded Cribb in his battle with Molineaux, is thus summed up in the "Dictionary of National Biography:" "Prizefighter, horse racer, legislator and colliery proprietor." Gully fought his first fight just before Trafalgar. He fought his last and retired from the prize ring in a blaze of triumph seven years before Waterloo. Gully rose to be a rich man and a member of parliament. He won the Derby three times and was the owner of a large and prosperous colliery. He died in 1863, the father of twenty-four children.

Compensation.

"I felt so sorry when I heard your house was burned down, Mrs. Jones," said Mrs. Hawkins.

"It was too bad," said Mrs. Jones, "but it had its bright side. John and I were both afraid to discharge our cook, but now that the house is gone of course we don't have to."—Harper's Weekly

Stomach Always Baulked, Had Constant Indigestion

SMELL OF COOKING MADE HIM SICK—BILIOUS TWO DAYS A WEEK.

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Clemmons' experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man.

Be advised—use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Good Vaudeville at Royal.

Manager Clayton of the Royal Theatre certainly seems to have a string on a big line of vaudeville. The song and dance acts, the clever monologue act and the comic contortionist stunt are all of high grade. Next week Mr. Clayton puts on 20 people, all of whom are artists.

Rev. C. E. Cragg Reappointed.

At the regular Quarterly Official Board meeting of the Mark street Methodist church, the pastor, Rev. C. E. Cragg, B.D., was invited to remain as pastor for a fourth year, at an increase in salary of $100. This is the third increase in salary that the circuit has made during the present pastorate.

McClay's Sentence Deferred.

John McClay, who was a week ago convicted of having supplied drugs to a local girl for an illegal purpose, came before His Honor Judge Huycke in County Court during the afternoon for sentence. As his case is being referred to the Appellate Court His Honor deferred sentence until 11 o'clock on the morning of Saturday, February 14th.

Addresses at the Armouries.

Last night, Professor Reynolds of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, gave a most interesting and instructive address in the Recreation Room at the Armouries. The occasion was the meeting of the stock judging course. Messrs. Ellis of Farm and Dairy, and Geo. A. Gillespie also gave brief addresses of great interest.

Petroleum at Bancroft.

Belleville Ontario: Mr. L. J. Ross, a New York mining expert, who has been in Bancroft for several weeks, claims to have discovered petroleum in this district, and negotiations are already under way for the purchase of several properties. We hope Mr. Ross' expectations will be fully realized.

Bulgarians Were Discharged.

Todor and Peter Minkoff, aged 16 and 18 years, two Bulgarian laborers from Havelock, came before His Honor Judge Huycke yesterday afternoon charged with the theft of some tools and a blanket from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. They were defended by Mr. V. J. McElderry, and Mr. Jas. Wearing conducted the prosecution. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate dismissed the charge against them.

Mother Jumps for Her Child.

An Omemee despatch says that on Monday a young child of Mr. Herb. Jones fell into a cistern, which was being used by the child's mother, who on discovering the situation, jumped into the cistern and brought the child out, then telephoned for her husband, who was absent, and for a doctor. We understand the child is likely to recover. 'Twas a brave deed for the mother, whom we hope is no worse of the immersion.

How to Detect the Alum Baking Powder

"Which are the alum baking powders; how can I avoid them unless they are named?" asks a housekeeper.

Here is one way: take the can of a low-priced powder in your hand and read the ingredient clause upon the back label. The law requires that if the powder contains alum that fact must be there stated. If you find one of the ingredients named alum, or sulphate of aluminum, you have found an alum baking powder.

There is another and a better way. You don't have to know the names of the alum powders. Use Royal Baking Powder only; that assures you a cream of tartar powder, and the purest and most healthful baking powder beyond question.

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Bring back its gloss, lustre, charm and get rid of dandruff—Try the moist cloth.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but you real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it throught your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautifully in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

JOHNSON'S CHARGES OF BRIBES DENIED

Black Fighter Claims it Cost Him $25,000 To Escape From Chicago

Chicago, Feb. 2.—A Paris cablegram quoting Jack Johnson, the prize fighter, as saying it cost him $25,000 to escape from Chicago, where he had been convicted of violating the white slave act, resulted in denials from the federal buildings to-day.

Harry A. Parkin, special prosecutor for the government, said:

"I never got a dollar from anyone except the United States government in connection with the Johnson case. Johnson simply jumped his bond—that's all there was to that."

Charles F. Dewoody, until recently local agent of the department of justice, said: "Johnson's charge is absurd. It is evident that Johnson had no reason to spend $25,000, or 25 cents, to anyone to get out of the country. Every one knows how I trailed him and watched him to prevent his escape."

The marriage of Miss Margaret Warner, Montreal, daughter of Mrs. W. G. Warner, to Mr. Trevor Eardley-Wilmot, Ottawa, only son of Mr. K. Eardley-Wilmot, former manager of the Bank of Montreal, Peterborough, will take place very quietly on Wednesday, Feb. 11.

ONE DOSE RELIEVES A COLD--NO QUININE

"Pape's Cold Compound" makes you feel fine at once—Don't stay stuffed up! Take it now

Relief comes instantly.

A dose taken every two hours until three doses are taken will end grippe misery and break up a severe cold either in the head, chest, body or limbs.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling! Ease your throbbing head! Nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, causes no inconvenience. Be sure you get the genuine.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting foood; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head sweet stomach and clean healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

ADAM KECK'S CHANCES FOR LONDON POST ARE IMPROVING

Various Interests Combine to Work for His Appointment As Strathcona's Successor

Toronto, Feb. 4.—While there is nothing but official silence in Ottawa on the intentions of the Government as to the filling of the Canadian High Commissionership, the impression is gaining ground that the chances of Hon. Adam Beck are improving. No doubt this impression is based on a somewhat remarkable unanimity of opinion, favorable to his appointment. In the first place, Mr. Beck's friends would like him to get it. The position, particularly as it has been developed by Lord Strathcona, is one to which any man might aspire, and would be a fitting recognition, say Mr. Beck's friends, of his public services.

In the second place, the friends of Mr. Hanna, who desire to see that gentleman succeed to the Premiership of Ontario, would be pleased to see Mr. Beck get the High Commissionership, particularly if Mr. Beck would at the same time, use his influence to assure Mr. Hanna's succession and straighten out one or two kinks that have had origin in the past in rivalry and in perhaps some jealousy.

Who Will Wear Beck's Mantle?

In the third place, what are sometimes loosely described as "big interests" would not be sorry to gratify any social ambitions Mr. Beck may have, if in so doing they would remove his power and influence from Canadian affairs. All that is radical in the policies followed by the Whitney Government is centred around the Minister of Power. With him removed conservatism would come into its own.

The Secret Of It

Prices for farm-lands in the West have been boosted to such an extent that interest on those prices cannot be paid by wheat farming. Including those prices in the labour, cost makes "profitable" farming there no longer possible. When they fall to a proper level the Western farmer will count his returns as just so much more in comparison. It is the old, old story. Meanwhile the price of wheat at Liverpool continues to fall. Matters could not be mended by an inrush of early American grains.

22 WITNESSES WILL APPEAR IN GREAT M'CONKEY CASE

Toronto, Feb. 4.—Charged with keeping a disorderly tavern, under the Liquor License Act, Ernest G. McConkey, proprietor of McConkey's restaurant, was remanded one week in the police court, Mr. H. M. Ludwig appearing for him. The charge is laid in explicit reference to last New Year's Eve, which occasion has already cost Mr. McConkey a fine of $40 and costs for selling liquor after hours. The month's delay is due to the investigation carried by the local Secretary and finally handed over for legal action to the Toronto police department.

Well-Known People.

Twenty-two subpoenas were served yesterday on some of those present in the restaurant New Year's Eve, said to be some of Toronto's best known citizens—so well known, in fact, that orders have been issued in the Police Department, and from Mr. Corley down no one will divulge the names of the twenty-two witnesses.

All the witnesses are men, none of whom were called into court to-day. Mr. Ludwig, for McConkey, simply asked for the adjournment, without pleading.

Chatham's Board of Health will purchase a pulmotor.

The Greatest
Modern Educator
Of Children—

Mme. Montessori

on her recent tour of America included Battle Creek, the great Pure Food Centre, in her itinerary. Speaking of diet for children she makes the following statement (in the public press of Dec. 31, 1913):

'Coffee and tea should never be placed within reach of a childish hand."

Besides being an educator, Madame Montessori is a physician, and bases this advice on her scientific knowledge that an ordinary cup of tea or coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine—a poisonous drug.

In these days of liberal education the average parent is becoming informed concerning the baneful effects of tea and coffee drinking, not only on the youth, but on those further along in life.

How much better to place before the children (and older ones too) a wholesome, nutritious, pure food-drink such as

POSTUM

Made only of prime whole wheat and a small percent of pure molasses. Postum contains only the rich native value of the grain—good for young and old. Postum is free from caffeine or other harmful substance.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled to bring out its rich flavour and food value, 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder. A teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water—with cream and sugar—makes a delightful beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

THE BURNS MEN STAY FREE

Montreal Judge Declines to Order Arrest of Alleged Bribers of Legislators.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—Justice Charbonneau this morning refused a writ of mandamus to compel the issuing of warrants for the arrest of the Burns detectives concerned in the exposures at Quebec.

The attempt to obtain the mandamus was made by Tancrede Marcil.

Mr. Marcil stated that he was acting in his capacity as a private citizen.

"Do you think if a Canadian detective were to go to New York and attempt to bribe a legislator that he would be granted immunity for his actions?" said Mr. Marcil.

LOCAL PARCEL POST INAUGURATE FEB. 11TH

Postmaster Jas. Edgar has received official notice to inaugurate the Parcel Post system in the Peterborough Post Office on Tuesday, Feb. 01th. The parcel post rates will be in some cases materially lower than the express rates on parcels. The local zone is expected to be of considerable benefit to merchants in small centres. Eleven pounds is the weight limit under the new system.

After the first four pounds the rate increases two cents per pound. For the first three months, namely February, March and April, the limit will be six pounds.

THIRD CASE OF ARSON.

Mansion of Anti-Suffragette Leader In Scotland Burned.

Glasgow, Feb. 4.—A third case of arson occurred in Perthshire later in the day when Saint Fillans, a fine mansion was gutted. It was the property of Stirling Boyd, whose wife was formerly president and is now vice-president of the Anti-Suffrage League of Edinburgh. A sheet of paper was found in the grounds inscribed "A warm welcome to Lloyd George," the reference being to his arrival in Scotland, to make a speech here.

QUEBEC COMMITTEE SEES EX-MINISTER REFUSE TO ANSWER

Hon. L. P. Berard Hides Behind Section of Law Till Authorities Act

Quebec, Feb. 4.—After being successful in getting called to the witness stand, L. P. Berard, one of the three legislators accused by The Montreal Daily Mail of accepting bribes in connection with the passing of the Montreal Fair Bill, L. T. Marechal, counsel for the Mail, was compelled today to face a determined attempt by Aimee Geoffrion, K.C., counsel for Mr. Berard, to prevent his being quespelled by the legislature committee of inquiry from answering certain questions. The committee received the application that Mr. Berard be called as witness from Mr. Marechal last night and this morning decided to ignore the objections of the legislative council's lawyer.

Might Incriminate Himself.

Mr. Berard had not been on the stand a minute, however, before questions about graft were asked him and he then refused to answer on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

Long arguments took place as to whether the witness could be compelled to answer and ultimately it was decided to excuse Mr. Berard for a while and not decide the question until the other witnesses had been heard.

The witnesses present included Guy B. Biddinger, the Burns detective, who with S. C. Maloney, heard last night, invented the trap into which the legislators have been accused of falling.

NEW RUMOR, C.N.R. AND C.P.R.

London Financial Paper Revives Story of Alleged Absorption.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—A special cable to the Gazette from London says:

The Financial Times states that the rumor is again very insistent with regard to the alleged intention of absorption of the Canadian Northern Railway by the Canadian Pacific. The revival of this rumor is accompanied by the suggestion that still another Canadian Railway may be included in the deal.

QUIET IN MEXICO

The Expected Anti-American Demonstrations Did Not Occurr.

Mexico City, Feb. 4.—All apprehension of anti-American demonstrations resulting from President Wilson's lifting of the arms embargo had passed this afternoon. In spite of the flambuoyant violence to-day of Huerta's inspired newspapers, the Mexican people took the news of President Wilson's action calmly and seemed unimpressed.

AN OFFSET TO TRIPS OF COL. SAM HUGHES

Conservatives to Dig Into Expenses of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Mr. J. O. Wilcox of North Essex, will ask in the Commons eight queries as to the expenses of Sir Wilfrid Laurier upon the various occasions of his crossing the Atlantic to England since coming into power in 1896. These questions include demands as to the number of stenographers taken along and their cost, the number of valets and servants on each trip, the number of ladies, wives, and daughters accompanying the official party on each occasion, and the expenses they involved and what part of the expenses were paid by the Government directly or indirectly; what was the total cost to Canada of the various trips, and what part of the expenses was contributed by the Government of Great Britain.

Mr. Gauthier has a similar list of inquiries covering all countries.

The questions are doubtless intended as an offset to the inquiry into the expenses of Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, on his recent trip to Europe.

INTERESTING ADDRESS GIVEN BEFORE LOCAL CANADIAN CLUB

Last night at Hooper's Parlors, the Canadian Club held a banquet, the guest of the evening, Mr. Martin Harvey, the eminent actor, of London, Eng., who is at the head of a company of artistes at present visiting Peterborough. After being introduced to the large number of members, Mr. Harvey said he was very much pleased to speak to the Canadian Club. He said there seemed to be an appreciative spirit in every part of Canada and gave several delightful experiences he had been through since he landed in Halifax. Canada, Mr. Harvey said, gave him a sense of the picturesque, and spoke eulogizingly of its grand natural resources. It afforded him, he said, no small surprise at the evidence of respect to the motherland and deep down loyalty to the Union Jack. After praising the Canadian Pacific Railway, Mr. Harvey said that his company had come to Canada under the auspices of the British-Canadian Theatrical Organization, an organization recently formed by British and Canadian promoters, with the object in view of bringing British first class productions to this country. This organization he said, was the outcome of an Imperial spirit. Mr. Wm. Hallis, the principal promoter of the scheme, said, he was not satisfied with stage in Canada and the idea was to eliminate entirely the plays that visit this Dominion under false colors. Mr. Harvey said he wanted to see the seeds of the old country stage sown in Canada, and said that ultimately it was the intention of the organization to include such countries as Australia, Africa, India or other British Dominions and make an all-red route.

At the conclusion of Mr. Harvey's address, Mr. Wainwright, the president of the club, thanked the speaker for his eloquent words, and said that Mr. Harvey's address was perhaps the most enjoyed and interesting one the Canadian Club has had the pleasure of listening to this season.

CHICAGO WILDLY EXCITED AS WOMEN REGISTER FIRST VOTE

Mothers, Wives Crowded Registration Booths Ready to Begin Battle for Clean City

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 4.—The women in the largest equal suffrage city in the world are making their first campaign. The slogan has been "Register and Vote" and so well has the work been done that yesterday with perfect weather conditions prevailing between 150,000 and 200,000 registered voters.

The campaign programme, shrewd and clean and clear, is being carried out with remarkable precision and unflagging enthusiasm.

There are four distinct steps which the campaign managers have outlined:

1—Acquaint the women with the routine of voting.

2—Get 200,000 of them to register.

3—Get the 200,000 of them out at the primaries.

4—See that the 200,000 vote on election day.

Well Planned.

To insure success the entire city, business and residence district is honeycombed with leaders and workers who are indefatigably on the job. Meetings are held by and for women at noon and at night, daily, in every ward and precinct. A big, business-like headquarters has been opened downtown. Classes are being held to show women how to register; how to go through the routine at the primaries; how to vote without having to rely on anyone else for information.

Other classes are being held for women who will serve, for the first time this year, as election judges and election clerks.

Mass meetings are being conducted where thousands of women from all parts of the city meet to gain inspiration and information on the next steps.

In some of the most notorious wards in the city MEN are advocating and backing the candidacy of a woman to break the power of the undesirable voting class.

PETERBORO INTERMEDIATES DEFEAT WHITBY TEAM IN THE LAST GAME

Last night the Peterborough Intermediates journeyed to Whitby to play their last game of the schedule, and by virtue of their victory over the lake shore team, returned with the championship of No. 2 district in the O. H. A. safely tucked away for this year. They now enter the semi-finals and by the speed and condition shown in their game last night are going to take a lot of beating before they are stopped in the home stretch.

Shortly before 6 o'clock a special train with a good crowd of "rooters" left for Whitby, arriving in that burg about 7.40. The rink was already well filled and by the time the puck was dropped the S. R. O. sign was hung out. It was the most exciting game of the series, and the Whitby fans had unbounded confidence in the ability of their team to trim the locals. However, the boys in blue and white were out with bells on, and could not be stopped. At half time the score stood 4—3 in the Petes favor.

The second half was much faster than the opening period, and lightning fast rushes were made by both teams. Park and Kelly, played the game of their lives, and Bradshaw looked after his man in fine style. Grover Halpin, who replaced Giroux at rover, showed up splendidly in the fast company. He shoots like fury, and dead on the nets, too. He was a tower of strength on the forward line last night. Denison played his usual brilliant game on the defence, and his end to end rushes were the feature of the game. Bond backed him up in fine style, and Janes got everything that came his way, and received unstinted applause from friend and foe alike for his good work.

The final score was:
PETERBORO—6.
WHITBY—4.

HIGHER CRITICISM HAS GOOD RESULTS

Larger Christianity Than Ever Coming Upon the World

"I can hardly think of any department of Christian life in which there is not more vitality than there was when the critical movement began."—Rev. Dr. Symonds of Montreal in University sermon.

That the movement of the "higher criticism" of the last century is not altogether negative or destructive but that positive and constructive results of it are apparent in the Christian religion of to-day, was the conclusion of Rev. Dr H. Symonds, of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, and formerly of Peterborough, in a closely-reasoned sermon in Convocation Hall last Sunday morning.

It was not easy," said Dr. Symonds, in the early days of the critical movement," to foresee the positive and constructive side of it, but to-day they were obvious. "I believe the prospects of Christianity at home and abroad were never brighter than they are to-day. The two really vital religious movements of today are that in favor of the unity of Christians and the foreign mission movement. And what can be more nearly after the mind of the Master than these?"

"The night of negation is passed. The day for positive, constructive work has dawned. A larger Christianity than has ever been is coming upon the world. It demands and deserves your best."

"RUTHLESS MONSTERS" OF SCIENCE.

Dr Symonds spoke of the [illegible] science were regarded as "ruthless monsters, destroying faith and hope, and even life itself." One contributory element to the unsettlement of the times was the rise of the study of comparative religions. "The principal change in our ideas wrought by the science of comparative religion is that we can no longer relate Christianity to the other faiths as the one absolutely true religion amongst a multitude of false religions."

"I can hardly think of any department of Christian life in which there is not more vitality than there was when the critical movement began."

SAVED THE OLD TESTAMENT.

Speaking of the attacks that were made on the Old Testament in the last century, when that part of the Bible was referred to as "Christianity's millstone," Dr. Symonds said "I do not think it too much to say that the Old Testament has been saved for Christianity by the woth of the higher critics. They have enabled us to see it in a new light. There is to-day, a positive, constructive, religious view of the Old Testament which has given us a newer, a truer, and more inspiring view of its contents than has ever been held before. And this view has as its presupposition the broad main results of the higher criticism.

"Criticism which was supposed to be destructive of religion was only destructive of the forms of religion. Having done its work, a new edifice on larger, broader lines, more suited to modern needs, catching light from all points of the spiritual firmament, is being erected."

Many years ago James T. Fields, the publisher, was making a collection of the writings of De Quincey. The essays were widely scattered in various periodicals and were often hard to identify. Mr. Fields knew Rufus Choate as a devoted student of De Quincey and wrote him one day asking his opinion as to a certain article. Was it by De Quincey or not?

Mr. Choate replied that it certainly was. There could be no mistaking the style of the piece. A few weeks later Mr. Choate received through Mr. Fields a letter from De Quincey denying absolutely and somewhat indignantly the authorship of the article. But Choate was not of the stuff to yield his opinion for a trifle like that. He wrote to Mr. Fields:

"I still believe that De Quincey wrote the essay, De Quincey to the contrary notwithstanding."

Doubtless Mr. Fields read the note with a smiling comment, "That's just like Choate's confidence in his own judgment!"

Learn to Think on Your Feet.

It does not matter whether one wants to be a public speaker or not, a person should have such complete control of himself, should be so self reliant and self poised, that he can get up in any audience, no matter how large or formidable, and express his thoughts clearly and distinctly. In all ages oratory has been regarded as the highest expression of human achievement. Young people, no matter what they intend to be, whether blacksmith or farmer, merchant or physician, should make it a study. Nothing else will call out what is in a man more quickly and more effectively than the constant effort to do his best in speaking before an audience. When one undertakes to think on one's feet and speak extemporaneously before the public the power and the skill of the entire man are put to the severest test.—Success Magazine.

At Sea on Land.

A clergyman who had neglected all knowledge of nautical affairs was asked to deliver an address before an audience of sailors. He was discoursing on the stormy passages of life. Thinking he could make his remarks more pertinent to his hearers by metaphorically using sea expressions, he said:

"Now, friends, you know that when you are at sea in a storm the thing you do is anchor."

A half concealed snicker spread over the room, and the clergyman knew that he had made a mistake.

After the services one of his listeners came to him and said, "Mr. ——, have you ever been at sea?"

The minister replied:

"No, unless it was while I was delivering that address."

New Zealand's Glaciers.

The great size of the glaciers around Mount Cook, in New Zealand, has been often remarked. The Tasman is eighteen miles long, the Murchison ten miles, the Godley eight miles, the Mueller eight miles and the Hooker seven miles. Most of these glaciers have moraines of exceeding roughness, but the approaches to them are not steep, as is usually the case with European glaciers. The southern Alpine snow line is only a little over 7,000 feet. Glacially polished rocks are rare, and in many ways the mountains are singularly different from those of central Europe.

Rugs and Gowns to Match.

There is a woman at one of the hotels near Fifth avenue who has her own furniture in her rooms. In her possession are six fine oriental rugs, each of a different shade. She entertains a great deal, and on each occasion she has a rug put down that will harmonize with the coloring of her frock. There is said to be no shade that will not harmonize with the color of one or other of the rugs.—New York Sun.

Cover the Whole Field

An advertisement in The Times is guaranteed to reach regularly 98 per cent. of the homes of Peterborough. Sworn statement furnished of proof of this if required.

Business men are also reminded that The Times is the only paper that reaches those served by the Rural Mail Routes on the day of issue. As a result it gets the call.

Thus advertisers will therefore know that by using The Times for their business announcements, they not only reach the WHOLE population of this city of 21,000 people, but a large proportion of those residing within a twenty-mile radius of the city. These are the people who have the money to pay for what they want.

STORY OF A MUD HEN.

And the Man Who Tried to Shoot or Drown the Bird.

"It is a mighty hard thing to down a mud hen," said a Portland official. "Every one knows this homely bird, so clever that it can dodge the flash of a gun, making it very hard to kill if any one ever wanted to kill one.

"A friend of mine who was a great hunter, but not acquainted with the mud hen, was out hunting on the Columbia sloughs some years ago when he saw what he thought was some kind of duck floating on the water. He aimed his shotgun and fired, but the bird dived as the gun was discharged, and the shot struck the water where the bird had been a moment before. As the smoke cleared away the hunter saw the bird come to the surface, and he gave it the other barrel, with the same result.

"His obstinacy was now aroused, and he determined to kill that bird before he left the place. He shot away every round of ammunition he had, but the bird dodged every one and still floated in the same spot. In great disgust my friend sat down on the bank and lit his pipe. At the first puff of smoke the bird dived again, and this gave him his inspiration.

"To make a short story, he smoked up all his tobacco in an effort to drown the mud hen, but when darkness fell and he started for home the bird was still floating in the same old spot."—Portland Oregonian.

The Pearl Hunters' Superstition.

The pearl hunters of Borneo and the adjacent islands have a peculiar superstition. When they open shells in search of pearls they take every ninth find, whether it be large or small, and put it into a bottle, which is kept corked with a dead man's finger. The pearls in the vial are known as "seed pearls" or "breeding pearls," and the native Bornoese firmly believes that they will reproduce their kind. For every pearl put into the vial two grains of rice are thrown in for the pearls to "feed upon." Some whites in Borneo believe as firmly in the superstition as the natives do, and almost every hut along the coast has its "dead finger" bottle, with from nine to fifty seed pearls and twice that number of rice grains carefully and evenly stowed away among them. That no results follow does not dim the superstition.

Humors of "Hamlet."

William Davidge related in his "Footlight Flashes" that during his strolling days in England, when companies were small, he had on the same evening done duty for Polonius, the ghost, Ostric and the first gravedigger, and Edwin Booth remembered Thomas Ward dying in sight of the audience as the player king and being dragged from the mimic stage by the heels to enter immediately at another wing as Polonius, crying "Lights, lights, lights!" Hamlet in a one night town, swearing he loved Ophelia better than forty thousand brothers, has watched her through an open grave packing her trunk in the place beneath, while the ghost, her husband, waited to strap it up. There are more things in Hamlet's existence behind the scenes than are dreamed of in the philosophy of all his commentators and all his critics.—From the Green Book.

Corn and Water.

To those engaged in the handling of grain the natural shrinkage of shelled corn while in storage and in transit is a matter of prime importance and often a source of dispute because of shortage reported at time of receipt at warehouse and a further loss at date of final sale. In order to determine the amount of shrinkage or loss of weight occurring in corn the department of agriculture has conducted an experiment with 500 bushels of shelled corn. At the time of storage the moisture content was 18.8 per cent and at close of the test 14.7 per cent, or a loss of 4.1 per cent. The weight per bushel had decreased from 54.7 pounds to 50 pounds, and the total loss of weight was 1,970 pounds, or slightly more than 7 per cent.

Flats For Small Families.

Observing Tommie.

Mamma—Don't cry so, Tommie. You don't see mamma crying when she's having her hair combed.

Tommie—Nor would I if I had mine combed over the back of a chair.—Yonkers Statesman.

Shocked His Pride.

Of his Cambridge days a dignitary of the Church of England tells this story. He always wore a white tie, and when he got his fellowship, full of pride, he went to call upon the master of his college. He rang the bell, the door was opened, and he was about to present his card when the footman, who had run his eye over him, said: "You're too late, young man. I got the place yesterday."

Cooking Ham.

Ham is frequently too salt to fry without previous preparation. Put the slices in tepid water and let them stand on the back of the range to soak out the salt, not to boil, for about half an hour. Drain dry between towels, then fry in a hot spider. When a whole ham is to be baked or boiled let it stand overnight covered with cold water.

Thoughtful.

"Well, he's a very thoughtful and good-hearted fellow anyway."

"I can't see it. I was at his home yesterday, and it never occurred to him to ask me to stay to dinner."

"That's just the point; his wife is taking cooking lessons."

Golf Ball In Rabbit Trap.

In a match between two Edinburgh golfers a ball driven from the fourteenth tee was slightly pulled. When the player reached it he found it held firmly in a rabbit trap.

The Trouble With Them.

The great trouble with people who are happy in their own conceit is that they generally interfere with the happiness of others.

THE NEW COATS ARE SHORT— MANY FLARE SLIGHTLY AT THE BOTTOM

With the increasing popularity of the draped and be-ruffled hip the short coat naturally follows. Many of them terminate at the waist, others come slightly below. It is quite a fad to have one of these smart little coats made up in velvet, brocaded or plain, to wear with a light weight frock. Often the color is in decided contrast with the gown. Trimmings are usually of fur. Number 8133-8002 shows one of these new little coats with a three tiered skirt. Dark blue velours de laine is used with a vest of brocade. A smart feature of the coat is the rolled collar and the sleeve which is in raglan effect without a seam at the center back. The tunics on the skirt are pointed in back.

This suit may be copied in size 36 with 2¾ yards of 42-inch material for the coat and 4¾ yards of 42-inch material for the skirt.

The second frock illustrated is a coat dress for a girl of from 14 to 18. Dark blue serge is the material with a belt and collar of white ratine. It is one of those novel, youthful designs so charming for the school-girl.

It will require 4⅝ yards of 36-inch material to copy this frock in size 16.

Number 8133—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 8002—sizes 22 to 32.
Number 8161—sizes 14 to 18.

Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated cut out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

Many a man fancies he has fallen in love when he has merely fallen into a snare.

◆

Don't go to Detroit to look for $5 a day. We are informed that lookers for $5 a day are now blocking street traffic in the Ford car district of Detroit.

◆

The anti-rum zealots who who would have a skull and crossbones on every bottle behind the bar cannot hope to decrease the consumption of the oil of joy by such means. The old-time invitation, "nominate your poison," will continue to meet with a ready response.

◆

Because the members of the band playing at the funeral of a New Jersey man were non-union the carriage drivers refused to convey the corpose to the cemetery.. We wonder if they will refuse to answer Gabriel's trumpet on the ground that he is not a union man.

◆

Commenting on the war against promiscuous spitters, a Toronto paper says all persons who expect to rate as decent citizens must not expectorate on the sidewalk. This inspires this g.f.j. with the hope that the day will come when such punning will be made a crime.

◆

A Mr. Van Vliet of New York has been operated on twice for appendicitis. The second set of surgeons produced the appendix for his inspection and the astonished patient protested that he had had it removed three years previously. We do not know what part of Mr Van Vliet's anatomy the first set of surgeons got away with but it appears that in addition to it they relieved him of $1,900.

CIVIL WAR IN IRELAND

Speaking at Bristol a few days ago Mr. Bonar Law, leader of the Unionist party, said: "The position is far more serious than I think is realized even yet, either by our political opponents or, perhaps, by the country at large. In my belief we are drifting rapidly and if nothing be done to change the current, we are drifting inevitably to civil war which will shatter to its foundations the whole fabric of our national existence, and which will at the same time leave us exposed to dangers from without."

This unquestionably is the situation. Within a few months Ulster will be in the throes of civil war if the attempt to subject the Ulster people to government by a hostile religious majority at Dublin is not abandoned. War in Ulster will mean convulsion in England and Scotland and probably serious disturbance in the outlying Dominions. If the British Government can wholly change the relation of a great body of British subjects towards the Empire and establish over a particular section of the people an authority to which they are utterly opposed the attitude of multitudes over the sea towards the Empire must be radically affected.

The Ulster people will not fight for additional privileges within the United Kingdom or within the Empire. They will fight only to retain an equal British citizenship with the people of England, Scotland and Wales. We shall have a rebellion without precedent in all history. It will be the revolt of a people, not to alter their citizenship, but to maintain their citizenship in their own country. Canadian autonomists who profess to fear that "Downing Street" may be re-established in Canada are warm apologists for the policy which would subject Ulster to a Dublin Parliament and the devoted allies of the Government which would disturb the very basis of Empire in order to retain power at Westminster.

In the speech at Bristol, Mr. Bonar Law said: "But we are told that Ulster should not revolt, should not take action, until they are really suffering the evils which they fear. What a suggestion! Would any sane man watch the rope being arranged around his neck and only begin to struggle when it was pressing against his throat? That is not the way that men in earnest have ever acted at any time in the history of the world. Take, for instance, the War of Independence of our American colonies. The ground on which they took up arms seems to me utterly trivial in comparison with the wrong with which Ulster is threatened. Did they wait till the grievances were oppressing them before they asserted their rights? Let anyone who holds that view read the account of it which was given by the American statesman Webster. It was against the recital of an Act of Parliament rather than against any suffering that they took up arms. On this question of principle—while actual suffering was yet afar off—they raised their flag against a power with which for purposes of foreign conquest, Rome in the reign of her glory is not to be compared. It is thus that men always will act and men must act." It is as certain as the shining of the sun that the United Kingdom must choose between a revolution and withdrawal of the Home Rule Bill.

Strengthens the Throat, Assists Public Speakers

CATARRHOZONE IS THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE AGE FOR WEAK THROAT, HOARSENESS, Etc

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Ctarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him, and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throatweakness or catarrh.

OUR DOG SUPPLY.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir, I saw in the Toronto Telegram of Jan. 26th that a little girl of North Toronto has been seized with hydrophobia, some weeks after she was bitten by a dog. Is it not time that a weeding out process be inaugurated amongst the hundreds of (mostly useless) dogs of this city?

Kidney Trouble Is Hereditary?

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ALWAYS CURE IT.

Dresden Man, Who Inherited Trouble, Finds Speedy Relief and Permanent Cure in Dodd's Kidney Pill.

Dresden, Ont., Feb. 4.—(Special).—Whether Kidney disease is hereditary or not is a matter of opinion. Mr. Samuel Burkett, a well known resident of this place, is convinced that he inherited his from his parents. He knows that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured it.

"I inherited my Kidney Disease from my parents," Mr. Burkett states "I was treated by a doctor, and tried various medicines, but it was not till about eighteen months ago when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills that I got any permanent relief.

"Since then I have not felt any effect of my old trouble, and I feel that anybody troubled with Kidney Disease will be benefited by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills if they follow directions closely.

"I hope that others may be helped by Dodd's Kidney Pills. I am well known here, and anybody who wishes more particulars of my cure can have them by writing me and enclosing stamps for reply."

Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure any form of Kidney Disease.

SIR GEORGE CHEERED BY ARRIVAL OF GRANDSON

He Is, However, In For Long Illness—Premier Whitney Steadily Improving.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—The sick-room where Sir George Ross is lying in the General Hospital was the scene of a celebration to-day—as hearty a celebration as a man seriously ill can be allowed to indulge in. A grandson, to perpetuate the name of George Ross arrived in the world early this morning, and one of the dearest wishes of Sir George's heart was at last fulfilled. Dr. George W. Ross is the proud parent.

Sir George showed keen pleasure when the news was given him. He had partaken rather half-heartedly of a light breakfast, and was preparing for another day of apathetic quiet, when his son came in with the news: "It's a grandson!" The sick man's face lighted up as if by magic. He was lively and cheerful all morning.

The other distinguished patient in the General Hospital, Sir James Whitney, continues to get better. Every day sees him looking more like his old self. If it were not for the fact that every possible recurrence of a sinking spell is being guarded against, and no unnecessary risks are being taken, he might be moved home now.

$100 REWARD $100

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DAILY SHORT STORY

DUCKING A SCOLD

A Custom Quite Popular at One Time In This Country.

WOMEN ALWAYS THE VICTIMS.

In Colonial Days Ducking Stools Were Common In Maryland. In Virginia the Penalty Was Often Inflicted, and Georgia Sinned as Late as 1819.

Nowadays if a woman forms the habits of talking too loud and too long or insists upon saying unpleasant things in wrong places and at wrong seasons there are several things which may happen to her. If she is a person of some social standing her husband may get a divorce, or if she belongs in one of the lower strata he may leave her without that little formality. If she makes life too unbearable for the neighbors she may possibly be arrested and fined. If she lives in England and interrupts the proceedings of parliament, calls names, chases dignitaries to cover whenever they show themselves in public and knocks off policemen's helmets she is called a suffragette and sometimes imprisoned. But even the most "obstinately opprobrious and virulent woman," to quote the stately Addison, may be confident that she will escape the punishment meted out to her sister of old. Whatever happens, she won't be sentenced to the ducking stool. In many ways modern life is tame and lacking in dramatic incident for a self assertive lady, and even the English suffragettes complain that they are not taken seriously enough.

No such claim could have been made in the past, say between the fifteenth and eighteenth centuries, when far more rigid views prevailed on the subject of feminine self repression. In those days magistrates were unanimous in the conviction that "meekness is ye chojeest ornIment for a woman," and it was held a crime to speak "discornfully" of those in authority, civil or ecclesiastical. A woman must not even indulge in too great freedom of speech in the privacy of her own home and neighborhood. Sometimes she did, and then she was attended to in a simple yet spectacular manner.

She was bound securely to a stout chair firmly fixed to the end of a long beam, arranged to work up and down on the principle of the seesaw, on the edge of a river or pond. On the bank at the other end a man worked the contrivance by means of a strong chain, and she was given a ducking, which lasted until justice was satisfied or reform was promised, the populace of course gathering in large numbers to assist at the function.

In England the practice was so general that each town had its ducking pond conveniently located where petty offenders of various kinds were disciplined. The pond for the western part of London was what is now a portion of Trafalgar square, Charing Cross. Many of the old ducking stools are still in existence as curiosities. In the days of their activity they were kept in the church porches, where they doubtless pointed a moral as to the haughty spirit which goeth before a fall.

The first colonists brought the institution to this country, although it never flourished in New England. In fact, there are no authentic records of the actual use of the ducking stool in these colonies, although a number of women were sentenced to be so punished. They had, however, other methods of treatment for ladies of a shrewish disposition, one of these being the wearing of a cleft stick upon the tongue.

In the central and southern colonies the custom was quite popular. In the seventeenth century ducking stools were in every county in Maryland, and in 1775 one was placed at the confluence of the Ohio and Monongahela rivers. In Virginia the penalty was often employed, and in 1634 a Thomas Hartly of that colony wrote, it is said, to Governor Endicott of Massachusetts giving a detailed account of a ducking administered to "one Betsey, wife of John Tucker, who by violence of her tongue had made his home and ye neighborhood uncomfortable." After describing the machine he adds: "Ye rope was slackened by ye officer, and ye woman was allowed to go down under ye water for ye space of half a minute. Betsey had a stout stomach and would not yield until she had allowed herself to be ducked five severall times." After she promised to "sin no more" Betsey was untied and allowed to "walk home in her wetted clothes a hopefully penitent woman."

The ducking stool prevailed longer in America than in England. In the old country it does not seem to have been used later than 1809, but in Georgia women were ducked for scolding as late as 1819. It is interesting to note that in 1824 a woman in Philadelphia was sentenced to be ducked, but the decree was not carried out, as it was "deemed obsolete and contrary to the spirit of the times." A writer on colonial customs states that one of the last indictments for ducking in this country was that of Mrs. Anne Royall in Washington, a lobbyist, who "became so abusive to congressmen that she was indicted as a common scold before Judge William Cranch and was sentenced by him to be ducked in the Potomac. She was, however, not subjected to the ducking indignity, but was released with a fine."—Bellman.

When our hatred is too bitter it places us below those whom we hate. —La Rochefoucauld.

Futile.

"Fly with me," pleaded the youth.

"What's the use?" answered the girl. "Dad's biplane would catch that old machine of yours before we had got a thousand feet high."

Heard on a Rainy Day.

He (tired of dodging)—Would you marry a one-eyed man?

She—Good gracious, no!

He—Then let me carry your umbrella.

A MODERN PRESS

The Times To Be Greatly Improved in the Near Future

A Web Perfecting Press to Be Installed, the Circulation Having Outgrown Present Facilities—A Machine That Will Turn Out 5,000 Copies of the Paper Per Hour Has Been Purchased.

The rapid increase in the circulation of The Times during the past few months has made it necessary for the proprietor to instal a modern web newspaper press, which will print and deliver 5,000 folded papers per hour. This machine will be installed in about three weeks, and it is expected will be in commission by the end of the present month.

A night telegraphic service has been arranged, which will be in operation at an early date. It is our purpose to make The Times as near equal to the Toronto morning daily newspapers as possible, so that it will be in demand everywhere throughout Central and Eastern Ontario.

The Times will continue its policy of fearlessly advocating Equal Rights with special privileges to no church or creed. The time has arrived, we believe, when the press of Canada should take a decided stand against anything that savors of priestly or ministerial interference in political matters. Protestants are willing that their Roman Catholic fellow citizens should have every privilege that they themselves enjoy—but no more. The Roman Catholic hierarchy should and must be content with this, if harmony is to prevail.

The new equipment above referred to will add strength to our arm, and will enable us to battle more effectively for the principles above referred to. In the meantime we ask our friends to assist us by speaking a good word for the paper whenever they can, and thus increase our circulation. We want to add a couple of thousand new names to our list during the coming spring.

Evening Gown Models to Be Made at Home

By MADGE MARVEL

HERE are three evening gowns which the clever home seamstress should have no great difficulty in reproducing. Really, in the gowns of the season, the chief thing to remember is to have the lines right. They are far less difficult than in the days when the fit was the thing.

The gown at the left is more suited for the slender woman than for her sister who has to be careful of drapings which add to her size. It is of ivory white charmeuse with chiffon and a bit of the ever-present beading shown in the rhinestones which outline the bodice. The skirt is charmeuse or velvet it may form the "standby" gown of the wardrobe.

It is delightfully graceful in its long drapery, and will make any one appear fashionably long and narrow, as we are told is the present demand.

There is low drapery on each hip, and the skirt is slightly slashed in front, where it displays a pleating of chiffon. The bodice is draped close to the figure and rather out on the shoulders to give the breadth needed. There is an inner vestee of heavy lace embroidered in Oriental effect. The sleeves, which do not reach the elbows, are of cream lace with tiny crystal buttons. There is the narrowest girdle of jewels fastened with a one of those wrapped around designs with an opening in the hem at the center front where the crossing of the folds comes.

Three of the Newest Models for Evening Wear.

There is the tucked-up drape which forms the proper hip fulness.

Chiffon cloth is used for the tunic and the bodice and the lower edge of the skirt of the tunic is folded under to carry out the same idea that is apparent in the skirt. It is much longer in the back which gives the correct slope without being in the least extreme. The bodice is simple, the chiffon being used over pink tulle with an insert on the front of Cluny lace. There is a sash of pink moire the shade of the lining tulle, which is tied in front with the Japanese bow which appears on so many of the best looking frocks one sees.

The middle figure shows one of the most useful and universal gowns that can be imagined. It is a model which would be as becoming to the woman of more than mature years as it would to the young matron. Developed in one of the new shades of deep violet, or in the new lovely soft greens, or in almost any color, it has possibilities of being used for many occasions. In black crepe, flat ornament just below the bust. This gown has all the best points of the present fashions combined in the most conservative manner. The model displayed is of silver gray chiffon velvet, the girdle being of dull silver and the plaque fastener having an amethyst set cabochon style in [illegible].

[illegible] been so much [illegible] all winter [illegible] will be worn well into the spring, forms the tunic of the frock at the right. It is also noteworthy as showing the square neck outline, which is a relief from the surplice so much seen.

The skirt is of willow green crepe curved up at the front about four inches and having a plain train. The lace is heavy and cream white, which is in better accord with the [illegible]. Mink fur is used, and the sleeves are of chiffon in the same shade of the crepe.

In the illustration the fur is used severely about the neck, but the average woman will find it more becoming to drape a bit of tulle above the fur. Besides being very softening it is a little newer. In fact, all the newest gowns show this cloud of tulle used about the neck of decollete bodices.

Pesky Little Things

By Tom Jackson

'TIS mostly trifling little things that vex us, and annoy, and often make us speak rude words, and rob our lives of joy. A little boil upon the neck makes all the world look glum. So does a blow with hammer on a finger or a thumb. A carpet tack, with business end a-pointing in the air, will make one lose one's dignity, if one's feet should be bare. To get in contact with the same is carpet tack's delight, to see one dance the tango in pajamas late at night is also joy for carpet tack, and for the children, too, who gather at the open door and the proceedings view. Indeed, it is the little things that make us feel forlorn. Folks always step upon the foot that wears the aching corn. We can a great, big sorrow stand that comes in one whole lump. It's diff'rent, though, when little teeth begin to throb and jump. One can sleep in a Pullman car—not mind the noise at all—but be a nervous wreck at home, should baby start to squall. Yes, barking dogs, and fighting cats, and lively, pesky flies, are all among the little things that human temper tries. A man can brace himself to meet wife's mother, or a note, but it's the small and trifling things that gather in his goat.

He that lives in perpetual suspicion lives the life of a sentinel never relieved.—Young.

No man is poor who does not think himself so; but if in a full fortune, he with impatience desires more, he proclaims his wants and his beggarly condition.—Jeremy Taylor.

Exercises for the Early Morning Hour

By MAGGIE TEYTE

Prima Donna of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company.

MAGGIE TEYTE

CAN YOU breathe? Perhaps. But few women can—or do. Oh, yes I know you think you do or you wouldn't be alive, but wait until you learn to really breathe with every bit of the lungs given you for the purpose, and you'll feel as if you had only been half alive all the time you have been half-breathing.

Naturally, all successful singers and actresses know how to breathe, and one of the reasons that some are not truly successful is because they do not know how to breathe.

Proper breathing is the first exercise you must learn. It is the second step toward beauty, as cleanliness is the first.

Start to breathe the minute you open your eyes in the morning, having slept over the resolve to be beautiful. Jump out of bed, slip on a good warm robe, stick your tootsies into warm slippers, stand in front of an open window and BREATHE.

Empty your lungs of all that sleepy air. Clear the cobwebs out of your brain. Set the blood racing through your body. I tell you, proper breathing completely makes one over, mentally and physically. It gives new energy, strength, ambition, and it changes the viewpoint of life.

The first thing to learn in breathing is rhythm. The regularity of one, two, three, on the intake of air and the same regularity in the exhalation. Then you will set yourself in tune. And the great secret of life is to be in tune.

So! Stand erect like a soldier, hands on hips, shoulders square, head up, eyes to the front and BREATHE. Slowly and rhythmically fill every cell of your lungs, then, with unabated regularity, empty them. Rest a few counts and repeat. It may make you dizzy and your ears may feel like bursting. That's sure proof that you have not been in the habit of breathing. And if it does affect you this way, use judgment in regard to time and don't go too far at once.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth, plain and untarnished, [illegible] in the case [illegible] distin[illegible] series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest.

Consulting with Mother.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

WHENEVER a thing is bothering me particularly I like to get mother's viewpoint upon it. Mother is the most sensible woman I've ever known, and, moreover, she always knows what she thinks and tells it well.

"Mother," I said, "I'm wondering why all women detest housework so. They are always grumbling."

Mother smiled.

"It isn't entirely the woman's fault," said mother unexpectedly.

I stared. Now mother is always loyal to women, but she clearly sees a fault and admits it always and I was a little surprised. For the life of me I couldn't see her viewpoint. I insist that women inject into their work certain elements of discontent and therefore take nothing else from it.

"There's a side of the situation [illegible]n," said mother fairly, "that most [illegible] [illegible]. It's [illegible] too, and [illegible] down to [illegible]."

"Yes?" I encouraged.

Mother's kindly eyes twinkled.

"It's the attitude of the man."

"[illegible]" [illegible] she [illegible] when he [illegible] wearing [illegible] work and very sorry that she [illegible] it. Isn't that so?"

"That isn't the [illegible] I mean," explained mother gently. "Men, Peter, began the despising."

"Great Scott!" I exclaimed feebly, for the viewpoint was new.

"From time immemorial, Peter," said mother, "men have smiled and turned up consciously superior noses at the work of women. We've heard so frequently that housekeeping doesn't take any gray matter that, of course, we've begun to believe it. We've heard so frequently, too, that it's an inferior and negligible form of the world's labor that we've grown resentful because all this inferior labor was put upon our shoulders. You'll hear a reflex of that attitude from the tiniest boy on. Didn't I hear a little fellow yesterday blurt to his companion, 'Aw, what do women wants vote for? They don't know how to no nuthin but cook!'

"Men with their scornful smugness have robbed housework of all its dignity and the result was inevitable. Women echo it. You'll always hear a faint note of contempt in the man's careless, 'Oh, that's woman's work!' particularly if that work be in the home. The only sort of woman's work he honestly respects is when she deliberately encroaches upon his own line, and, [illegible] proves her calibre [illegible] [illegible]ards."

"[illegible] right, mother. And, naturally, if men sneer women will begin to believe that the work isn't worth the doing. That's what you mean, isn't it?"

"Exactly," said mother. "And it isn't true. The work is tremendously worth the doing. Why, Peter, to make a home happy and bring up the children of the world to be useful citizens is the biggest job there is. The finest by-product of this sweep of feminism, to my thinking, is that men are waking up to the fact that there's another job or two in the world besides their own. And, as men wake up, women follow. They always do.

"Watch the attitude of the business woman, Peter. She's comparatively new in the game and inclined to be a little superior with her sister who stays at home. It's imitation, Peter, of the male notion that the home-keeping woman hasn't brains enough to do anything else. A girl who hammers a typewriter every day in an utterly mechanical way smiles with sweet superiority at the girl who's merely helping her mother at home. The home-helper, I think, has the bigger job of the two. It's more unselfish and she's not so well paid.

"By and by, Peter, when the millennium comes men and women will comprehend that they have separate and equal functions and respect each other's work. Then we'll have scientific housekeeping and happy women."

I have a guilty sense that mother's right.

Features for Exclusive Menus

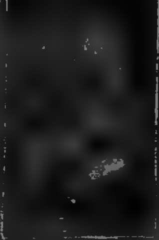
Chef of the Hotel Plaza, New York.

VELOUTINE OF PHEASANT WILHEMINE.



CUT and roast slightly 18 chestnuts; take off the skin and put them in a pan, cover with chicken stock, three stalks of celery, one bouquet garni and let boil slowly. Clean two pheasants, put them in a pan with sliced carrots, onions, a little salt pork and thyme; let them take some color; then put them with the chestnuts and cook together.

Take off the breast of one of the pheasants and put it aside, pound the rest together with the chestnuts, pass through a fine sieve, adding chicken consomme. When ready to serve, mix a liaison of cream, butter, and yolks of eggs well beaten.

Cut the supreme in small lozenges, carrots the same to be used as a garnishing.

CORN-FED CHICKEN SAUTE HOTELIERE.

Cut up and saute in butter; when cooked take off the pan, put a little chopped shallots and red wine, add some veal stock, let reduce, and finish with a piece of fresh butter.

In the mean time have ready Julienne of ham (the lean part), fresh mushrooms and cepes sautees Provencale.

Arrange the chicken on a platter, pour the sauce over, then pour the ragout Provencale over all, and sprinkle with a little chopped fine herbs.

STRAWBERRIES CZARINE.

Pick one pound fresh strawberries, put them in a bowl with four ounces of powdered sugar, two small glasses of old port wine, same quantity of Curacao, and one pinch of powdered cinnamon. Keep on ice, and before serving cover the strawberries with vanilla mousse.

Sleep and Sunlit Air Cure for "Hollow" Eyes

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg

IF YOU were told that you possess two soft, elderdown beds, smaller than pigeon eggs, you might smile. If you were then told that these beds of roses are in your head, what would you say?

Furthermore, lying comfortably in those downy beds are your two most precious possessions. The twin cushions are your eye sockets; their proud occupants are your optical organs. In brief, the eye-cups in your head rest on bedding of the fluffiest fat. Your visual sensory apparatus lies in a feather bed of [illegible] jelly.

Your eyes, in all their perfection, with all their fire, with all of their capacity for teaching you of the external world, would be of little aid to you without the protective muscles and pads of adipose tissue which surround them.

This flesh beneath, above and on the inner and outer side of the eyeball allows the eyes to move [illegible], supports them [illegible] on an even keel, and does away in [illegible] that "hollow-eyed," sunken [illegible] appearance.

Whenever you liken the [illegible] one to a skull, you will discover that it is the withdrawal of the eyeball into the eye-cup or socket which presents such an uncanny resemblance.

What is it which produces this wan, emaciated, senile idea? It is the loss of fat—the adipose pillows and bedding—around and beneath the eye. No hearty, strong or well-nourished person can ever look like a death's head. Why? Simply because the buxom masses of corpulent tissue keeps their eyes in a normal, good-looking position.

What "Hollowness" Is

There is nothing which mars the symmetry and beauty of the features more than the loss of fat about the eyes, and their recession deep into the eye-cups. Yet any loss of weight from tuberculosis, cancer, fevers, or wasting ailments of any sort may show themselves first in a "hollowness around the eyes."

Next to these current scourges, excesses in work, play and loss of sleep are offending sources of sunken eyes. It needs no alert observer to tell when another person has kept late hours or passed a sleepless vigil the night before.

Moreover, it is not only those maladies that destroy rotundity or [illegible] loss of flesh which are to be blamed for wasted eye pads. Fatigue and physical shortcomings are also surpassed by mental disturbances. Worry, hysteria, envy, lack of food and a host of lesser irritations will give rise to the dugout eye.

A frightened look is often imitated by actors and others by causing their eyeballs to shrink into their sockets. This impression may be obtained by darkening the area just outside of and around the eyes.

Black rings under the eyes and dark hollows in the same spot are all part and parcel of this same disorder. After a midnight revel, men and women may have that shelled-out look the following day. Dark rings and dusky looking circles about the optical neighborhood all really come from nature's call upon the reserve heat of the body.

Much Rest Needed

Since loss of sleep means loss of heat, and this waste must be compensated by the reserve fat, one of the first places drained is the eye socket. The nerves and muscles of the eyes have worked beyond union hours. Besides, they have been kept active during the very intervals they usually sleep.

In conclusion it may be well to understand that deposits of tiny, black discolorations in the skin do occur. These are, except in the case of bleeding [illegible] the eyes to be [illegible], very rare. A "black eye" is a hemorrhage in the soft tissue of the eye. A true coal-black stain at this place is far from usual. Headache powders and tablets, hair dyes, diseases of the blood-making tissues and the "near-kidney" organs, these and many other afflictions of the human economy do cause an [illegible] beneath the eyes.

The treatment is, of course, to find the cause and then to remove it. Those measures which cause an abundance of fat to be stored up in the body, good victuals, much rest, and lots of sunlit air, all guard against "black eyes."

Answers to Health Questions

D. H.—No matter how slow and deep I breathe, I never feel air entering my windpipe. Can I be helped?

There is nothing wrong with you. No one can feel his lungs taking in air, feel his stomach digesting food, or feel his brain thinking. If you felt any of these things you would then be sick.

* * *

W. T.—Is bicarbonate of [illegible] harmful? I take a teaspoonful of it every morning.

It is inadvisable to take anything that is not food and drink too often. It will be better for you to discover some fruit or other food to take the place of this alkali.

Try apples, figs, grapefruit, dates, prunes, oranges, peaches and any fruit that you can obtain. Take one sort at night and another in the morning.

* * *

MRS. H.—Can anything be done for red veins on the nose?

Yes; have your stomach looked after. Digestive troubles due to [illegible] spice and everything [illegible] responsible.

Daddy's Good Night Story

By GEORGE HENRY SMITH

JUDGE BEAR awoke from his snooze one afternoon when he [illegible] a squeaky voice talking.

"Be careful, please!" said the voice. Looking up Judge Bear saw Mr. Spider walking across his web.

"Are you talking to me?" asked the Judge.

"I am," replied Mr. Spider. "I took a long time to spin my web and I don't want it broken."

"I will try to be careful," said Judge Bear.

"Yes," replied Mr. Spider, "and when the web is done it is the strongest thing in the world for its weight."

"Is it stronger than the bridge over Honeysuckle creek?" asked the Judge.

"It is for its weight. You see how fine it is and yet it holds me. When a fly comes along it catches him and holds him."

"Suppose something heavy comes along, doesn't it tear your web all to pieces?" asked the big fellow.

"That is an interesting point," said Mr. Spider. "When I see a Mister Bumble Bee, who may sting me, or Mr. Grasshopper who may tear my web with his jumpy legs, I destroy my web and make another."

"It must take a lot of patience," said Judge Bear.

"Indeed it does," replied Mr. Spider, as he came down his elevator and sat by Judge Bear. "I am the most patient of living things."

"It means good luck when a spider spins a web in front of you," said Judge Bear, as he started off.

"Good luck to you, then," said Mr. Spider as he started up in his private elevator.

Hard Enough.

"I am told that he has a hard name."
"Yes. He is Mr. Stone."

Preparing for the Summer.

"Where is Miss Summergirl?"
"She has gone to Florida for her spring training."

Difficulties.

"What is meant by 'conservation'?" asked Mrs. Wijjit.

"Oh, it is a scheme to preserve the forests," replied Wijjit.

"What nonsense! They may preserve the leaves and twigs, but they can't even pickle the trees."

Where It Can Fail.

Cohen—Nutting succeeds like success.
Isaacs—Vot's to matter mit a failure?

Gobang—My word is law in my family.
Okerdok—Then you must be a sort of animated legal library.

RFALLY SERIOUS IN HIS WAR ON HANGING

Robert Bickerdike Expects to Have Plenty of Support for His Bill.

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 4.—Robert Bickerdike, member for the St. Lawrence Division of Montreal, expects to move the second reading of his bill to abolish capital punishment next Thursday. On that occasion Mr. Bickerdike will explain to the House his reason for the introduction of this measure.

"I am prepared," he said this morning in conversation, "to give the House fifty instances in good old England, where men condemned to death and hanged were afterwards found to be innocent.

"The Bickerdikes are all fairly strong on this question," he continued with a smile. "My people came from the town of York, and one of our ancestors was a martyr. He was hanged, drawn and quartered. It was not, as might have been expected from a Yorkshireman of those days, for horse stealing; it was strangely enough because he refused to turn Protestant."

HIGHER CRITICISM HAS GOOD RESULTS

was another phase of the critical movement, and this study has provided a new source of authority for religion.

"The statement, 'I believe this or that because the Bible says so,' is no longer an unassailable argument or reason," said Dr. Symonds. "This study has revealed to us that the strongest reasons must be reasons that spring from the inner man. Instead of an orthodoxy depending upon the authority of the Scriptures, we must substitute that which is the product of the spirit of God." This new position, the preacher claimed, was also a "positive and constructive outcome of the criticism of the nineteenth century."

"A positive result of the critical movement is a genuine and a larger tolerance. Nor do I think it is by any accident that the movement for church unity has grown so swiftly and so strongly in these recent years."

JUST ONE APPLICATION AND THE HAIRS VANISH

(Helps to Beauty)

Here is a very simple and effective way to banish objectionable hairs or fuzz: Mix into a stiff paste enough powdered delatone and water to cover the undesirable hairs, apply and after about 2 or 3 minutes remove the paste wash the skin and every trace of hair will have vanished. This method is quite harmless and leaves the skin soft and spotless. Be sure, however, to get the delatone in an original package, otherwise it may not be of the desired strength and purity.

Alive Under an Avalanche.

Human beings occasionally live through incredibly long imprisonments after their dwellings have been overwhelmed by avalanches. On March 19, 1755, avalanches buried the village of Bergemoletto, in the Italian Alps, and on April 25 three women were dug out alive from a stable in which they had been immured for thirty-seven days in the dark beneath the mass of snow which lay forty-two feet higher than the roof. With them had been buried a little boy, six goats, a donkey and some hens.

The child, the donkey and the fowls soon died, but the goats helped the women to survive, their milk supplementing the thirty or forty cakes and the pocketful of chestnuts upon which they depended for food. Hope of finding the women alive had been abandoned when far in April the brother of one had a dream in which she appealed to him for rescue.

The weather then at last made excavation possible, and the women were restored to the world and presently to health.—Chicago News.

Dew as Drinking Water.

The English administration at Gibraltar, where water is very scarce, collects dew by the following very simple method: A large pit is dug in the earth and covered with dry wood or straw, which in turn is covered either with earth or with sheet iron. The straw or wood serves as a heat insulator and effectually prevents the conduction of heat from the ground to the layer of earth or the sheet iron above. Consequently this earth or iron cools after sunset much more rapidly than the ground, so that its temperature soon falls below the dew point of the surrounding air; hence dew is formed upon the iron or the layer of earth in very large quantities. The water thus obtained is drained off into reservoirs and after clarification is used for drinking.—Scientific American.

Sheep as Land Cleaners.

In discussing the value of sheep on a country place their service as land cleaners should not be ignored. They like pasture grasses, but they seem to like weeds and bushes even better for browse. They will often clean up an old field in a year or two, so that what was a tangle of unsightly weeds and shrubs will appear a smooth shaven lawn. Angoras are simply wonders at this sort of thing, but the common, everyday sheep of the ordinary breed will do mighty good work if you confine her to her job and put in enough of her. Five years ago one small pasture of mine was a veritable chaparral of thorn bushes and solidago. I set the ewes in it, and today it's as pretty a bit of sward as there is on the ranch—bushless and weedless and thick turfed.—Country Life in America.

Soon Tired of His Books.

The 7,000 volumes of chronicles and travels from which Gibbon distilled the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" were purchased by Beckford after the writer's death. "I bought it," said the author of "Vathek," "to have something to read when I passed through Lausanne." There were few rarities in the collection, but most of the authors were in the best obtainable editions and in perfect condition. The fastidious Gibbon was incapable of behaving disrespectfully to a book. For six weeks Beckford reveled in his purchase and read himself nearly blind. He soon tired of his books, however, and presented the whole collection to a German physician named Schell. The recipient showed his appreciation of the treasure by promptly selling it.

Straining For a Throne.

Each department of France has its royalist, nominated by the Duc d'Orleans, who is in close touch with the chief of his party's headquarters in Paris, the Comte de Laregle. The latter has under his orders a press bureau, known as the correspondence nationale, from which all the French royalist papers take their cue. Yet another division of the royalist bureau politique in Paris is the so-called Librairie Nationale, which furthers the monarchial cause by circulating hundreds of thousands of pictures, fly leaves and popular pamphlets. Finally there is a service of special messengers, answering to the king's messengers of the English Foreign Office. To these men is intrusted the duty of conveying the commands and instructions of the pretender from his home at Wood Norton to the royalist leaders in France. Owing to the activity of the cabinet noir of the French postoffice, a detective service which makes no secret of examining all royalist correspondence, it is impossible to confide any letters of importance to the mail.

Circus Bareback Riders.

The career of a bareback rider with a circus is limited to about ten years. It is short not so much because these men and women lose their agility, but because they lose their nerve. The tension and application are so strained and marked that it is only a few riders who are able to perform their startling feats more than a decade. Recklessness and daring die when youth ripens into age, and as all riders, as a rule, marry young added responsibilities, coupled with a lively sense of danger, cause them to retire or else seek some less strenuous life. These riders are well paid, the majority of them commanding from $150 to $250 a week.

Just Where She Was.

Mr. Oldboy walked into the library the other evening and beheld his only daughter comfortably ensconced on the knees of young Squire Beeswing. He looked his surprise, and the young couple blushed.

The older man was the first to recover his presence of mind and smiled sardonically.

"I see you've nearly finished your race for a husband, Marianne," he observed.

"I don't understand you, papa."

"Well, my dear, I notice you're on the last lap."

Chinese Music.

The notes of Chinese music read, like the written characters, from right to left, and the intervals of the scale are different from those of the scale adopted by the nations of the west. The music is not very harmonious and sounds meaningless and jangling to western ears, but it has a pretty musical cadence that makes it attractive and interesting in spite of its frequent discords.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for 2nd Extension of 'New Breakwater, Port Arthur Harbour, Ont.,'" will be received at this office until 4 p.m., on Monday, March 2nd, 1914, for the construction of an Extension to what is known as the "New Breakwater" in the Harbour of Port Arthur, Thunder Bay and Rainy River District, Ont.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of the District Engineers, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., Port Arthur, Ont., Post-Office, Montreal, and Post-Office, Quebec.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to five per cent (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS.
Secretary.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

PROVED HIS WORDS.

Still, the Philosopher Didn't Like It When Death Called.

A certain philosopher was in the habit of saying whenever he heard that an old friend had passed away: "Ah, well, death comes to us all! It is no new thing. It is what we must expect. Pass me the butter, my dear. Yes, death comes to all, and my friend's time had come."

Now, Death overheard these philosophical remarks at different times, and one day he showed himself to the philosopher.

"I am Death," said he simply.

"Go away!" said the man in a panic. "I am not ready for you."

"Yes, but it is one of your favorite truisms that Death comes to all, and I am but proving your words."

"Go away! You are dreadful!"

"No more dreadful than I always am. But why have you changed so? You have never feared the death that has come to your friends. I never heard you sigh when I carried off your old companions. You have always said, 'It is the way of all flesh.' Shall I make an exception in favor of your flesh?"

"Yes, for I am not ready."

"But I am. Your time has come. Do not repine. Your friends will go on buttering their toast. They will take it as philosophically as you have taken every other death."

And the philosopher and Death departed on a long journey together.—Charles Battell Loomis.

His Last Words.

Where History Began.

Describing a visit to the tombs of the Egyptian kings, Albert Bigelow Paine in Harper's Weekly writes of "the splendid tomb of Amenophis II., of the eighteenth dynasty, who lived in the glory of Egypt, [illegible] B. C., a warrior who slew seven Syrian chiefs with his own hand. The top of the sarcophagus is removed and is replaced by heavy plate glass. Just over the sleeper's face there is a tiny electric globe, and I believe one could never tire of standing there and looking at that quiet visage, darkened by age, but beautiful in its dignity, unmoved, undisturbed by the storm and stress of the fretful years. How long he has been asleep! The Israelites were still in bondage when he fell into that quiet doze, and for their exodus a century or two later he did not care. Hector and Achilles and Paris and the rest had not yet battled on the plains of Troy."

Moral Suasion and a Strap.

"She seems to have abandoned her moral suasion ideas relative to the training of children."

"She has."

"How did it happen?"

"Well, I was largely instrumental in bringing about the change. You see, she has no children of her own, and I grew weary of her constant preaching and theorizing, so I loaned her our Willie."

"Loaned her your boy?"

"Precisely. She was to have him a week on her solemn promise to confine herself entirely to moral suasion."

"Did she keep her promise?"

"She did, but at the expiration of the week she came to me with tears in her eyes and pleaded for permission to whale him just once."—New York Mail.

A Choice.

"Well," said the head of the family, "it's come to a choice between two things."

"And what is that?" asked his wife.

"Whether we'll continue to eat meat or continue to maintain an automobile."—Detroit Free Press.

Where Cost Tells.

"He says it is costing him four times as much to live as it did two years ago."

"But the price of necessities has only doubled."

"Yes, but he is leading a double life."—Life.

Pat's Retort.

A one-legged Welsh orator named Jones was pretty successful in bantering an Irishman, when the latter asked him

"How did you come to lose your leg?"

"Well," said Jones, "on examining my pedigree and looking up my descent I found there was some Irish blood in me and, becoming convinced that it was settled in the left leg, I had it cut off at once."

"By the powers," said Pat, "it would have been a very good thing if it had only settled in your head."

Paper Belting.

Paper machine belting, protected on the edges by leather, is being tried out in England with a measure of success. One advantage claimed for it is that it does not stretch.

A Blazing Fire.

On a cold, frosty night every one likes to see a blazing fire, but this generally means heavy coal bills. A good plan is to place a quantity of chalk at the back of each grate, in equal proportion to the coals. This throws out a terrific heat and lasts quite a long time. It always pays in the end to buy good coal, for not only does it make a clearer fire, but it leaves fewer ashes. A handful of common salt thrown into the fire occasionally makes a cheerful blaze and lessens the consumption of coal.

Enthusiasm.

Anxious Messenger—Say, fireman, there's another fire broken out up the street. New Recruit—All right, old chap; keep her going till we've finished this one.—Punch.

Not Always.

"Does your wife always insist on talking to you when you are shaving?"

"No. Sometimes I shave when she is away from home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Any Headache Cured, Tired Systems Re-toned

When You're Dull, Tired, Restless Day and Night Something is Wrong in the Stomach

A Prominent Publishing Man Says the Quickest Cure is Dr. Hamilton's Pills

Headaches never come to those who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and this fact is vouched for by the Assistant Manager of the Poultry Success Magazine, of Springfield, O., Mr. J. H. Callander, who writes: "No better medicine than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. We use them regularly and know of marvelous cures that resisted everything else. They cleanse the whole system, act as tonic on the blood, enliven digestion, help the stomach, and make you feel strong and well. For headaches, indigestion and stomach disorders I am confident that the one prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Being composed of natural vegetable remedies, Dr. Hamilton's Pills possess great power, yet they are harmless. They aid all organs connected with the stomach, liver, and bowels. In consequence, food is properly digested, the blood is pure and nourishing, the body is kept strong and resists disease, all druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 for $1.00, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

CITY AND DISTRICT

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

On Suspended Sentence

Darcy Dunlop, charged with theft of two silver spoons from the Montgomery House, was found guilty by Magistrate Dumble yesterday morning and allowed out on suspended sentence. G. N. Gordon defended the accused.

Meeting Called Off

A telegram received late yesterday stated that Mr. Fred Bancroft was unable to come to Peterborough. As a result the meeting in the Trades and Labor Hall, announced for last night was postponed.

Local Lady Curlers Win

At the lady curlers' bonspiel held on the St. Lawrence rink, Montreal, word has been received that Mrs. Ritchie's rink won 18—12. Those curling with Mrs. Ritchie were:—Mesdames E. L. Goodwill, W. H. Hill and A. J. Grant.

A Misleading Legal Report

An esteemed evening contemporary of last night, commenting on the case of young Dunlop, found guilty of stealing spoons from the Montgomery House, says: G. N. Gordon defended the accused, who claimed he was drunk." Now this statement may not be libellous, but it might be taken as misleading. The learned counsel referred to does not dally with intoxicants.

St. George's A.Y.P.A.

Yesterday St. George's A.Y.P.A. had a literary treat when Mr. W. F. Johnston addressed them on the subject of "Telepathy." This lecture was most instructive and interesting. A good vocal and instrumental program was rendered and light refreshments were served.

Lindsay's Snow Ploughing.

Lindsay, like Peterborough, seems to encounter trouble with their snowplough contracts. The contractors there, however, put up an excuse for neglecting their work. They informed the Council that it was dangerous to drive a horse on the pavements. This "kick" however, was met by making them plough a path for pedestrians on the street.

A Good Exhibit of Art.

The art exhibition now in progress at Central School is attracting much favourable attention. The Elson Art Company, of Boston, Mass., loaned for the purpose, over 200 pictures. The collection contains best reproductions of the masterpieces of art of different countries and periods. The pictures will be on exhibition from 4 to 6 p.m., and from 7 to 10 p.m.

License Commissioner Here.

Mr. Williams, License Inspector for East Peterborough, whose home is at Havelock, was in the city yesterday morning en route to Lakefield where he went at noon. In reply to a question put by a Times representative, Mr. Williams said that local option is rigidly observed in his home town. He said that, of course, some liquor is brought to Havelock by travellers, but none sold.

A Notable List of Cures.

In other columns of this issue may be seen the advertisement of the Sanol remedies, which are amongst the best produced for the public by public process. This efficient company has its headquarters in Winnipeg. It's very satisfactory products include cures for the deadly diabetes, blood salt for indigestion, a kidney trouble remedy and also a blood purifier. Weak humanity may find some interesting details in following up this advertisement.

National Hotel Contracts Let.

Two more contracts for the National Hotel improvements have been awarded. Messrs. Alexander & Miller get the electric wiring, etc. Mr. George Brenton, corner of Hunter and Queen streets, gets the plumbing. It is understood that Mr. Brenton will do the heating work by day labor. Messrs. Ephgrave & Barrett, who got the masonry and carpenter work expects eight tons of steel structural work to arrive next week. The foundation work is practically completed.

Hope Co. Siding Completed

Yesterday Mr. John Mervin, the Hunter street butcher got a substantial cheque from the C.P.R. At 2 a.m. yesterday the last spike was driven in the C.P.R. spur line, leading to the Henry Hope Co. factory through Mr. Mervin's property. There has been a lot of unfounded gossip prevalent to the effect that Mr. Mervin attempted to hold up the railway on this siding. However the cheque received yesterday demonstrates that Mr. Mervin whilst having a conservative view of business exigencies in the price charged showed that he had a patriotic idea of the City's requirements.

That Murderer's (?) Confession

Yesterday a Times representative held a conversation with Mr. Percy Golds, a son of Albion, living on Dublin street. Mr. Golds claims to have known the Englishman who gave his name as Alfred Kimberly, when confessing to a murder he alleges to have committed in England, for the past three years. Mr. Golds said Kimberly has shown him letters from his (Kimberly's) wife. The purport of such letters is not for publication. Mr. Golds said Kimberly told him he had not committed the murder he, Kimberly, told the police he committed, but knows the man who did it. It would seem that Kimberly's acknowledgment of guilt is only an excuse to get a free passage to England.

Former Local Boy Did Well

North Battleford, Sask., Optomist, of Jan. 21st, referring to a former Peterborough boy, a son of Mr. R. W. Munro, says, in part, regarding a hockey match there: "The second tussle between the Merchants and the C.N.R. was even a faster exhibition than the first one. Somewhat of a surprise was sprung on the spectators as the play progressed. In weight the teams were about even, and they went at it "hammer and tongs" style. When the final whistle blew the Merchants were in the lead by 5—2. The only accident which occurred during the evening was when Munro got a crack over the head, and had to be carried off the ice. Play was resumed about ten minutes afterwards and the injured man gave an excellent account of himself. Munro was probably the fastest man on the ice.

CHILDREN HATE OIL, CALOMEL AND PILLS

"California Syrup of Figs" best for tender stomach, liver, bowels—tastes delicious.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realise what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

THE LEADERS OF MINSTRELSY

Coming to The Grand Opera House Next Monday.

Primrose and Dockstader, the reunited veteran minstrel stars will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House, Monday night, Feb. 9.

Messrs. Primrose and Dockstader have surrounded themselves with an all-prominent organization of burnt cork celebrities, many of whom have appeared at the head of their own companies in other seasons.

After a separation which has existed for nearly ten years, during which time Mr. Dockstader headed his own company, and Mr. Primrose did likewise, one year ago they got together and decided to consolidate their respective organizations. The plan was to present minstrelsy, as it was created by Billy Whitlock, seventy years ago, plus magnificent scenery, gorgeous costumes and modern embellishments. The success of the undertaking was instantaneous. Practically every city in the country was visited and everywhere the reunited stars were greeted by capacity audiences. Messrs. Primrose and Dockstader appear in the acts that they have made famous from ocean to ocean, and they are said to be as graceful and funny as in yester years. Custom not only fails to stale their infinite variety, but long familiarity and professional intercourse with the amusement loving public serve to grip tighter each succeeding year the chords of sympathetic approval which binds them in popular esteem.

A street parade will be given on the day of the performance headed by Messrs. Primrose and Dockstader themselves. The tour is under the personal direction of Earl Burgess.

The Western Ontario Motor Club decided to place 1,000 signs in Western Ontario.

SANOL ANTI DIABETES
for Deadly Diabetes

SANOL ANTI-DIABETES is the new Cure for this terrible affliction. It is perfectly harmless to the organic system, and contains no poisonous or injurious ingredients whatever. It never fails to effect a Cure in every case in whatever form it may present itself, provided the patient has not reached the very stages of the malady when the vital organs have become irreparably damaged.

SANOL ANTI-DIABETES has cured many people: some of the cases had reached the stage where the patient was suffering from open sores, and in other respects the disease was well advanced. We have letters from just such sufferers as these. We are able to refer inquiries to large numbers of such cases, including people whose names are widely known and who occupy prominent positions. Doctors have tried and have proven the scientific value and worth of this remedy, in fact many of the Medical Profession in Canada have been permanently cured of Diabetes through this wonderful treatment.

TO PREVENT CAR SHORTAGE

Car Efficiency Best Promoted by Co-Operation.

The Board of Trade News of Toronto recently printed an article on how best to prevent car shortage, and among other things points out that car efficiency can best be attained in the following manner:

1. By the satisfactory handling of traffic with the least number of cars, which can best be accomplished by the ordering of cars of suitable dimensions and loading same to their full capacity.

As an illustration: Assuming a tonnage of 3,000,000 tons is loaded and transported in 250,000 cars, or twelve tons per car. An increase in the load to 15 tons would result in the same traffic being transported in 200,000 cars, thereby freeing 50,000 cars for other service. A firm shipping 5 cars of 12 tons each per day for 300 working days, by increasing the average load per car to 15 tons, move the same volume of traffic in 120 instead of 150 cars.

2. Handling the business in the smallest number of car days. The railway should transport the freight quickly, supplemented by prompt loading and unloading of cars by their patrons. The full free time permitted by the Car Service Rules should not be taken advantage of unless actually necessary.

3. Shippers and consignees should ascertain whether their facilities are amply sufficient to ensure the prompt handling of this freight, and the ordering of cars for loading and unloading should be so arranged as to lose no time in handling when placed.

The News believes that the public as well as the railways have duties to perform to prevent a shortage of cars.

COL. HUGHES SAVED HOUSE FROM ENNUI; REPLIES TO CRITICS

Sir Ian Hamilton's Visit to Niagara Falls Hurts Sensitive Liberals

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 5.—Col. Sam Hughes saved the House of Commons to-day from a severe attack of ennui. A series of characteristic answers to some questions asked by Edmund Proulx of Prescott was the only bright spot in the exceedingly dull day in the house. Mr. Proulx first wanted to know if the Minister of Militia accompanied Sir Ian Hamilton to the political picnic of Ward 4 Conservative Association of Toronto, also whether Col. Hughes wore a badge inscribed "Borden and the Empire" and finally if the Minister and Sir Ian were photographed with the officers of the Association.

To the first question Col. Hughes replied "General Ian Hamilton was the guest of the Minister of Militia one day last July at Queenston Heights, inspecting it from a military viewpoint. There were a great many picnics going on."

Were Beautiful Badge.

To the query as to whether General Hamilton wore a badge Col. Sam Hughes answered. "The Minister did wear a beautiful badge showing a stalwart young Canadian standing on Canadian soil, grasping across the Atlantic the hand of John Bull standing on British soil. The Minister does not remember whether the very beautiful inscription 'Borden and the Empire' was on the badge."

To the last question the Minister retorted, "The Minister and Sir Ian were photographed some score of times that day with alot of very fine people. Doubtless many of them apparently very intelligent, belonged to the Conservative Association."

As to Officers' Expenses.

Mr. Proulx also wanted a lot of information from Col. Hughes in regard to his trip with a staff of officers to Europe last summer. Col. Hughes satisfied his thirst for information. He informed Mr. Proulx that there were 21 officers including four sent over for courses in instruction in the party. There was one private secretary, one assistant private secretary and two orderlies. None of the officers' wives and daughters were in any official capacity and the expenses of the ladies who accompanied the party were borne "by their own husbands and fathers."

The total cost of the trip including the four special officers was $24,262, and the officers were given $3,984 for pay and rank, and for subsistence and other allowances $10 a day. All others given actual expenses for subsistence only and no pay other than their permanent pay.

Where They Visited.

Col. Hughes stated that all the officers visited the manoeuvres of the French army along the frontier beside visited the Swiss manoeuvres between France and Germany. They der the direction of General Hamilton and General Ellison for three days. They spent a week at the British divisional manoeuvres and another week at the British army manoeuvres. The Minister personally visited the German divisional manoeuvres and the Belgian and Dutch military centres. Col. Hughes added that a full report was being prepared under the direction of Col. Cruikshank and when completed would be placed in the hands of the members.

A New Phase of the Marriage Question

The Northwest Review, the of the Roman Catholic church in Manitoba, says:

"Only a short time ago a Catholic young lady wrote to her pastor for advice regarding an offer of marriage made her by a Protestant young man, and in reply the good priest wrote wrote: "And he who demands such a sacrifice from you does not pledge himself to be your husband forever. His religion authorizes him to forsake you in order to contract ties which Jesus Christ declares to be adulterous. And this husband who lends himself to you, while you give yourself to him, is either without religion, and then he leaves you without security for his fidelity, or he is attached to his false worship, and in that case he will soon repent of having married you." This phase of the marriage question we commend to the consideration of our readers."

SEYMOUR POWER

Government to Purchase the Whole Seymour System

Special to The Times.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—It is stated here, in what may be regarded as excellent authority, that the Government is arranging to purchase the entire Seymour system. This covers a very large portion of Central and Eastern Ontario, from Oshawa to Napanee on the lake front and north as far as Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Burleigh, Peterborough and Campbellford.

Power will be supplied at first cost by the Government, the municipalities to furnish their own distributing plants.

Cut Off a Quarter's Worth

"How much do you charge for cutting off a dog's tail?" said a small boy to Dr. Robinson, the well-known veterinary recently, exhibiting a quarter in one hand and leading a lean canine with the other.

"The operation customarily costs a dollar, but I will do it for you for 50 cents," replied the gentleman addressed.

The boy looked at the coin in his hand disappointedly for a moment, but his face brightened. He stuck out his hand which contained the coin and said:

"That's all I've got; cut off a quarter's worth."

FUND FOR BOY SCOUTS

Appeal for $1,250,000 Endorsed by Duke of Connaught.

London, Feb. 5.—A national appeal for an endowment fund of $1,250,000 for the Boy Scouts was launched by general Sir Robert Baden-Powell, in support of which he publishes a letter from the Duke of Connaught.

The Governor-General's letter says that the Boy Scout movement has stood the test of five years trial successfully, and all opinions seem to agree that in proper hands it will achieve a great national wark.

ROMAN ARCHBISHOP OF QUEBEC PROCEEDED AGAINST IN COURTS

Hebert Case Becomes Still More Interesting--Court Asked to Compel Prelate to Set Aside His Own Decree

Montreal, Feb 5.—A petition was asked for from Mr. Justice Greenshields, in Chambers to enable George V. Cousins, attorney for Mrs. Herbert, and Arnold Wainwright, counsel, to proceed against His Grace, Archbishop Bruchesi and Eugene Hebert, as co-defendants, to the end that the marriage contracted between Marie Emma Clouatre (Mrs. Hebert), and Eugene Hebert, be delcared legal, and that the decree in contradiction of this, issued by His Grace, on November 12, 1909, be declared null and void, and be expunged from the records of the Church.

The petition states that His Grace, either in his ecclesiastical capacity or otherwise, was, and is still, without right or authority to declare null and void, or to pronounce on the validity of a marriage, and that he acted "illegally and without competence, jurisdiction or right in issuing, publishing or recording the said decree," and also, "that the decree is libellous and defamatory in nature."

Also, it is asserted that the decree issued by His Grace, has caused the petitioner's marriage to be regarded by her co-religionists, and by the public generally, as illegal, and "has caused her great injury, loss and prejudice."

The petition contains 26 clauses and the petitionary clause itself and outlines in detail the whole course of the case from the issuance of the decree by His Grace, throughout the intervening actions until the last judgment of January 30, 1914, when Justices Tellier, Delorimer and Greenshields, sitting in the Court of Review, annulled and set aside the judgment of Mr. Justice Charbonneau, on the ground that after the desistment filed by Eugene Hebert on November 17, 1911, there was nothing on which Mr. Justice Charbonneau could adjudicate.

As the case stands the petitioner is duly authorized by Mr. Justice Greenshields to institute an action against His Grace Paul Bruchesi and Eugene Hebert.

If, or when action is taken, it will be but the third time an Archbishop has been so proceeded against, it is said, the other cases being that brought by one Guibord to compel an Archbishop to allow the burial of a body in consecrated ground, and that brought by Canada Revue to protect against the banning of some of their publications.

Mr. Cousins has not announced when or how the next step will be taken.

THE PUBLIC MUST PACK ITS PARCELS VERY CAREFULLY

Regulations Issued by the Postal Authorities To-day for New System

Toronto, Feb. 5.—In the regulations for the parcel post, which will be commenced on February 10th, the Postmaster-General has given specific suggestions how the various articles should be packed for safe transit through the mails.

For instance, in regard to eggs it is recommended that a papier mache wooden, or other box of a rigid material with a tight-fitting lid be used —that each egg be wrapped separately in newspaper or other protecting material and fill up the vacant spaces carefully. In addition the parcel is to be clearly marked as containing eggs.

Specific regulations are given as to the method in which liquids, oils, or fatty substances must be packed in order to be sent through the mails. Strong wooden or heavy cardboard blocks or tubes are necessary, with a cushion or some absorbent material to take up the liquid in case the container should break. Further every precaution must be taken to make the block or tube watertight. Manufacturers or dealers who intend to send such articles in quantities, are recommended to submit a sample package to the officials, so that the conditions are seen to be observed.

Will Use Mail Bags.

Apparently the intention of the department is to use the ordinary mail bags for the parcels post and not to introduce baskets, which are used to a great extent in England.

SIR GEO. ROSS WORSE SIR JAMES TO RECEIVE

Toronto, Feb. 5.—After a disturbed night and a morning marked by restlessness, Sir George, who is now lying seriously ill in the General Hospital, was reported at noon to-day as worse than he has been for some days. "His condition is more serious than it was yesterday," was the way Dr. Wm. Goldie, the physician in charge, described it. This does not mean, however, that he is in immediate danger, simply that progress towards recovery has ceased, probably only temporarily.

His old time rival on the other side of the House, Sir James Whitney, is getting better rapidly and steadily. He slept well, and made a good breakfast, though the doctors still restrict him to light foods. He was sitting up in bed most of the morning and seemed very bright and cheerful. Outside visitors are not yet admitted, but Dr. Clarke, superintendent of the General Hospital, said that unless something untoward happens in the meantime, that will be possible in two or three days' time. Dr. Clarke could not predict with certainty when Sir James would be removed from the hospital, but it will probably be some days hence.

—Hon. Wm. Pugsley has been ordered south by his physician and is not likely to be in the House this session.

A CURIOUS DREAM.

Warning That Came to a Granddaughter of Sir Walter Scott.

An instance in which a dream was useful in preventing an impending catastrophe is recorded of a daughter of Mrs. Rutherford at Ederton, the granddaughter of Sir Walter Scott. This lady dreamed more than once that her mother had been murdered by a black servant. She was so much upset by this that she returned home, and, to her great astonishment and not a little to her dismay, she met on entering the house the very black servant she had met in her dream. He had been engaged in her absence. She prevailed upon a gentleman to watch in an adjoining room during the following night.

About 3 o'clock in the morning the gentleman heard footsteps on the stairs, came out and met the servant carrying some coals. Being questioned as to where he was going, he answered confusedly that he was going to mend the mistress' fire, which at 3 o'clock in the morning in the middle of summer was evidently impossible. On further investigation a strong knife was found hidden in the coals. The lady escaped, but the man was subsequently hanged for murder, and before his execution he confessed that he intended to assassinate Mrs. Rutherford.—London Standard.

An Ancient Rain Gauge.

The credit of inventing the rain gauge has always been given to Castelli, a contemporary of Galileo, who made one in 1639, but the director of the Korean meteorological observatory, Dr. Y. Wada, has shown that it is due to a Korean king. The latter, King Sejo, in the year 1442 caused an instrument of bronze to be constructed to measure the rain, and it is set out in the historical records of Korea that this was a vase fifteen inches deep and seven inches in diameter, placed upon a pillar. An example of this was placed in the observatory, and each time the rain fell the officials were instructed to measure the height and to make it known to the king. Other instruments were distributed to the provinces and cantons, and the results of the observations made were sent to court.—Knowledge.

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press. It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs." "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance." "She whipped him upon her return." "He kissed her back." "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation." "She seated herself upon his entering." "We thought she sat down upon her being asked." "She fainted upon his departure."

England's Uncrowned King.

Of the long line of kings which have ruled England since the days of William the Conqueror, nearly 900 years ago, there has been only one uncrowned king. King Edward V., the boy king, who met an untoward fate in the Tower of London in 1483, is the only monarch who reigned without receiving the church's blessing or the formal homage of his subjects. Some people include Lady Jane Grey among England's monarchs. If this doubtful claim is allowed England's only uncrowned queen ranks with Edward V. and deprives him of one distinction.—London Tit-Bits.

A Triumph of Imagination.

Tallandier told me that a great archbishop of his acquaintance in Paris had set himself to make an exact design of the imaginary abbey of Theleme, minutely described by Rabelais, and told him that if such an edifice were to be erected it would be the most perfect building every known.—Conway's Autobiography.

Cover the Whole Field

An advertisement in The Times is guaranteed to reach regularly 98 per cent. of the homes of Peterborough. Sworn statement furnished of proof of this if required.

Business men are also reminded that The Times is the only paper that reaches those served by the Rural Mail Routes on the day of issue. As a result it gets the call.

Thus advertisers will therefore know that by using The Times for their business announcements, they not only reach the WHOLE population of this city of 21,000 people, but a large proportion of those residing within a twenty-mile radius of the city. These are the people who have the money to pay for what they want.

THEY LIKE SHARP FOOD.

Lions Gobble Up Porcupines, and Camels Eat Spiny Cactus.

A note in the London Field draws attention to lions that eat porcupines. It would appear that an animal protected by such powerful spines should be quite secure from attack. Yet, if we may trust the account given, it appears to be a habit on the part of the lion and not an isolated occurrence. Captain Dumbell had been told by a native hunter that the lion was in the habit of eating porcupines. And this has been confirmed by two English sportsmen. V. Kirby, for example, has taken a porcupine's head from the stomach of a lioness. Others relate that it is not uncommon to find lions with porcupine quills sticking all over their noses, faces and paws. It seems to argue some indifference to pain on the part of the lion, as well as a fancy for porcupine's flesh.

Compare this with the case of the camel, which a distinguished traveler describes as calmly chewing up a very spiny plant with the blood dripping from its mouth! The cattle in some of the arid parts of America, again, browse on that spiny cactus. And in some parts of the English coast the horses browse on the prickly sea holly, while the donkey's partiality for thistles is well known. Incidentally such cases seem to show that spines in nature are not such efficient protectors as some have supposed.

Sleight of Hand Poisoning.

A very curious item in toxicological lore I chanced to light upon, wrote George Augustus Sala in one of his letters, may be called the feat of poisoning by sleight of hand. You were jealous of a lady, and you wished to kill her. Well, you asked her to lunch, and you caused a very nice peach to be served at dessert. You cut the fruit with a golden knife, one side of the blade of which was endued with a deadly poison. You presented the poisoned half of the peach to the lady, who ate it with much relish and then dropped down dead. The wholesome half you ate yourself and laughed in your sleeve and went on slicing more peaches for the ladies of whom you were jealous till you were found out and broken on the wheel. Aye, there's the rub! What high old times we might have, to be sure, but for that plaguy contingency of being found out!

Her Drawing Powers.

Pat and his little brown mare were familiar sights to the people of the town of Garry. The mare was lean, blind and lame, but by dint of much coaxing Pat kept her to the harness. One day while leading her to water he had to pass a corner where a crowd of would be sports had congregated. Thinking to have some amusement at Pat's expense, one called out:

"Hello there, Pat! I'm looking for the real goods. How much is that mare of yours able to draw?"

"Begorra," said Pat, "I can't say exactly, but she seems to be able to drawh the attenshun of ivery fool in town."—Housekeeper.

Sleep and Dreams.

The brain is more active while engaged in dreaming than when not thus engaged. The only perfect sleep is that which is dreamless. The moment the sleeper begins to dream he begins to work, and the more vivid and protracted the dream the more intense, naturally, becomes the work. It is possible that at no time during the waking hours of life is the brain so active as it is in the strange business of dreaming.

A Treasure of a Cook.

Mr. Newedd—What! No cook stove in the house? I gave you money to buy one. Mrs. Newedd—Yes, my love, but I found I hadn't enough to buy a stove and hire a cook, too, so I let the stove go. But the cook is here, and she's a treasure. She has just gone out to get us some crackers and cheese.

His Idea For Theorist.

Rivulets and the Rivers.

All are to be men of genius in their degree—rivulets or rivers, it does not matter, so that the souls be clear and pure, not dead walls, encompassing dead heaps of things known and numbered, but running waters in the sweet wilderness of things unnumbered and unknown, conscious only of the living banks, on which they partly refresh and partly reflect the flowers, and so pass on.—Ruskin's "The Stones of Venice."

Abrupt.

Judge Stevens had a slight hesitation in his speech, but that affliction did not prevent his using long words. One morning his dog Snip got into a fight with another dog. Tapping him with his cane, Judge Stevens exclaimed, "D-d-dis-con-t-t-tin-ue."—Success Magazine.

Amended.

"Jones is a physical wreck."

"Why, he used to have a strong constitution."

"Yes, but the doctors have amended it several times."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal, whereas it was its continuance which should have cost us its value.—Hannah More.

Warned.

Engaged Man—Love me! Why, she actually counts the kisses I give her! Cynical Friend—That's bad. She may keep it up after your marriage.—Boston Transcript.

One of These Crazy Questions.

"Well, great guns, Jones! I see you're wearing glasses. What for?"

"For a sprained knee, you darned fool! What do you suppose?"—Toledo Blade.

Another Trouble.

The trouble with most men is that they want to be at bat all the time and are never willing to do any fielding.—Chicago Record Herald.

THE NEW COATS ARE SHORT— MANY FLARE SLIGHTLY AT THE BOTTOM

With the increasing popularity of the draped and be-ruffled hip the short coat naturally follows. Many of them terminate at the waist, others come slightly below. It is quite a fad to have one of these smart little coats made up in velvet, brocaded or plain, to wear with a light weight frock. Often the color is in decided contrast with the gown. Trimmings are usually of fur. Number 8133-8002 shows one of these new little coats with a three tiered skirt. Dark blue velours de laine is used with a vest of brocade. A smart feature of the coat is the rolled collar and the sleeve which is in raglan effect without a seam at the center back. The tunics on the skirt are pointed in back.

This suit may be copied in size 36 with 2½ yards of 42-inch material for the coat and 4⅞ yards of 42-inch material for the skirt.

The second frock illustrated is a coat dress for a girl of from 14 to 18. Dark blue serge is the material with a belt and collar of white ratine. It is one of these novel, youthful designs so charming for the school-girl.

It will require 4⅝ yards of 36-inch material to copy this frock in size 16.

Number 8133—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 8002—sizes 22 to 32.
Number 8161—sizes 14 to 18.

Each pattern 15 cents.

WORMS! YES. THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

THE CONSERVATION OF HEALTH

The State of New Hampshire recently observed its first "health day," and innovation that had its origin in the troughtful mind of the Governor. In his proclamation requesting the people to participate he expressed the hope that "it would serve to focus thought and stimulate activity along the lines of the prevention and restriction of disease, and to concentrate action that will result in greater efficiency of purpose."

While the Governor's ambition to elevate the health standard of his State is creditable to him, there is grave doubt as to whether the setting aside of one day in a year for public discussion will have the desired effect. There are in New Hampshire, and every other state, as there is also in Ontario, thousands of persons who do not require education in the matter of health conservation, and there are a great many who are so lacking that nothing is to be gained through the influence of this annual observance. To keep this class under control laws are necessary, with a penalty for infractions, and their rigid enforcement is the only way to impart sanitary education to those needing it.

The experiment, however, will do no harm, and will attract little attention outside of New Hampshiee.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All Who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders.

In his home at Waldergrove, N.S., no one is better known than Sergt. Major Cross, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bully beef, hard tack and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a stage that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

SHACKLETON AND POLAR EXPLORATION

Sir Ernest Shackleton is a brave man, and a Britisher from top to toe. The object of is projected expedition to the ntarctic is the restoration to ritain of the laurels which in ecent years have been wrested rom her by Peary's attainment of the North Pole and Amundsen's discovery of the South Pole. With this object he proposes to cr8oss the Antarctic continent from Weddell Sea to Ross Sea, taking the South Pole en route. This will be the longest polar journey ever undertaken, a distance of 1700 miles over the ice, at a high altitude, and for the first 700 miles over an absolutely unexplored region.

Sir Ernest Shackleton hopes to accomplian the journey in the record time of five months. He will start from Buenos Ayres next October, and will also send out a ship from New Zealand to be at the Ross Sea to take up the trans-Antarctic party. Every endeavor is being made to make the expedition the most perfect and fit that has yet been organized, and food and equipment will be carried to permit of a two years' stay in the terrible ice region. Both of his ships will be oil-driven, and another novel feature of the expedition will be a couple of sledges driven by areo engines and aero propellors. An aeroplane with "clipped wings" is to be taken to "taxi" over the ice.

The "Imperial Trans-Antarctic Expedition," as it is to be known, has been made possible by a gift from a donor whose name is without at present. The inimum cost is put at £50,000; but Sir Ernest is making no public appeal. He hopes for support, however, from the Overseas Dominions.

IS NOT GAMBLING.

Editor Morning Times.

THAT TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I read in your paper a few days ago that the city is asked to contribute $10,000 towards a local tuberculosis hospital. In the abstract, this would seem possibly worth consideration as that splendid organization the Peterborough Health Association offers to contribute a similar sum. Mr. Editor, is there not a string on this proposal? Is there not a colored gent in the woodpile? Is there not one individual back of the movement who seeks at the city's expense to grind an axe of his own?

ONLOOKER.

THE HESSIANS

They Were Good Soldiers, and Some Became Good Americans.

There is a popular belief among some people that the Hessian mercenaries brought here by the British government to fight the Americans remained here after the war was over and that their descendants constitute a considerable element of the Pennsylvania Germans of today. Comparatively few remained here after the war, because the British government was under contract to return such as escaped the casualties of the war after it was over. The few that remained made good citizens, as they made the very best soldiers against the Americans, and whenever it was practical to do so they were put in the most responsible places by the British commanders.

The intense hatred at one time against the so called Hessian soldiers, some of which still lingers with the present generation, is very unjust, because they did not volunteer to fight against the Americans, but they were forced into the British service by the impecunious German princes who sold them to the British like so many slaves. The Hessian soldiers would sometimes take a notion to desert, and they invariably found refuge among some of the German colonists. A considerable number of them were left behind from time to time on marches, on account of sickness or wounds. These always found a ready welcome among German settlers; few of them ever found the way back to their native land.—"Pennsylvania Germans," by William Beidelman

A Bold Court Fool.

"Never mind that," answered Jonas, "I do. So please listen to me in your turn."

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A QUAINT OLD TAVERN

The Old Cheshire Cheese, in the Heart of London.

SERVES A FAMOUS PUDDING.

A Noble Pastry It Is, and It Was Sampled by Such Men as Gladstone, Dickens, Thackeray, Tennyson, Trollope and Whistler.

Nearly all Americans when they go to London make it a point to visit that quaint old tavern in the heart of the newspaper and printing business, the Old Cheshire Cheese, to partake of its famous pudding.

It is the Londoner's delight when he gets back to Fleet street to make a rush for the pudding, and it is almost the last thing he eats before leaving it. Travelers in the Sahara have seen mirages of that pudding, and during the Boer war the men shut up in Ladysmith and Mafeking dreamed of it at regular intervals.

Precisely at 1 o'clock p. m. Tom conveys the pudding from the first to the main floor. It is a big pudding, and the price of it is just 2 shillings—that is to say, a feed of it is 2 shillings, as much as you please, as many shares as you ask for, cut and come again, all for 48 cents of American coin. Cheap, aye, and, oh, how good it is! It is worth crossing the Atlantic to get a sniff of it, and the aroma lingers in the memory for many a day.

Big? The dimensions are Falstaffian. It is a round earthen vessel something more than two dozen inches deep, with a diameter of about eighteen inches. A noble pastry, my masters!

When it is placed upon the service table an elliptical white crust meets the hungry gaze. Tom and his myrmidons take their places in front facing the host, who, knife and spoon in hand, poses with gentle dignity and benignant mien. It is a moment of solemn thought when every man hopes that his portion will be larger than his friend's and that he will be blessed with an abundance of gravy. But they ought from years of acquaintance with the host to understand that his hand is as steady as his judgment is impartial.

No more and nothing better for one than for another. He waves his weapons, and the first onslaught is made. The room is full of a delicious steam bearing with it the concentrated essences of ambrosial substances. The guests sniff it up and murmur choice blessings on the cook, the original inventor, the house and the host. It is a time when men feel good, one toward the other.

One smell of that pudding makes the whole world kin. This famous pudding, which has tickled the palates of thousands, is thus compounded:

A crust of flour, water and suet.
Beefsteak.
Sheep's kidneys.
Larks.
Mushrooms (freshly gathered)
Oysters.
Stock.
Pepper and salt.

But it is the boiling that does it. For at least twelve hours this heaven sent pudding is kept slowly simmering in an immense copper specially constructed for the purpose. It must not boil quickly, but the same temperature be kept up the whole period. The steak assumes a juicy tenderness; the larks—not sparrows, as some malignant spirit has suggested, although sparrow pudding is not to be despised—are seethed to the bone, and you can chew up each little songster without an effort; the kidneys are soft and mushy and offer no resistance to the digestive organs, and the oysters, despite their lengthened cooking, are not leathery. The amalgamation and assimilation of the variety of constituents are perfect; the result is bliss.

There is a story told of one eminent litterateur who had seven helpings of the pudding and still yearned for more, and there is another remarkable narrative of four men who ordered a pudding of the regulation size and finished it among them.

J. Pierpont Morgan praised the pudding, and Theodore Roosevelt was delighted with it. Lord Beaconsfield bestowed his approbation thereon, and Gladstone thought it far superior to his famous "three courses." Dickens, Thackeray, Meredith, Swinburne, Tennyson, Trollope, Whistler, Leighton, Sala, Phil May—all sorts of the best of men of their day have fed upon the pudding, and it no doubt helped to inspire their work.

Apparently any cook can fashion it, mix it, fix it, boil it. Let any cook try it. Lots of cooks have tried it, but the results have not been satisfactory. There was a man who once ran the Old Cheshire Cheese, and in his day the pudding first achieved its great fame. When he sold the old hostelry and took a house in the financial district he announced that the same pudding—the same in every respect—would be served every Saturday.

Many of the Cheese's old patrons came around to celebrate. There was the size, but the aroma was wanting; there were the identical materials, but the flavor was not in them. It was not the same, not a bit of it. There was something missing. It may have been the shades of the departed great ones of a bygone time. And so it is that today the famous dish of the Old Cheshire Cheese tastes as of old, and its devotees cannot be seduced by any designing invitation based upon "just as good" simply because there is nothing just as good.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Thoughts are mightier than the strength of hand.—Sophocles.

A MODERN PRESS

The Times To Be Greatly Improved in the Near Future

A Web Perfecting Press to Be Installed, the Circulation Having Outgrown Present Facilities—A Machine That Will Turn Out 5,000 Copies of the Paper Per Hour Has Been Purchased.

The rapid increase in the circulation of The Times during the past few months has made it necessary for the proprietor to instal a modern web newspaper press, which will print and deliver 5,000 folded papers per hour. This machine will be installed in about three weeks, and it is expected will be in commission by the end of the present month.

A night telegraphic service has been arranged, which will be in operation at an early date. It is our purpose to make The Times as near equal to the Toronto morning daily newspapers as possible, so that it will be in demand everywhere throughout Central and Eastern Ontario.

The Times will continue its policy of fearlessly advocating Equal Rights with special privileges to no church or creed. The time has arrived, we believe, when the press of Canada should take a decided stand against anything that savors of priestly or ministerial interference in political matters. Protestants are willing that their Roman Catholic fellow citizens should have every privileges that they themselves enjoy—but no more. The Roman Catholic hierarchy should and must be content with this, if harmony is to prevail.

The new equipment above referred to will add strength to our arm, and will enable us to battle more effectively for the principles above referred to. In the meantime we ask our friends to assist us by speaking a good word for the paper whenever they can, and thus increase our circulation. We want to add a couple of thousand new names to our list during the coming spring.

GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES.

Chautauqua Seems to Have a Wide Variety of Meanings.

United States geological survey records present these notes on geographical names and their origin and meaning:

Brooklyn; part of New York city; a corruption of the Dutch name Breuckelen, from a village in the province of Utrecht, Holland. The name signifies "broken up land" or "marshy land."

Burleson; county and village in Johnson county, Tex., named for Edward Burleson, Indian fighter, and vice president of the republic of Texas under President Houston, 1841.

Chautauqua; county in Kansas; county, lake and town in same county in New York. An Indian word which has been the subject of much controversy. Webster says it is a corruption of a word which means "foggy place." Another derivation gives the meaning as "bag tied in the middle," referring to the shape of the lake. It is also said to mean "place where a child was washed away." Dr Peter Wilson, an educated Seneca, says it is literally "where the fish was taken out." Other meanings given are "place of easy death" and "place where one was lost."

Chicago; city and river in Illinois. The Ojibwa Indian form, che-kag-ong, signifies "wild onion place," from a root form implying a "bad smell."

FOLLIES OF SCIENCE.

Seven Problems That Have So Far Baffled Man's Mighty Brain.

The history of science has seven problems that men in all ages more or less have tried to solve, but which have finally been given up by all. Today they are called follies.

The usual list comprises the following: First, squaring the circle; second, duplication of the cube; third, trisection of an angle; fourth, perpetual motion; fifth, transmutation of metals; sixth, fixation of mercury; seventh, elixir of life. Some lists put the philosopher's stone for the last three and then add astrology and magic to make the seven.

To the unlearned it would seem possible to draw a square which shall be exactly equal in area to a given circle, which is the first problem in the list, but we are told by the highest authorities that it is impossible.

Soft Tulle Replacing Neck Frill

By Madge Marvel

THERE is an apparent effort to soften all outlines in the newest dresses. This is shown in the necks of the collarless gowns, whether for afternoon or evening wear. Instead of the little standing frill, which has been so much worn, some of the best modistes are using tulle in white or pale pink, drawn in prim, soft folds just inside the bodice, and coming up against the neck where it is most becoming. Quite a few of the new blouses have this arrangement instead of the frill.

There is a splash of strong color being introduced into the new clothes. One sees a good deal of bright red, called tango, formerly tomato. There is also a vivid purple which is most useful in adding distinction to the pale yellow and soft tans which are so well liked for the demi-toilettes.

The Paris evening gowns that are just reaching here and are being shown for the spring season are startlingly low cut at the back. And as so many of them are devoid of sleeves, or have the merest apologies for sleeves, they are viewed with disfavor, not unmixed with alarm, by the conservatives.

High Collars in Vogue.

As the season advances and the real winter begins, though we may talk of spring clothes we have still to keep warm, and the waistcoat is being much worn. It is tremendously attractive with the abbreviated suit coat and the bright brocades of which it is fashioned give an air of newness to the costume which may have been worn for some time without it.

One of the most delightful dress accessories is the new veil which is gathered into a narrow band of black velvet and fastened around the throat. This keeps the veil in place and also adds the whitening charm which the black velvet neckband always gives.

One sees more and more high starched stiff linen collars being worn with the morning suits on the street. They are entirely uncompromising, and have either a narrow four-in-hand tie or a bow of black satin.

I met a young woman in the shopping district yesterday wearing one of these collars, and she looked very chic. Perhaps it was because the severity suited her style, for she was of the athletic type, the exact opposite of the droopy maid of the moment. Her suit was of gray tweed, the skirt short and scant and lapped in front with the edges rounded. The coat was in Russian blouse style with a belt of black worn low on the hips. The collar was high and had flaring open points, and the bow was of black velvet. With this she wore a hat which was a compromise between an English bowler and a sailor banded with skunk fur. Hung on an inch-wide ribbon about her neck was a single eyeglass through which she examined various goods, and tucked under her arm was an ebony walking stick with an amber knob.

Remnants Attract Shoppers.

By the way, I am told by several exclusive shopkeepers that they are selling more and more canes for women each day, and the favorite style is the plain stick with the crook, the brother of the one carried by men, only a bit lighter.

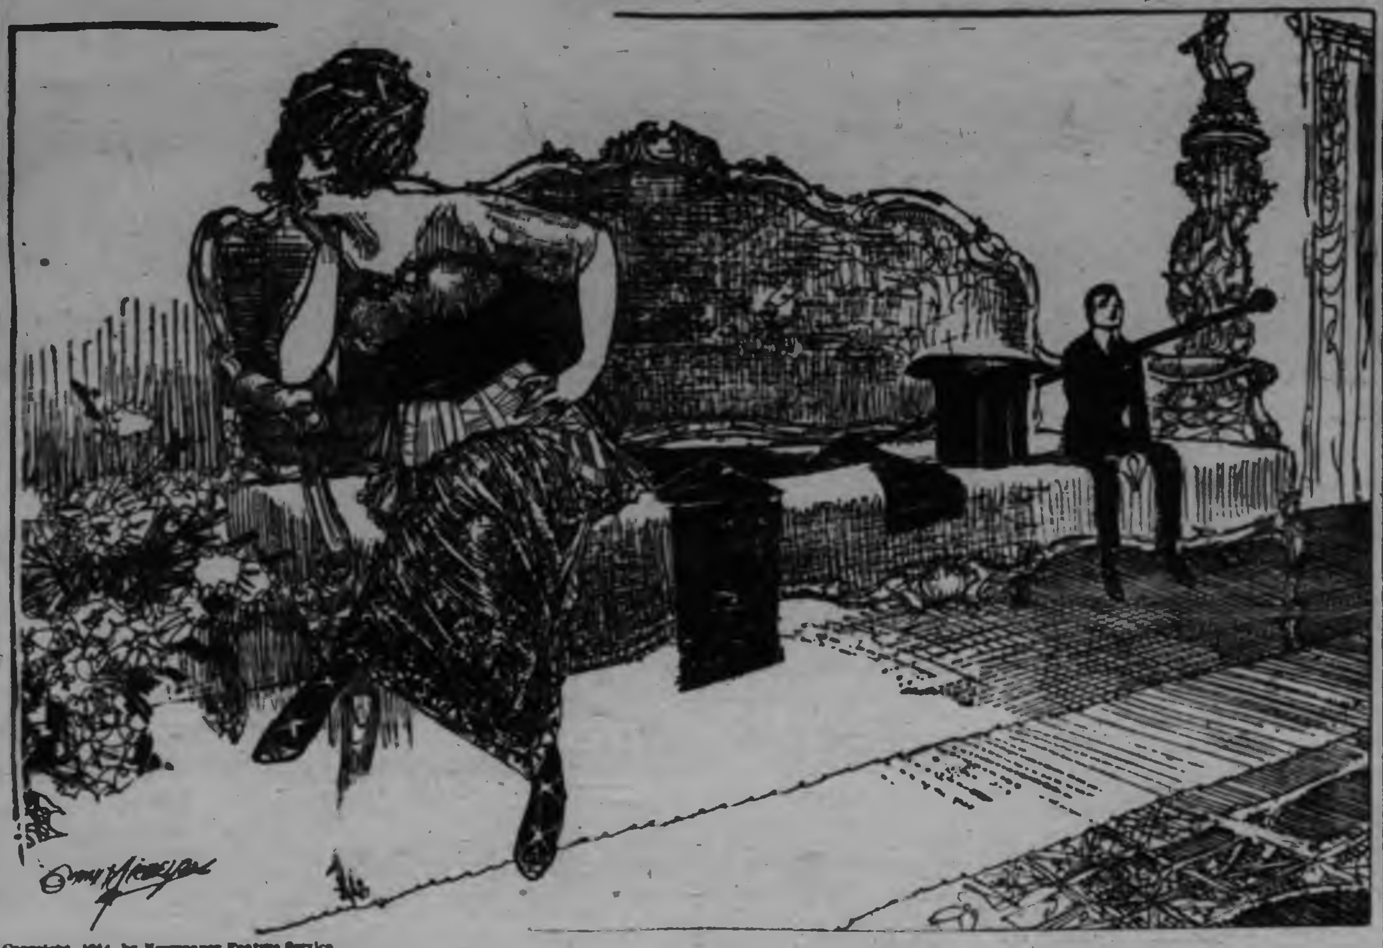
The wise women are scurrying about the shops looking for the treasures on the remnant counters. They buy not because things are cheap, but because they have taken inventory of their wardrobes and know exactly where a few dollars may be expended with greatest results.

There are wonderful bits of lace, motifs and edges that will add tremendously to the summer gowns and that are to be had for a tithe of their first price. Also there are staple goods in staple colors that are offered at little more than half their former price.

The silk counters are furnishing bargains in linings, and now and then it is possible to pick up a few yards of brocade which will make the most lovely evening coats for the proverbial "song of price."

The wise bargain hunter is the envy of her sex. She is the true economist. But—she is a rare species.

THAT "DISTANT" FEELING :: :: By Michelson



Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service.

A SOFA isn't very long if you measure it with a foot rule. But there are times when it may seem to stretch out like a long journey—when you may be at one end of it and see the other end receding like a horizon.

It's an awful feeling, even if your bluff doesn't show it. And you feel yourself shrinking and shrinking in size until you seem about the dimensions of a real nice French poodle.

All this time SHE is life size. Oh, yes! She is all right. She is very sure of that. She was sure of that when she said YES just a month ago, but there are some things——

Well, little Mr. Man has got to grow bigger or that sofa will never shrink again. To remove that distant feeling is the biggest job he ever undertook. In this instance it is one calling for IMMEDIATE attention.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth, plain and unvarnished, about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with growing interest.

Tact or Nerve?

XVI

LEONA DALRYMPLE.

"WHERE did you cash the check, Mary?" I inquired, referring to the weekly household check. "The reason I ask is that I was in the National late this afternoon and Drake said you hadn't been in."

Mary looked up from her book.

"At the Waverly Trust Co.," she said absently.

"At the Waverly Trust!" I exclaimed, in pardonable surprise. "Why, Mary, we haven't a cent in there and the check was on our own bank, hardly a stone's throw away."

"Peter!" exclaimed Mary, petulantly. "You do fuss about the silliest things. What difference does it make where a check is cashed so long as you get the money?"

"Didn't the teller fuss?"

"About what?"

I sighed. I have discovered that you may just as well try to teach women how to throw a baseball as to teach them banking. Sanscrit is equally intelligible.

"Why," I demanded hopelessly, "did you go to the Waverly when the National was scarcely a block away?"

"Well," said Mary, "I was late. It was two minutes of three. And you know very well, Peter, it would certainly take up those two minutes to get to the National. It would, wouldn't it?"

"It might," I admitted.

"And once before," confided Mary, "I phoned and asked them to stay open until I could get down there, and, although they were very nice about it, they said they couldn't."

"Hum!" said I. "Tell me what the teller at the Waverly said."

"Why," said Mary brightly, "he was most polite. I merely handed him the check you gave me and he said, smiling, 'Have you an account here, Mrs. Hunt?' 'Dear me, no!' I exclaimed. 'Peter insists upon banking at the National.'"

"My lord!" I exclaimed with some fervor.

"Next, after looking carefully all over the check to see if it was quite right, I suppose, he said he'd prefer, if I didn't mind, to have mother's name on it because she has an account there. Silly, wasn't it, Peter? I just made up my mind not to humor him. And, besides, a man in the line waiting behind me laughed and I knew very well he thought the teller was absurd to suggest such a thing. I told him it was utterly impossible, for mother was very busy at the whist club and I didn't like to bother her over such a trivial matter. I don't see why we must put all your salary in the bank anyway, Peter, and draw on it through checks. It's mighty inconvenient."

"It's an automatic system of bookkeeping, Mary," I explained pleasantly, "and besides, I've discovered from deadly experience that we're ever so much more economical. But don't try stunts like you did today."

"Why shouldn't the teller at the Waverly cash the check anyway?"

"Great Scott, Mary," I exclaimed. "Can't you see for yourself that it's most irregular? We bank at the National and that's scarcely a block away."

"Well," said Mary airily, "he was obliging about it, anyway."

"He certainly was—mighty civil. Only a woman could swing such a thing. He would have refused a man."

"I've always told you women had more tact than men," said Mary with some superiority.

"Tact!" I exploded, with a smile, "that, Mary, was just plain, unadulterated nerve, that sweet, delicious, charming, feminine sort of nerve that bowls a man over and takes away his breath completely."

I want some one to tell me how we are ever going to have absolute sex equality when a woman can get things over that a man can't.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Many Medics Brand Rheumatism as Fiction

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

Copyright, 1914, by L. K. Hirshberg

DR. L. K. HIRSHBERG

DO YOU know what "rheumatism" is? Oh, you do, do you? Suppose you are told that "rheumatism" is a figment, a fiction, a shadow, a mare's nest, a Fata Morgana?

You smile. You are skeptical. You, mayhap, think this a jest. Yet, it may be solemnly, seriously sworn by bell, book and candle that there is no such entity, scientific or pathological, as rheumatism. "Rheumatism" and "uric acid" are apologetic white lies, mockeries, claptraps and stalking horses of doctors, near-doctors and domestics who do not take the trouble to drink deeply of the Pierian spring of knowledge.

What passes for "rheumatism" in the public judgment is a whole gamut of miasmas, which are symptoms, aches, pains and irritations of 10 Colsarian legions of disease. Tuberculosis hip troubles, infections of a scarlet fever nature, venereal joint maladies, the beginnings of locomotor ataxia, the pains of la grippe, tonsilitis, pneumonia, typhoid fever and gout, lead poisoning, flat foot, housemaid's knee, bruises, bumps and bone disorders are all mistaken by the snapshot doctor and ready-to-wear diagnoses as "rheumatism" and a "uric acid" disposition.

It is high time that the thoughtful part of the public, as well as that portion of the medical profession which the Carnegie educational board brought to book, came to their senses.

Once they admit the truth, to wit, that there is no human ailment known as "rheumatism," then many an unstudied affection, which has been carelessly thus dubbed, can be cured.

"Rheumatism" has for many years been a name for healers, herbists, patent medicine men and complacent Cappadocians to conjure with. If a man is swollen with pain, if he limps or has a flat foot, if he has kidney colic or stone in the bladder, if he has a rigid wrist or stiff arm, confidence in the wise healer's wisdom was at once established by the magic word "rheumatism."

Let us now be done with such hocus-pocus. Even the acute infections of childhood and youth which are due to microbic poisoning, even these, with their inflammatory joints and high fever of six or more weeks' duration, are [illegible].

Have done with this absurd and ancient name. Seek out the real, underlying trouble. Then, and then only, can it be removed.
